THE QUR'AN

A COMPLETE REVELATION

THE QUR'AN claims to be a complete revelation to mankind from the creator of the heavens and the earth.

Traditionalist Islam, while paying lip service to the Qur'an, is predicated chiefly upon other texts — the aḥādīth — and interpretations and schools of thought derived from the same, the result of which is an ossified and increasingly discredited cultural narrative.

SAM GERRANS is an English writer and independent thinker with backgrounds in languages, media, strategic communications, and technologies. He is driven by commitment to ultimate meaning and focused on authentic approaches to revelation and Realpolitik. Whereas most translations and expositions of the Qur'an assume Traditionalist Islam's conclusions, his principal work The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation is built upon a system of hermeneutics in which preference is given to definitions originating in the Qur'an itself and to values derived by processes of pan-textual analysis. Values for key terms thus demonstrated are enforced across the text and documented.

While The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation exposes unambiguous tensions between Traditionalist Islam and the book that religion claims as its foundational scripture, that result was not Gerrans' motivation for writing it. Sam Gerrans believes in God and accepts the veracity of the Qur'an. His identification of Traditionalist Islam's preoccupations as a usurping narrative is a function of his process of due diligence upon the contents of the Qur'an rather than his primary interest. The motivation driving The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation was to provide a textual corpus in the English language which could supply a legitimate formal basis for his principal objective which is described now in full in his book The God Protocol.

The God Protocol identifies that mechanism in the Qur'an by which miscreant ruling elites of the past were made accountable before God and applies the same principle to the worldwide ruling elite of today.

Acknowledgements

My first debt of gratitude is to God, the Subtle, the Aware: for His guidance; for this task and everything necessary for its fulfilment, and for my inability to be truly satisfied with anything other than its completion.

My next debt of gratitude is to my wife, Karina Gerrans. Her faith, kindness, and belief in this mission have never wavered for a moment, and her reflections, observations and questions have helped greatly.

Our daughter Edith also saw much less of Daddy in her early years than she should have due to my commitment to this project. I tell myself that one day she will understand why this was important, and that we can make up for lost time.

I gratefully acknowledge all those who made financial contributions to this project. They were seeking the pleasure of God, and I understand that, but the fact is that their donations and personal messages of support (all of which I read) helped sustain me during this project. The result is the new edition of The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation, publication of The God Protocol, and a substantially improved solution to the mysterious letters. None of this would have been possible without their support.

I wish to acknowledge Hakim Sahin for his kind assistance expunging minor errors from the final manuscripts.

And I wish particularly to thank Said Mirza. His generous support on all fronts as well as his personal friendship made a difficult path easier to walk.

807 NOTES & COMMENTARY

Preface

The Qur'an claims to be a complete revelation to mankind from the creator of the heavens and the earth. Within that framework, The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation has two principal objectives.

The first is to provide the technical and legal platform for my book The God Protocol. That work shows that the Qur'an repeatedly demonstrates a formal protocol of warning as the mechanism by which aberrant ruling elites are held to account before God. It catalogues how former messengers followed this protocol, as did Muḥammad himself. That protocol of warning was in each case the legal prerequisite — the switch, if you will — for the punishments of God thereafter to become binding upon a community resulting in its total destruction, absent a meaningful change of direction by the elites of those times.

The principal intended audience for both works is the ruling caste of our time, which comprises a small coterie of elites united in purpose to degrade, enslave, and then to eradicate most of those over whom they rule. Their policies over the last century or more have resulted in such debasement of the human stock that there can be no doubt that, left to their present course, they will be entirely successful in effecting a profitable genocide and a total and unending tyranny over those whom they leave alive to serve them.

Most historical implementations of the protocol I mention pertained to areas ruled by elites with limited geographical reach. The ensuing destructions were, likewise, local in nature. Today, as at no other time in history, the world comprises a single community with a single ruling elite. Thus, the application of the same protocol in our time has worldwide implications.

While potentially providing the detonator to the Eschaton is an unenviable task, the consequences of not doing so will be infinitely worse for all but the elites themselves.

Identification of the protocol is in no way dependent upon my translation, but it was necessary to clear away some of Traditionalist Islam's more unhelpful impositions upon the Qur'an before proceeding to the main task. A legal protocol is a matter of meeting certain requirements, beginning with the fact that persons served under a protocol must have full access to the legal foundation upon which that protocol rests, even if they choose not to acquaint themselves with its details. The legal foundation in this case is the text of the Qur'an. As the language of the present ruling elite is English, the Qur'an must be presented in English. To import the meanings of certain key words as the Traditionalist does from an extraneous literature would compromise the validity of the English text as the basis for the application of the protocol. Thus, a hermeneutic was developed which treats the Qur'anic text itself as the source of definitions for important key terms. Additionally, norms of due process require that documentation and annotations attend principal legal texts in order to ensure maximum transparency. The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation meets both these requirements.

The elites are most particular about the legal processes they use against the general population; they understand the principle of culpability: once one has been formally warned on the basis of a body of laws, he enters a fresh context legally, a context in which he is either newly culpable, or still culpable but in new way. But no one ever uses the same principles against the elites themselves. This denotes a lack of strategic awareness given that the elites' observance of legal conventions itself demonstrates that they recognise them as binding. Therefore, what is sauce for the goose may be sauce also for the gander.

The second principal objective behind The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation is to offer the Qur'anic text to a wider audience free of the impositions made upon it by what I call brand Islam. I am not on a crusade against the Traditionalist Muslim, but I am obliged to critique his claims and check his excesses in order to illustrate where and how they are at unambiguous variance with the book he claims as his foundational scripture. I accept that righteous Traditionalist Muslims exist, as I accept that righteous men exist in a number of religions. But since the Traditionalist's religion is the principal obstacle to meaningful access to the Qur'an I am bound to address it on that basis.

Background

TRADITIONALIST ISLAM

I was not predisposed to reject the Traditionalist's arguments for his religion, but nor did I have a pre-existing allegiance to them. I listened to them. I studied them. And then I rejected them.

Traditionalist Islam claims — and is typically supported tacitly in its claim by the Orientalist scholar and mainstream media — that the Qur'an may be fully understood only via the Traditionalist and his recourse to a vast later literature called the ḥadīth; it also maintains that, taken together, the Qur'an and the ḥadīth provide the foundation of what is called Islam; it further maintains that Islam is a religion (in the sense of prescribed dogma, rite and custom) and that by following the Traditionalist's presentation of that religion one aligns oneself with the core Qur'anic imperatives. I reject each one of these claims on the basis of the Qur'anic text.

I believe in God. I have analysed the Qur'an with great care, and have become convinced thereby that it is from God. And on the basis of the same analysis I reject Traditionalist Islam. I do so for many of the same reasons I reject Trinitarian Christianity and Rabbinic Judaism: I reject any religion founded on writings, opinions and events which post-date their respective revelations in which I find little general (to say nothing of exclusive) correspondence between the resultant dogmas and the revelations to which they lay claim. Like the Karaite Jew, I take the guidance I hold in my hands from God to be sufficient for the business of knowing how to obey God, and take responsibility for the exercise of my intelligence on that basis.

The present work not only demonstrates that a full and satisfactory understanding of the Qur'an is possible without ḥadīth — or any other interloping literature claiming canonical status for that matter — it shows the religion commonly known as Islam to have, at best, vestigial correspondence with the Qur'an, and no claim to a monopoly over it whatever.

I provide evidence throughout, marshalling Qur'anic, etymological, contextual and historical data, as well as comparing a number of established translations, which expose as spurious, specious and extraneous those assertions which the Traditionalist insinuates between the reader and the text — assertions made solely to lend credence to the Traditionalist's claim to find confirmation in the Qur'an for his religion when, in truth, his religion has its genesis elsewhere. I also draw the reader's attention to some of the many instances where a plain reading of the text militates against that cultural narrative which today is called Islam.

While the energy expended in addressing the Traditionalist's claims defines the tone and content of much of this work, my dominant interest is neither in brand Islam nor in those who espouse it; nor am I writing for the edification of academia, or even for those who participate in online Muslim forums which de-emphasise ḥadīth. I will be glad no matter who reads, reflects on, and benefits from what is presented here. My intended audience is the elites, as stated in the Preface.

The Traditionalist's claim is that his secondary (in fact, supplanting) literature explains the Qur'an. The truth is that his religion has been decided upon on the basis of the aforementioned literature — one entirely removed from the Qur'an — and that the Qur'an serves only as a wall at which he throws those extracts of this supplanting literature which form the sum and substance of his religion in the hopes that some of them will stick, which some of them seem to do if the reader accepts assertions on a generalised or piecemeal basis and puts his faith in authorities and cultural conventions.

A key feature of the Traditionalist's method is the arbitrary assignment of specialised values to ambiguous or general statements. He claims that such statements mean whatever he likes in order to achieve his predetermined ends, and the laity assumes he is right. Should one challenge the merits of his assertions, his motives are called into question, or he is accused of impiety or heresy.

The Traditionalist's intellectual process, if one can call it that, features such logical fallacies as the contention that since his preferred literature says that a particular word means x, the fact that his externally derived expectations of x are not met in the Qur'an constitutes proof that his preferred literature is necessary in order to understand the Qur'an.

This is the logic of children.

When I have questioned the Traditionalist's assumption that x necessarily has the value his extra-Qur'anic stories claim for it — especially given the context of a revelation he himself acknowledges as both consistent and complete — he has typically either flown into a rage or denied the premise of my point by reference to nebulous, superior knowledge held by wise specialists, one to which he himself has no access and about which he knows nothing.

I came to the conclusion that in order to understand the Qur'an, I would have to do the spadework myself.

In one sense, of course, the Traditionalist is right: his religion can only be understood by reference to this other literature; he is right to such an extent that one can remove the Qur'an entirely from the construct within which he operates to no measurable effect.

My position is not that the Traditionalist should not follow his religion — he can follow what he likes no matter how little sense it makes to me; it is that he should cease conflating his religion with the Qur'an and claiming monopoly rights over a book for which he demonstrably has so little use.

My thoughts on the ḥadīth literature, in a nutshell, are as follows:

- The Qur'an itself claims to be from God and complete. If this is true, there is no good reason to follow anything else. And if it is not true, there is no good reason to follow the Qur'an.
- The ḥadīth literature is, both by universal consent and by dint of the genre itself, hearsay. And hearsay has no place, to my mind at least, in the business of establishing the facts about God.
- Close to the root of what divides the two major sects of what is today called Islam lies conflict between their competing bodies of ḥadīth literature. If they cannot agree among themselves on what they accept, I see no reason why I should accept any of it.
- The so-called science of ḥadīth (that system by which a particular chain of narrators is established and assessed) is predicated on obvious foolishness and a sophistic method; there is no such thing as reliable hearsay. All hearsay is unreliable.
- The Qur'an says that God sent down the best ḥadīth (39:23). If that is the case, I can see no scenario in which one would look to ḥadīth other than that which is best.

The Traditionalist's proselytising efforts are an amalgam of two related deceits: the first is the common bait-and-switch method (using the Qur'an primarily as a means to shoehorn a religion entirely of his own contrivance into the mind), and the second is the conflation of the Qur'anic revelation with another literature. Such a presentation leverages revelation rather than rests upon it, and insinuates a cultural mythology into the space created by an individual's engagement with that revelation — a revelation over which he, the Traditionalist, then claims expert, exclusive and exhaustive knowledge.

The religion the Traditionalist is so attached to has an emotional appeal — especially for those tired of both the tyranny of moral relativism and the undeclared religion of fraudulent science (among which number I certainly count myself) — yet it is, when viewed dispassionately, a cultural construct and mythical narrative, one with little or no direct foundation in revelation.

I am a white northern European. If it is simply a matter of finding an old mythology as a bulwark against the advancing nihilism and utilitarianism of a scorched-earth cultural policy agreed upon by the current ruling elite, there are better traditions to choose from than what brand Islam has to offer, ones much closer to my own cultural heritage and racial memory.

The question, then, for me is not about electing to believe something I like in order to fight a rear-guard action against something I do not. It is about responding appropriately to a preserved revelation from the creator of the universe.

I disregard the Traditionalist's understanding of the Qur'an not only because I am highly sceptical of his preferred sources, but also because I am not much impressed with his results. Nor am I much impressed with the rest of what he has done. Of course there have been some generative thinkers within the cultures in which the Traditionalist has prevailed, but that fact does nothing to mitigate for me the dominant tendency towards intellectual osteoarthritis in all places where the Traditionalist gains the ascendency. Those vigorous boosts which cultures today called Islamic received in the past were due in large part to the influence of the Qur'an, and intellectual and cultural progress was made despite the Traditionalist and his stock of fictions, not because of them.

While many people are afraid of criticising the religion of Islam, I regard such concerns in a broader context. For me, brand Islam is just one among many streams of human energy being directed towards confluence and useful conflict by those who understand Realpolitik. If it were not required as an agenda item, Islam would not have been given its present form or imported into the West. I do not regard brand Islam as a cause, but almost entirely an effect. It is an effect like feminism, the cult of sexual license and perversion, the destruction of the family, the institution of dumbed-down education, mediocrity as the new excellence, the degeneration of cultural standards, or the promotion of distractions such as Hollywood and sports. If there is one thing of which I am completely sure as concerns the Traditionalist, it is that when it comes to the larger game, he is a pawn and not a player. And I have greater concerns than how one particular group of unthinking people allows itself to be manipulated given a world in which there are so many such groups of pawns that we are drowning in them. I am not looking to reform or influence Islam; but neither will I be intimidated out of using my mind by people who cannot or will not use theirs. The strategists who have given brand Islam some time on the playing field run a great number of projects, some of which seem contradictory, but enough of which have the extermination of the majority of the world population as a mid-term goal for a sensible man to consider it a credible threat. And if I do not fear such people or their plans more than I do God, the Traditionalist may rest assured that being individually killed by him and his intellectually mediocre co-religionist pawns is no more intimidating to me than is the prospect of being caught up in a planned mass cull at the hands of the highly organised, interlocking cabals of those extremely intelligent men who do control strategy.

In short, there is a line of men with murderous agendas which have me in their sights, as they do billions of others, and the Traditionalist, if he wants a piece of me, should join the end of it.

Much of the Traditionalist's difficulty with others like himself lies in the fact that interpretive efforts are assessed, in the final analysis, on perception of the authority of the personality behind them. When it comes right down to it, it is simply a question of who has the longest beard. And the question of who has the longest beard is nothing if not a reliable source of frustration and conflict. And while such a dynamic provides intelligent men with a reliable constant for evolving strategies of Realpolitik, it does nothing to provide other intelligent men with a reliable constant for evolving questions of hermeneutics. And it is for this reason that the majority of the intellectual overhead in the present work was spent on the creation and testing of an intrinsically Qur'anic system of hermeneutics – one larger and, I hope, more enduring and interesting than the question of the length of my particular beard.

MEANINGS OF WORDS

The values men ascribe to words are a means to govern how they may interpret the world and, therefore, limit what they will do in it.

This fact is understood by ruling elites in all ages, and they employ clever men trained in the sciences of how we work to ensure that this reality serves their interests. They have had millennia to practice their craft; they keep records, and they are continually learning more.

When I was a child gay meant happy. Today gay is the sanctioned nomenclature for what my father's generation called homosexual, my grandfather's generation called queer, and my great-grandfather's generation called sodomite. The day may come when any connection between gay and happy will be expunged from the lexicons and popular memory altogether.

Unthinking adoption of the new word value I am using to illustrate my point is become almost universal. Potty-training the herd in the use of this new, fluffy euphemism was a necessary though minor line-item in a larger plan — one of many such plans which have as their combined object political and cultural goals which the population not only had no part in deciding, it will never be apprised of their existence.

The masses think of their lives as individually significant, and they plan in hours, days, weeks and months. The ruling elite regards the masses as a herd with no individual significance at all, one which needs to be managed by its betters; and it plans in decades and centuries.

The transition from sodomite to gay took a few decades. That is a long time for the man in the street, but not for those who rule him.

The Qur'an is many centuries old. It is natural that key Qur'anic word values should have attracted the attention of previous ruling elites and that such elites should have assigned intellectual capital under their direction to the task of making those values work for them. It is equally as predictable that this should have been achieved by stealth and have gone largely unnoticed by — and with the unthinking complicity of — the masses.

It was interesting to me as I began to apply myself to the Qur'an in earnest that it contains — as part of its DNA as it were — a number of inbuilt defences against the imposition of arbitrary values upon its components, by means of which the original values of key terms may be recovered should they be corrupted.

Among these is what is simply a feature of that system of roots which underpins the Arabic language. This system is useful in that it allows words to be analysed and assessed on the basis of predictable and consistent criteria.

I will give the reader without access to Arabic a taste of what I am referring to by means of an illustration, albeit an imperfect one, by taking what I will call for these purposes the English root h-s-p. From this root we get hospital, hospice, hospitable, and hospitalise. Because we are speakers of English we recognise that these words are connected. But let's say everyone in the world starts to agree that to hospitalise means to give money to the priesthood. We can go along to get along, which is what most people do when the world agrees upon something. But we can also choose to demonstrate, even decades or centuries later, on the basis of the broader milieu of the language why to hospitalise does not and cannot mean to give money to the priesthood. And more than that, we can provide a strong case for what it does mean.

Arabic allows one both to expose and to clarify cases where values have been twisted, and it allows one to do so to an extent far greater than is possible in English. And the interlocking root structure of Arabic I have just mentioned is but one of the mechanisms we now have at our disposal. There are others, and I will touch upon those in due course.

We do not have to guess at what the Traditionalist thinks the Qur'an means. He is quite open about it. His exegesis is implicit in his translation. His process is, in the main, eclectic, erratic, and unblushingly outcome-based; that is, he knows what he wants the text to mean and, by God, he intends to bludgeon it into the required shape no matter what problems are created in the process — and there are many. I have read many translations and refer in this work to common Traditionalist assertions and assumptions in the process of exposing and dismantling them.

For my part, I did not begin with a fixed idea of what the text means. I began with a number of precepts, certainly – such as the precept that the Qur'an is from God, complete and preserved – but I have treated the text itself as a perfect structure, something the mechanics of which may be learnt, applied and tested; I sought to understand what it means rather than to tell it what it means. And the process of rendering the Arabic into English, while demanding high levels of attention, was, in the end, largely a technical one, a function of that hermeneutic method which grew out of my extensive preliminary investigations.

There were two breakthroughs which informed my process which deserve mention, both derived, although by different routes, through unconnected reading on the Hittite civilisation.

The first came about when I became interested in the brilliant Czech linguist Bedřich Hrozný who translated the Hittite libraries which were discovered early in the twentieth century.

The texts were written in cuneiform which, of course, was known to scholars. However, the Hittite language itself was not. Hrozný, undaunted, undertook the translation of these works from an unknown language with no dictionaries and no source materials other than his knowledge of languages in general and a lively intelligence. He first went through the entire body of texts and found the most commonly occurring word. He reasoned that this word must mean bread (which it did). And working on this basis he pieced the entire language together like a giant jigsaw puzzle.

I reasoned that it must be possible to apply something of Hrozný's approach to the Qur'an in at least some of those cases where the Traditionalist's claims for word values are neither consistent nor in harmony with the totality of the language or available contexts. And this insight informed part of my eventual method.

My task was far easier than that which Hrozný faced since the meaning of the broader context is known. But where the Traditionalist's treatment of a word causes a disconnect for any reason, or he claims a value which he imports from elsewhere, I searched the entire text for every instance or form of that word, and it was only when I had both investigated that word and its root and identified a meaning which was acceptable in the totality of contexts (that is, one which brings all instances into alignment) that I allowed that value. And not only did I allow such a value, I insisted that its feet be held to the fire in terms of consistency. And on that basis I translated the text; not in linear fashion but iteratively, traversing the entire text to determine key values before allowing them, a process I repeated many thousands of times.

There are cases where I use a synonym by virtue of the requirements of the English language, but none in which I leap erratically from one value to another for the same source item.

Where a source item objectively has more than one sense, notes are added where necessary. The Traditionalist on the other hand hops shamelessly across entire lexical categories to ascribe to the same word the values he requires it to bear in order to justify his religion – some of which process I expose both in situ (i.e. in the Notes & Commentary) and elsewhere in the supporting documentation.[1] My experience in such contexts is that where a value is correctly identified, it fits all cases; where it is contrived, comparison of all instances across the entire set exposes where and how the Traditionalist has done violence to the language to achieve his aims.

My second breakthrough connected with the Hittites came by reading an article on Hittite history. The Hittites were a successful civilisation, I was interested to learn, less by force of arms than by the wisdom of their treatises. As I studied the format of a Hittite suzerainty treaty it dawned on me that al fātiḥah (the first chapter of the Qur'an) comprises a contract between lord and vassal with much in common with the conventions found in the Hittites' suzerainty treaty.

Having had some experience of contracts in my working life, I knew that contracts typically define their terms in the preamble. I approached the opening pages of al baqarah (the second chapter of the Qur'an) with this awareness in mind and found that they indeed contain exact definitions for some of the most common key terms found in the Qur'an. I then took those values and applied them across the entire text and found that not only do they make consistent sense, they make full and illuminating sense in many places where the Traditionalist's current values are redundant or at odds with the context, or both.

The other methods by which meaning is demonstrated are outlined in situ (i.e. in the Notes & Commentary) or elsewhere in the supporting documentation.[2]

There are a few things I wish to say before moving to the topic of translations.

Firstly, I would be remiss in my duty not to say that over the course of my extensive analysis of and work with the Qur'an I have acquired a professional respect for the men who constructed the religion known as Islam. As I have unpicked what they contrived so long ago (as they, quite clearly, set out to neutralise and emasculate what they must have seen as the threat of a nascent, burgeoning Qur'an-fuelled movement), I have grown sincerely impressed at their ingenuity, knowledge of human foibles and mastery of subtlety. The fact that I do not condone what these men did does not prevent me from respecting their minds. These were men of insight and genius, used to planning over centuries, and accustomed never to fight head on what they could direct towards other purposes.

1 See Publications Overview, p. xvii.

2 See Publications Overview, p. xvii.

They had to be both vigilant and subtle. They knew that the Qur'an was universally read — and had been committed to memory — by sincere and careful students. Their influence had to be at once minimal but effective.

Yet, now that I have finished my process of reverse-engineering the influence of their work, I am even more impressed — overwhelmed, in fact — by the integrity of the Qur'anic text, something which the Traditionalist himself has worked to preserve. This process has made the Qur'an proof against later cultural interference, and allowed the deciphering and unpicking of a barrage of misdirection, and the recovery of much, if not all, of the original sense, even after so many centuries.

Secondly, I should be clear that this project is not the product of a desire to engage academics, theory tourists or novelty seekers. My principal purpose is set out in the Preface. But over and above that, I wanted also to complete my own due diligence upon the text of the Qur'an, to satisfy my own desire to understand it, and to do so free of brand Islam, a Weltanschauung born of a literature both extraneous to the Qur'an and obviously, to me at least, originating in political interests, both mediaeval and recent.

Having completed that process of due diligence to my own satisfaction it is my hope that the result will provide a comprehensive, intellectually robust, and accessible resource to sincere people who, like myself, feel the impetus to do something meaningful with their lives.

EXISTING TRANSLATIONS

What follows is an overview of translations of the Qur'an into English; I have tried to include a representative selection of the most influential translations within three broad categories: Traditionalist, Orientalist, and Independent.

I refer frequently to five translations in the Notes & Commentary in order to illustrate certain points. Those which feature in this way in my work are marked by an asterisk below.

TRADITIONALIST TRANSLATIONS

Muhammad Asad*

Muhammad Asad (1900-1992) was an Austrian Jew. He was a journalist, diplomat and accomplished linguist who converted to the religion called Islam.

While he states in the introduction to his translation that the Qur'an can be understood independently he, lamentably, does not pursue that end. Nevertheless, his work is, for me, one of the least troubling among the Traditionalist translations. His rendering is fanciful and flighty, suggestive to me of a good man rather more, perhaps, than of a fastidious translator. However, his comments are intelligent, well researched, and insightful in many places, and I have included a considerable number of them in the Notes & Commentary.

Asad was a man of letters, an intellectual, a refined man, and perhaps also just a little naïve. He threw his impressive energies and talents behind the Islamic experiment in post-Partition Pakistan, but was likely more enamoured of the idea of what it might become than of what it, in fact, became.

Chastened, I suspect, by reality, he withdrew to Andalusian Spain to live out the remainder of his days.

Abdullah Yusuf Ali

Abdullah Yusuf Ali (1872-1953) was born in Bombay, India, and later removed to England where he lived to the end of his life.

The impression one gains from his translation and commentary is of an intellectual, fair-minded writer, and gentle soul.

His was the first translation I read. In it, he attempts to tip his hat in the direction of King James English, with varying degrees of success.

He sets out to interpret the Qur'an in the light of orthodoxy (namely, Sunni orthodoxy) rather than to investigate or to reason from first principles. His translation is the one recommended by the Saudi authorities, which is perhaps a reason to be careful of it, although I understand that they have modified his original work.

He makes some interesting points in a number of his comments, a few of which I have included.

Marmaduke Pickthall

Marmaduke Pickthall (1875-1936) was the son of an English clergyman and became a novelist esteemed by many contemporary writers, as well as a journalist and headmaster.

His translation, which followed his conversion to Islam, is subordinate to Traditionalist orthodoxy. Its style is dated and a little stilted to the modern ear.

Drs. Hilali and Muhsin Khan*

Dr. Muhammad Taqi-ud-Din bin Adil-Qadir al-Hilali (1893-1987) was a 20th-century Islamic scholar from Morocco, and Dr. Muhammad Muhsin Khan is a Pakistani with Afghan Khattak heritage.

If Muhammad Asad's translation can be thought of as representing the side of contemplation, reason, compassion and intellect within the Traditionalist spectrum, the Hilali-Muhsin Khan work is firmly dug in at the opposing end. It attempts to force the entire Qur'anic narrative through a filter of ḥadīth literature and is full of interpolations and footnotes based on the same. Its value lies in the insight it provides the outsider into a vocal and dominant mindset within the church of Islam.

If the Hilali-Muhsin Khan rendition truly represented the message of the Qur'an, my own engagement with the Qur'an would have lasted no longer than a short perusal.

Saheeh International*

The Saheeh International translation was produced by a small team. The idea appears to have been to bring together Traditionalist orthodoxy — presumably as intoned by a group of Pakistanis or Arabs — with native-English editing capabilities. It follows without apology or question the standard Traditionalist line and, like all other translations I have seen, unabashedly switches values for key terms in order to achieve predetermined outcomes.

I use this version frequently to represent the Traditionalist position. While the reader may form the opinion that I am picking unduly on the Saheeh International translation, the fact is that I use it because it represents a consistent and fair demonstration of the Traditionalist view; a middle ground between the erudite and mystical Asad on one hand and the problematic Hilali-Muhsin Khan on the other. It is also useful because it generally indicates by means of square parenthesis where words have been inserted into the text to reach the foregone conclusions Sunni orthodoxy requires of it.

ORIENTALIST TRANSLATIONS

N. J. Dawood*

Born in 1927 in Iraq, N. J. Dawood grew up bilingual in Arabic and English. His translation of the Qur'an broadly follows the thrust of Traditionalist orthodoxy though with a number of creative flourishes of his own. His style is economical, well-crafted and generally pleasing to read.

Since he is a Jew and not a convert to Sunni Islam, his translation tends to be snubbed by Muslims. It is, however, one of the best-selling versions among the non-Muslim population having been published by Penguin since 1956.

A. J. Arberry*

A. J. Arberry (1905-1969) was a British Orientalist. His translation of the Qur'an makes no historic interpretative strides but then neither does it offend. His style is quiet and careful, pleasing in parts, and more exact in many cases than other renderings.

INDEPENDENT TRANSLATIONS

Ghulam Ahmad Parwez

Ghulam Ahmad Parwez (1903-1985) was a Pakistani, the son of a prominent Sufi, and a civil servant. He was denounced as a heretic by the Traditionalist mullahs for refuting the ḥadīth. He is incorrectly credited by some Traditionalists today with founding the movement for the Qur'an alone. He was friend and mentor to Abdul Wadud, author of Conspiracies Against the Qur'an.

His rendering of the Qur'an into English comprises a highly subjective and lengthy exposition of Qur'anic themes, one which gives voice to his view that the Qur'an's primary mission is to institute a form of socialism in the name of God.

Rashad Khalifa

Rashad Khalifa (1935-1990) was an Arab-American biochemist who achieved notoriety on the basis of his computational work with the Qur'an focused on the number nineteen. He rejected the ḥadīth literature entirely.

Khalifa later claimed to be a messenger of God which move brought down the wrath of Traditionalist Islam upon his head, and he was murdered.

His translation itself is unremarkable and a Traditionalist would find in it little to enrage him. Khalifa was not a native speaker of English and, without wishing to be unkind to him, his translation suffers as a result.

Edip Yuksel

Edip Yuksel (b. 1957) is a Turkish-American university lecturer. He was born in Turkey and as a young man was an active Sunni radical and imprisoned by the Turkish authorities as a consequence. While in prison, he was befriended by Rashad Khalifa by letter, after which Yuksel became convinced of many of Khalifa's arguments against sectarian Islam.

As a student of Khalifa it is natural that Yuksel places a heavy emphasis on mathematical proofs. I am neither a mathematician nor temperamentally inclined to concentrate on the type of numerical patterns Yuksel discerns within the Qur'an; for me, such an emphasis is of limited relevance or application. However, I both admit and embrace the fact that people bring different talents to their study of the Qur'an.

I reviewed his translation only in part but was unable to identify a coherent and consistent hermeneutic system apropos key word values, and it is that which is my primary focus.

The Monotheist Group

The Monotheist Group grew out of the free-minds.org website, and members of that group created a translation called The Qur'an: A Monotheist Translation.

The foreword to the translation contains an interesting article on pan-Qur'anic exegesis. The translation itself adopts the rendering of raḥmān as almighty (as do I), but does not explain why it does so, a point which has left some readers perplexed. Its assumptions, so far as I can tell, comprise a composite of the views of Khalifa, Yuksel, and perhaps one or two of the more vocal contributors to the free-minds.org site.

There is no system in the application of terms across the greater text, which renders the result as subjective as any other translation to my mind.

There exist many other translations, not all of which I have read. However, I am confident that I have presented a fair and representative selection of those translations (or, rather, translators) pertinent to my broader thesis. I will now turn to the question of motivations and results.

The Orientalist translators are easiest to deal with. They are typically unconcerned with Eternity; they are concerned with royalties, with their professional standing among their peers, and with not having to check under their cars before backing out of the garage. They have taken what they consider the safest route: to turn a Sunni orthodox reading into something digestible in English which the publisher will like.

The translators of the remaining two categories are, like myself, ideologically motivated. However, they both fall at the same fence to varying degrees in that acceptance of their readings boils down to a question of personal authority.

The authority for the Traditionalist's translations derives from a perception of his traditions and of those who wrote and expounded upon them. The authority for what I have called independent translations — while deriving from a different historical basis — rests, in the end, upon a similar type of foundation: one must choose to believe or not believe that Parwez, Khalifa, Yuksel or the authors of the Monotheist Group are sufficiently wise, clever or competent to make their work reliable.

The point I am making is not that these people are not wise, clever or competent. For all I know they are superlatively so. I am saying that, at bottom, the same mechanism is at work in the mind of the reader regarding the non-ḥadīth readings as with Traditionalist translations: in both cases the reader has no choice but to make an assessment based upon a perception of the personal competence of the translator.

THIS TRANSLATION

Certainly, I have a worldview, and I regard the Qur'an within the framework of that worldview. For example, I dismiss many popular coincidence theories of history and current affairs, and in terms of Realpolitik have something in common with aspects of the Patriot Movement, the Truth Movement, some historical revisionism, libertarianism, and perhaps even anarchism.

I am independently minded and conservative, and temperamentally opposed to so-called Modernity.

However, my textual approach was not actuated by my worldview. And acceptance by the reader of my findings is not contingent upon his worldview and mine corresponding. I have developed and applied a method of linguistic hermeneutics which can be picked apart or utilised by anyone prepared to take the time to do so no matter what his worldview might be. This allows the emphasis to be taken off how wise or foolish I may be personally, and placed on a methodology.

While I have certain preferences, I am ultimately interested less in who is right than in what is right, so I am not blindly or unreasonably protective of my efforts. If someone more talented than myself can produce a cogent and integrated demonstration of the total Qur'anic corpus — not just some small part of it — which both proves my presentation wrong and his right, I will thank him and henceforth read his translation and not my own. I am principally interested in what I touch on in the Preface and discuss in detail in The God Protocol; that is, in the Qur'an as a template for holding a miscreant ruling elite to account before God. Extended discussions of the Qur'an which miss this focus — especially those such as one commonly sees online — seem to me little more than a parlour game and I ignore them.

I summarise the postulates and other bases upon which my work is founded below.

Personal qualifications

- The Qur'an was sent down as guidance for all mankind — a group to which I belong (2:185)
- I have taken the time to give the Qur'an careful consideration and full attention (4:82, 7:204, 47:24)
- I have studied the Arabic of the Qur'an and use reason (12:2, 43:3)

Resources

- Definitions found within the Qur'anic text (6:114-115, 16:89, 75:19)
- The principles and norms of the Arabic language (12:2, 43:3)
- Arabic usage across the totality of the Qur'an (39:28)
- Reason (8:22, 13:4, 21:10, 23:80, 45:5)
- Historical evidence (16:43, 21:7)

General Method

- Where a definition for a word is identified within the Qur'an itself, that value is adopted and sustained — either overtly in the translation or by means of elucidation in corresponding notes — across the entire text and documentation supplied.
- Values derived by means of pan-textual analysis are held to be binding across the text in the function or in the collocation in which they are identified, and documentation supplied.
- Where historically accepted word values cause no tension or dissonance either within local contexts or across the totality of instances they are considered potentially acceptable and if found to be so are applied consistently subject to the criterion which follows.
- Where there are insufficient instances of a word to identify its value by comparing contexts, human reason is deemed sufficient to identify from lexicons which available value best fits the local context given consideration of the broader narrative.
- Where appropriate, either for the purposes of full disclosure or in the interests of the broader perspective of the reader, documentation is supplied in the Notes & Commentary.
- There are cases where the work of other translators is imported into the Notes & Commentary in order to supply perspectives to the reader that would otherwise be lost.
- In places I include comments which I find intelligent and reasonable (but not all of which I fully agree with) by previous translators in order to furnish the reader with a broader perspective.
- Usages which differ from established norms are supported by documentation supplied in the Notes & Commentary or in Notepads or Articles.[3]

3 See Publications Overview, p. xvii.

COMMON CONVENTIONS

- I use the commonly accepted anglicised versions of names in the Translation where possible, preferring transliterated Arabic in the Notes & Commentary; I am aiming for readability in my translation and clarification in the Notes & Commentary.
- I include relevant notation pertaining to the mysterious letters for a given sūrah at the top of the page of the Translation (for my full analysis, see Article MLQ).
- The bare Qur'anic text has no punctuation; rather, the narrative force implies punctuation. For example, the Qur'an does not use the exclamation mark, but where the context requires one by convention in English, I provide it.
- While my use of parenthesis is more extensive than that of other translations, I make no interpolations. I have no need of them. The Qur'an clearly contains nested statements; by revealing them as such, the need for interpolation beyond ellipsis falls away. All comments or explanations are found in the Notes & Commentary.
- The Qur'an makes use of ellipsis (where the narrative trails off and intimates rather than explicitly states a conclusion, a convention widely recognised to exist and employed by the majority of translators and commentators). I accept and use this convention and indicate what I take to be the implicit text by means of scilicet the implication of which is supplied in the Notes & Commentary.
- I identify a number of cases where one speaker cuts off the preceding speaker which action I indicate by means of double dashes.
- I use chapter and sūrah interchangeably in the Notes & Commentary.
- I use the archaic thou form for the second person singular since it identifies easily what is addressed to the Prophet as well as — by extension — to the individual believer in many cases.
- I render the first letter of God's attributes in lower case where they occur without the definite article and in upper case where they occur with the definite article in those instances which denote titles.
- I render allāh as God which is the correct nomenclature in English; the Arabic allāh is not a proper noun and making it one in English contributes to the conceit that the Qur'anic revelation is an exclusively or specifically Arab matter.
- I stay as close to the original word order as I can without unduly offending the English ear.
- The common idh is rendered as when (or occasionally as then where it provides a complement to a preceding adverb). After baʿda it tends to be elided.
- I treat wa idh commonly as and when.
- Such stylistic devices and flourishes as inna (often rendered lo!) and the double *nūn*s found in certain verbs indicating intensity of degree (often rendered indeed) are almost entirely elided since they add little in contemporary English, and the attempt to accommodate them clouds rather than clarifies.
- Devices such as balā and bal are observed, and the function of the former as a pan-textual indicator identified.
- I treat fa as a comma, a colon, for, then, so, and or but depending on context, which is standard.
- I treat wa typically as and or but depending on context; and sometimes as when or so, which is standard.

- I provide information on grammar, word order, or the literal meaning of certain phrases in the Notes & Commentary both to assist the serious student and to aid potential future translators of this work into other languages achieve a high level of consistency in their target language.
- Modern English confuses the nominative and accusative personal pronoun in certain circumstances (There is no god but Him and There is no god but He). I hold to the latter convention when the personal pronoun is not an object of any kind.
- In those cases where I have made pan-textual comparisons and reached conclusions which require comment, I apply the appropriate value and supply a note for all instances of that term.
- Where a word forms part of a collocation (that is, it works predictably in combination with another word or words to create a consistent compound meaning) I strive to stay true to the rendering of that collocation throughout to the extent that English usage will allow.
- Where a particular word objectively has more than one meaning — and more than one of the available meanings fits the context (for example, some instances of imām, ummah, or azwāj) — a note tends to be supplied in relevant contexts.
- I pay close attention to grammatical constructions and other formulæ, enforcing maximum consistency throughout — again, to the extent that English usage will allow — and deriving values on the basis of pan-textual comparison, much in the same way as is done with vocabulary.

LAYOUT CONVENTIONS

Translation

- Page numbers are on the inner edges at the top of each page.
- Sūrah and verse numbers indicating the verse in force in the Arabic text at the start of the page are on the top outer edge of the of the page to facilitate speedy navigation across the text.
- Where a sūrah is headed by an instance of the mysterious letters (Arabic: al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭaʿāt) these letters are included at the top of the page for the duration of the sūrah, with the Arabic letters above the centre of the Arabic text column and the transliterated English equivalent above the centre of the translated text. A full analysis of their meaning and the reasons for the addition of rā and § will be found my book The Mysterious Letters of the Qur'an: A Complete Solution.[4]
- I do not believe the *bismillah*s to be native to the Qur'anic revelation beyond al fātiḥah, a view which is supported by the fact that *bismillah*s beyond that which opens al fātiḥah are not numbered as verses by longstanding convention. It is my view that their inclusion distracts from the obvious narrative connections which exist between a number of contiguous sūrahs, and I have elected to minimise their visual intrusion in the print version of this work. Having reviewed some of the earliest codices, I have come to the view that chapter divisions are of no more moment than are paragraph breaks today.

4 See Publications Overview, p. xvii.

- I include the juz' convention of text division (i.e. the marking of the Qur'an into thirty equal parts) each of which is subdivided into eighths, as found in most Arabic Qur'ans. This convention is a useful means of planning one's reading of the entire text over, say, a month. The star symbols marking each of these divisions are found on the right-hand side of the Arabic text column, while the numbers which track them over the course of the text are at the top of the page directly above. These numbers follow a convention of, for example, 21:3 meaning: the twenty-first juz', the third eighth). This allows the reader to know at all times where he is in his reading of the text.
- There exists more than one convention of subdividing sūrahs into segments known as *rukuʿ*s. These are used to produce manageable segments for use in prayer and to divide longer sūrahs into digestible segments (sūrahs from 80 through 114, which are comparatively short, do not feature them). I have taken an existing method of thus punctuating the text and modified it slightly. These segments are indicated on the left-hand side of the English text column, and directly above at the top of the page. The convention within the text is: pilcrow followed by sūrah number and the rukuʿ number within that sūrah, e.g. ¶30.5 means sūrah thirty, rukuʿ five. The first rukuʿ in any sūrah is assumed, and its boundaries are between the first verse of the sūrah and the point at which the second rukuʿ of that sūrah begins.

- Page numbers are on the inner edges at the top of each page.
- Sūrah and verse numbers indicating the verse note in force at the start of the page are on the top outer edge of each page to facilitate speedy navigation across the text.
- Each sūrah number and its rukuʿ divisions are emphasised within the text to facilitate speedy navigation across it.

VIEWS OF HISTORY

I remain to be convinced of aspects of the dominant so-called Judaeo-Christian historical narrative (hereafter: the Egypt-Palestine thesis) and parts of that narrative as advanced by Traditionalist Islam. My research continues, and the present work neither assumes nor rejects this thesis.

I am generally convinced of the rightness of much of the view advanced by Dan Gibson in his book Quranic Geography which identifies Petra as the place of pilgrimage (i.e. al masjid al ḥarām) and which is referred to in the present work as the Petra pilgrimage thesis. I am generally neutral on many of his other claims.

I previously rather allowed that Gibson's further assertions regarding the location of ʿĀd, Thamūd, and so on, as geographically local to al masjid al ḥarām, were correct. And they may be. But I make a distinction between my support for the Petra pilgrimage thesis (i.e. that Petra was the location of al masjid al ḥarām) and other theses Dan Gibson presents.

Like Gibson, I question the assumption that the location of al masjid al ḥarām and the city of Muḥammad's origin and initial locus of action were necessarily one and the same. I do not refute the claim outright; I simply allow that it may not be the case. I am in favour of extensive, diligent investigation on the ground.

FINAL WORD

I make no apology for my role as self-appointed irritant to the established order.

The function of the histories of key messengers in the Qur'an from Noah to Muḥammad is to impel the believer to follow the prophetic example: to warn the dominant ruling elite and call it to turn to God alone. Despite the seemingly insurmountable branding problem the Qur'an has by longstanding association with the Traditionalist's commitment to an unrelated cult, such remains the Qur'anic model for overthrowing tyranny. But this imperative has little if anything to do with promoting or enforcing that religion which is today called Islam.

The present ruling elites are close to their goal of perfected and total tyranny. I see no means of defeating their agenda but by following the protocol the Qur'an supplies.

That subject is explored in full in my work The God Protocol.

2 Praise belongs to God, the Lord of All Creation,[1]
3 The Almighty,[1] the Merciful,

4 Master of the Day of Judgment.[1]

5 Thee alone do we serve,[1] and from Thee alone do we seek help.[2]
6 Guide Thou us on the straight path,[1]

7 The path of those whom Thou hast favoured; not of those who incur wrath,[1] nor of those who go astray.[2]

2 That[1] is the Writ about which there is no doubt,[2] a guidance to those of prudent fear:[3]

3 Those who believe in[1] the Unseen, and uphold the duty,[2] and of what We have provided them they spend;

4 And those who believe in[1] what was sent down to thee, and what was sent down before thee,[2] and of the Hereafter they are certain:[3]

5 Those are upon guidance from their Lord; and it is they who are the successful.[1]

6 Those who ignore warning,[1] it is the same to them whether thou hast warned them or thou hast not warned them; they do not believe:[2]
7God has sealed their hearts, and over their hearing and over their sight is a covering; and they have a great punishment.

8 ¶2.2 And of men are some who say: "We believe in[1] God and the Last Day," but they are not believers.[2]

9 They would deceive God and those who heed warning,[1] but they deceive only themselves; and they perceive not.

10 In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease; and for them is a painful punishment because they have lied.

11 And when it is said to them: "Work not corruption in the land," they say: "We are but those who do right."

12 In truth,[1] it is they who are the workers of corruption; but they perceive not.

13 And when it is said to them: "Believe as mankind has believed," they say: "Shall we believe as the foolish have believed?" In truth,[1] it is they who are the foolish; but they know not.

14 And when they meet those who heed warning,[1] they say: "We believe." But when they are alone with their satans,[2] they say: "We are with you; we were only mocking!"

15 God mocks them, and increases them in wandering blindly in their inordinacy.

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ ٱعۡبُدُواْ رَبَّكُمُ ٱلَّذِي
خَلَقَكُمۡ وَٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِكُمۡ
لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَتَّقُونَ ٢١
ٱلَّذِي جَعَلَ لَكُمُ ٱلۡأَرۡضَ فِرَٰشٗا
وَٱلسَّمَآءَ بِنَآءٗ وَأَنزَلَ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مَآءٗ

16 Those are they who bought error at the price of guidance, so their transaction profited not; and they were not guided.

17 Their likeness is as the likeness of one who kindled a fire: — when it had illuminated what was round about him, God took away their light and left them in darkness; they do not see.

18 Deaf, dumb, blind; so they will not return.

19 Or[1] like a thundercloud from the sky wherein is darkness,[2] and thunder, and lightning: they put their fingers in their ears against the thunderbolts in fear of death; but God encompasses the false claimers of guidance.[3]

20 The lightning nigh snatches away their sight; whenever it gives them light, they walk therein; and when it darkens over them, they stand still.[1] And had God willed, He would have taken away their hearing and their sight; God is over all things powerful.

21 ¶2.3 O mankind: serve your Lord who created you, and those before you, that you might be in prudent fear;[1]

22 Who made the earth for you a couch,[1] and the sky a structure,[2] and sent down from the sky water, then brought forth thereby fruits as provision for you; so make not equals to God when you know.[3]

فَلَا تَجۡعَلُواْ لِلَّهِ أَندَادٗا وَأَنتُمۡ تَعۡلَمُونَ ٢٢

وَإِن كُنتُمۡ فِي رَيۡبٖ مِّمَّا نَزَّلۡنَا عَلَىٰ عَبۡدِنَا فَأۡتُواْ بِسُورَةٖ مِّن مِّثۡلِهِۦ وَٱدۡعُواْ شُهَدَآءَكُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ إِن كُنتُمۡ صَٰدِقِينَ ٢٣

فَإِن لَّمۡ تَفۡعَلُواْ وَلَن تَفۡعَلُواْ فَٱتَّقُواْ ٱلنَّارَ ٱلَّتِي وَقُودُهَا ٱلنَّاسُ وَٱلۡحِجَارَةُ أُعِدَّتۡ لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ٢٤

وَبَشِّرِ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ أَنَّ لَهُمۡ جَنَّٰتٖ تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُ كُلَّمَا رُزِقُواْ مِنۡهَا مِن ثَمَرَةٖ رِّزۡقٗا قَالُواْ هَٰذَا ٱلَّذِي رُزِقۡنَا مِن قَبۡلُ وَأُتُواْ بِهِۦ مُتَشَٰبِهٗا وَلَهُمۡ فِيهَآ أَزۡوَٰجٞ مُّطَهَّرَةٞ وَهُمۡ فِيهَا خَٰلِدُونَ ٢٥

۞ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَسۡتَحۡيِۦٓ أَن يَضۡرِبَ مَثَلٗا مَّا بَعُوضَةٗ فَمَا فَوۡقَهَا فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ فَيَعۡلَمُونَ أَنَّهُ ٱلۡحَقُّ مِن رَّبِّهِمۡ وَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ فَيَقُولُونَ مَاذَآ أَرَادَ ٱللَّهُ بِهَٰذَا مَثَلٗا يُضِلُّ بِهِۦ كَثِيرٗا وَيَهۡدِي بِهِۦ كَثِيرٗا وَمَا يُضِلُّ بِهِۦٓ إِلَّا ٱلۡفَٰسِقِينَ ٢٦

23 And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our servant, then bring a sūrah[1] the like thereof; and call your witnesses other than[2] God, if you be truthful.[3]

24 But if you do not — and you will not — then be in prudent fear[1] of the Fire, whose fuel is men and stones,[2] prepared for the false claimers of guidance.[3]

25 And bear thou glad tidings to those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds, that they have gardens beneath which rivers flow; whenever they are provided with the fruit thereof they say: "This is what we were provided with before"; and they are given thereby a likeness;[2] and they have therein purified spouses; and they abide therein eternally.

26 God is not ashamed to strike a similitude, be it of a gnat or of what is above it. Then as for those who heed warning:[1] they know that it is the truth[2] from their Lord; and as for those who ignore warning:[3] they say: "What means God by this similitude?" He leads astray many thereby, and He guides many thereby; and He leads astray thereby only the perfidious:[4]

27 Those who break the covenant with God[1] after its agreement,[2] and sever what God commanded to be joined, and work corruption in the land; it is they who are the losers.

28 How can you deny God? When you were dead, He gave you life; then will He give you death; then will He give you life; then to Him will you be returned.

29 He it is that created for you all that is in the earth; then He directed Himself to the sky and fashioned[1] them seven[2] heavens; and He knows all things.

30 ¶2.4 And when thy Lord said to the angels: "I am placing in the earth a successor," they said: "Wilt Thou place therein one who will do harm therein, and shed blood, while we give glory[1] with Thy praise and hallow Thee?" He said: "I know what you know not."

31 And He taught Adam the names, all of them; then He presented them to the angels and said: "Inform Me of the names of these, if you be truthful."[1]

32 They said: "Glory[1] be to Thee! We have no knowledge save what Thou hast taught us; Thou art the Knowing, the Wise."

33 He said: "O Adam: inform thou them of their names." And when he had informed them of their names, He said: "Said I not to you that I know the unseen of the heavens

34 And when We said to the angels: "Submit[1] to Adam," then they submitted.[2] Not so[3] Iblīs;[4] he refused, and had waxed proud, and was of the false claimers of guidance.[5]

35 And We said: "O Adam: dwell thou and thy wife in the garden, and eat[1] thereof freely wheresoever you[2] will; but approach[3] not this tree lest you[4] be of the wrongdoers."[5]

37 Then received Adam words from his Lord, and He[1] turned towards him; He is the Accepting of Repentance, the Merciful.

68 They said: "Call thou to thy Lord for us, that He make plain[1] to us what she is." He said: "He says: 'She is a heifer neither old nor young, middling between that,' so do what you are commanded."

little is it they believe.

89 And when there came to them a Writ[1] from God, confirming what was with them — and they before sought victory[2] over those who ignore warning[3] — then when there came to them what they recognised, they denied it; but the curse of God is upon the false claimers of guidance.[4]

90 Evil is that for which they sold themselves, denying what God sent down, through sectarian zealotry,[1] that God should send down of His bounty upon whom He wills of His servants. So they incurred wrath upon wrath; and for the false claimers of guidance[2] is a humiliating punishment.

91 And when it is said to them: "Believe in[1] what God has sent down," they say: "We believe in[2] what was sent down to us," and they deny what is beyond it, when it is the truth[3] confirming what is with them. Say thou: "Why then killed you the prophets of God before, if you be believers?"[4]

102 And they followed what[1] the satans[2] recited during[3] the reign of Solomon;[4] and Solomon denied not; but the satans[5] denied, teaching men sorcery,[6] and what was sent down upon the two angels[7] at Babylon,[8] Hārūt and Mārūt. And they[9] taught no one until they[10] had said: "We are but a means of denial,[11] so deny thou not."[12] Then from them[13] they learn that by which they cause division between a man and his wife; but they harm no one thereby save by the leave of God. And they learn what harms them, and profits them not, knowing well that whoso buys it[14] has in the Hereafter no share; and evil is that for which they sold their souls, had they but known.

123 And be in prudent fear[1] of a day no soul will avail a soul anything, nor will compensation be accepted from it, nor will intercession benefit it. And they will not be helped.

124 And when[1] his Lord tried Abraham[2] with words and he fulfilled them, He said: “I will make thee a leader[3] for mankind.” Said he: “And of my progeny?” He said: “My covenant does not reach the wrongdoers.”[4]

127 And when[1] Abraham and Ishmael raised[2] the foundations[3] of the house: “Our Lord: be Thou accepting of us; Thou art the Hearing, the Knowing.

171 And the likeness of those who ignore warning[1] is as the likeness of one who yells to what hears not save a call and a shout: deaf, dumb, blind, so they do not reason.

172 O you who heed warning:[1] eat of the good things that We have provided you; and be grateful to God if it be Him you serve.

173 He has only made unlawful to you carrion, and blood, and the flesh of swine, and that dedicated to other than God. But whoso is forced, neither desiring nor transgressing, no sin[1] is upon him; God is forgiving and merciful.

174 Those who conceal what God has sent down of the Writ[1] and sell it at a cheap price,[2] those eat into their bellies only fire. And God will not speak to them on the Day of Resurrection, nor will He increase them in purity;[3] and they have a painful punishment.

When they said to a prophet of theirs: “Raise thou up for us a king; we will fight in the cause of God,” he said: “Would you, if fighting be prescribed for you, not fight?” They said: “And why should we not fight in the cause of God when we have been turned out of our homes, and our children?” But when fighting was prescribed for them, they turned away save a few of them. And God knows the wrongdoers.[2]

247 And their prophet said to them: “God has raised up for you Saul[1] as king.” They said: “How can he have dominion over us when we are worthier[2] of dominion than he, when he has not been given abundance of wealth?” He said: “God has chosen him over you, and increased him abundantly in knowledge and stature.” And God gives His dominion to whom He wills; and God is encompassing and knowing.

248 And their prophet said to them: “A proof[1] of his dominion is that there will come to you the chest[2] wherein is tranquillity from your Lord, and a remnant of what the house of Moses and the house of Aaron[3] left,[4] borne[5] by angels; in that is a proof[6] for you, if you be believers.”[7]

249 ¶2.33 Then when Saul[1] set out with the forces, he said: “God will try you with a river, so whoso drinks thereof is not of me; and whoso tastes it not is of me save he who scoops up a handful with his hand.” But they drank thereof save a few of them. Then when he had crossed it, he and those who heeded warning[2] with him, they said: “We have not power this day against Goliath[3] and his forces.” Said those who knew that they should meet God: “How many a small host has overcome a mighty host by the leave of God! And God is with the patient.”[4]

250 And when they emerged against Goliath and his forces, they said: “Our Lord: pour Thou out patience upon us, and make Thou firm our feet; and help Thou us[1] against the people of the false claimers of guidance.”[2]

251 And they defeated them by the leave of God. And David[1] killed Goliath, and God gave him dominion and wisdom,[2] and taught him of what He willed. And were God not to repel some people by means of others, the earth should have become corrupt; but God is bountiful to all mankind.

Jesus,[3] son of Mary[4] the clear signs, and We strengthened him with the Spirit of Holiness. And had God willed, there would not have fought one another those after them after the clear signs had come to them; but they differed, and some of them believed, and some of them denied; and had God willed, they would not have fought one another; but God does what He wills.

254 ¶2.34 O you who heed warning:[1] spend of what We have provided you before there comes a day wherein is neither commerce, nor friendship, nor intercession; and the false claimers of guidance:[2] they are the wrongdoers.[3]

255 God, there is no god save He,[1] the Living, the Eternal. Neither slumber nor sleep overtakes Him; to Him belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth — who will intercede with Him save by His leave? He knows what is before them[2] and what is after them, and they encompass not anything of His knowledge save what He wills. His Throne overspreads the heavens and the earth, and the preservation thereof[3] wearies Him not; and He is the Exalted, the Great.

256 There is no compulsion in doctrine;[1] sound judgment has become clear from error. So whoso denies idols[2] and believes in[3] God, he has grasped the most firm handhold which has no break; and God is hearing and knowing.

257 God is the ally of those who heed warning;[1] He brings them out of darkness[2] into the light. And those who ignore warning:[3] their allies are idols;[4] they bring them out of the light into darkness.[5] Those are the companions of the Fire; therein they abide eternally.

258 ¶2.35 Hast thou not considered[1] the one who disputed with Abraham concerning his Lord because God had given him dominion? When Abraham said: "My Lord is He who gives life, and gives death," he said: "I give life, and I give death." Abraham said: "God brings the sun from the East; so bring thou it from the West." Then was the one who ignored warning[2] lost for words; and God guides not the wrongdoing[3] people.

259 Or[1] like one passing by a town when it was desolate:[2] he said: "How will God give life to this after its death?" So God caused him to die a hundred years; then He raised him up. He said: "How long hast thou tarried?" Said he: "I have tarried a day, or part of a day." He said: "Nay,[3] thou hast tarried a hundred years. Look thou at thy food and drink: they are not spoiled. And look thou at thy donkey — and We will make thee a proof[4] for mankind — and look thou at the bones: how We restore them to life, then We clothe them with flesh." And when it had become clear to him, said he: "I know that God is over all things powerful."

And know thou that God is exalted in might and wise.”

261 ¶2.36 The likeness of those who spend their wealth in the cause of God is as the likeness of a grain which grows seven ears, in each ear a hundred grains. And God increases manifold to whom He wills; and God is encompassing and knowing.

262 Those who spend their wealth in the cause of God, then follow[1] not what they have spent with condescension[2] or hindrance,[3] they have their reward with their Lord; and no fear will be upon them, nor will they grieve.

263 Fitting[1] speech and blindness to deficiency[2] are better than charity followed by hindrance;[3] and God is free from need and clement.

264 O you who heed warning:[1] make not your charity vain through condescension and hindrance,[2] like one who spends his wealth to be seen of men and believes not

52 But when Jesus[1] perceived their denial, he said: "Who are my helpers for God?" The disciples[2] said: "We are the helpers of God; we believe in[3] God; and bear thou witness that we are submitting."[4]

53 "Our Lord: we believe in[1] what Thou hast sent down, and we follow the Messenger,[2] so write Thou us down with the witnesses."

54 And they[1] schemed, and God schemed; and God is the best of schemers.

55 ¶3.6 When[1] God said: "O Jesus:[2] I will take thee and raise thee to Me, and purify thee of those who ignore warning,[3] and place those who follow thee above those who ignore warning[4] until the Day of Resurrection. Then to Me is your return, and I will judge between you concerning that wherein you differed.

56 "And as for those who ignore warning:[1] I will punish them with a severe punishment in the World and the Hereafter; and they will have no helpers."

57 And as for those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: He will give them their rewards in full; but God loves not the wrongdoers.[2]

58 That do We recite to thee of the proofs[1] and the wise remembrance.[2]

65 O doctors of the Law:[1] why dispute you about Abraham, when the Torah and the Gospel[2] were sent down only after him? Will you then not[2] use reason!

66 Here you are: those who have disputed about that whereof you have knowledge; why then dispute you about that whereof you have no knowledge? And God knows, and you know not.

67 Abraham was neither one who holds to Judaism,[1] nor a Christian,[2] but was inclining to truth[3] as one submitting;[4] and he was not of the idolaters.[5]

101 And how can you deny, when to you are the proofs[1] of God recited, and in your midst is His messenger? And whoso holds fast to God,[2] he has been guided to a straight path.

102 ¶3.11 O you who heed warning:[1] be in prudent fear[2] of God with the prudent fear due[3] Him, and die not save that you be submitting.[4]

وَلِلَّهِ مَا فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ

103 And hold fast to the rope of God all together, and be not divided. And remember the favour of God upon you: when you were enemies, He united your hearts so that by His favour you became brethren; and you were upon the edge of a pit of fire, and He rescued you from it. Thus does God make plain[1] to you His proofs,[2] that you might be guided.

104 And let there be from you a community inviting to good, and enjoining what is fitting,[1] and forbidding perversity;[2] and it is they who are the successful.[3]

105 And be not like those who became divided, and disputed after the clear signs had come to them; and it is they who have a great punishment.

106 The day faces will be white, and faces will be black: as for those whose faces will be black: — "Did you deny after your faith? Then taste the punishment for what you denied!"

107 And as for those whose faces will be white: — in the mercy of God; therein they abide eternally.

108 Those are the proofs[1] of God; We recite them to thee in truth;[2] and God desires not injustice for all mankind.

109 And to God belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and to God

110 ¶3.12 You are the best community brought forth for mankind: you enjoin what is fitting,[1] and you forbid perversity,[2] and you believe in[3] God. And had the doctors of the Law[4] believed, it would have been better for them. Among them are believers,[5] but most of them are perfidious.[6]

111 They will not cause you harm save hindrance;[1] and if they fight you, they will turn to you their backs;[2] then will they not be helped.

112 Pitched upon them will be ignominy wherever they are found save for a rope[1] from God and a rope from men. And they will incur wrath from God, and wretchedness will be pitched upon them,[2] for it is that[3] they denied the proofs[4] of God! And they killed the prophets without cause,[5] for it is that[6] they opposed and exceeded all bounds!

113 They are not the same; among the doctors of the Law[1] is an upright community: they recite the proofs[2] of God in watches of the night, and they submit;[3]

114 They believe in[1] God and the Last Day, and enjoin what is fitting,[2] and forbid perversity,[3] and compete in good deeds; and those are among the righteous.

115 And what they do of good, they will not be denied it; and God knows those of prudent fear.[1]

116 Those who ignore warning:[1] neither their wealth nor their children will avail them anything against God. And those are the companions of the Fire; therein they abide eternally.

117 The likeness of what they spend in the life of this world is as the likeness of a wind wherein was biting cold: it befell the tilth of a people who wronged their souls and destroyed it; and God wronged them not, but they wronged themselves.

118 O you who heed warning:[1] take not as intimates other than[2] your own;[3] they will not spare you ruin. They would that you should suffer. Hatred has already become clear from their mouths, and what their breasts hide is greater. We have made plain[4] the proofs[5] to you, if you will use reason.

119 Here you are, those who love them; and they love you not, when you believe in[1] the Writ[2] — all of it. And when they meet you, they say: “We believe,” but when they are alone, they bite their fingertips at you from rage. Say thou: “Die in your rage,[3] God knows what is in the breasts.”

120 If good touches you, it vexes them; and if evil[1] befalls you, they exult thereat. But if you are patient and in prudent fear,[2] their plan will not harm you at all; God encompasses what they do.

121 ¶3.13 And when[1] thou didst leave thy household early to assign the believers[2] their stations for the battle; and God was hearing and knowing[3]

122 When two groups[1] among you were about to lose heart, but God was their[2] ally; and in God let the believers[2] place their trust.

125 "Verily,[1] if you are patient and in prudent fear,[2] and they[3] rush upon you of a sudden, your Lord will supply you with five thousand angels having marks,"[4]

127 "That He might cut off a part of those who ignore warning,[1] or suppress them so they turn back disappointed."

128 No part of the matter is thine, whether He turns towards them[1] or punishes them, for they are wrongdoers,[2]

129 And to God belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth. He forgives whom He wills, and punishes whom He wills; and God is forgiving and merciful.

130 ¶3.14 O you who heed warning:[1] consume not usury, doubled and redoubled; and be in prudent fear[2] of God, that you might be successful.

131 And be in prudent fear[1] of the Fire prepared for the false claimers of guidance.[2]

132 And obey God and the Messenger,[1] that you might obtain mercy.

133 And vie one with another for forgiveness from your Lord, and a garden as wide as the heavens and the earth prepared for those of prudent fear:[1]

134 Those who spend in prosperity and in adversity, and who control their wrath, and forgive men; and God loves the doers of good;

135 And those who, when they commit sexual immorality[1] or wrong their souls, remember God, and ask forgiveness for their transgressions[2] — and who forgives transgressions[3] save God? — and persist not in what they did when they know.[4]

144 ¶3.15 And Muḥammad is only a messenger; messengers have passed away before him. If then he dies or is killed, will you turn back on your heels? And he who turns back on his heels does no harm to God at all; and God will reward the grateful.

145 And it is not for a soul to die, save by the leave of God, at a writ[1] determined.[2] And whoso desires the reward of the World, We give him thereof; and whoso desires the reward of the Hereafter, We give him thereof; and We reward the grateful.

146 And alongside[1] how many a prophet have fought many stoutly devout men![2] And they fainted not at what befell them in the cause of God; neither did they weaken, nor did they yield. And God loves the patient.[3]

147 And their word[1] was only that they said: "Our Lord: forgive Thou us our transgressions,[2] and our excess in our affair, and make Thou firm our feet; and help Thou us against the people of the false claimers of guidance."[3]

148 So God gave them the reward of the World and the good reward of the Hereafter;

149 ¶3.16 O you who heed warning:[1] if you obey those who ignore warning,[2] they will drive you back on your heels; and you will turn back as losers.

150 The truth is,[1] God is your protector; and He is the best of helpers.

151 We will cast into the hearts of those who ignore warning[1] terror because they have ascribed a partnership[2] with God to that for which He sent not down authority; and their shelter is the Fire; and evil is the dwelling of the wrongdoers.[3]

152 And God was indeed[1] true in His promise[2] to you. When[3] you were aware[4] of them by His leave, when[5] you had lost heart and disputed concerning the affair, and rebelled after He had shown you what[6] you love[...].[7] Among you is he who desires the World; and among you is he who desires the Hereafter. Then He turned you away from them that He might try you; and He has pardoned you; and God is bountiful to the believers.[8]

153 When[1] you were ascending, and paying no heed to anyone, and the Messenger calling you from your rear,[2] so He requited you with grief upon grief, that you might not grieve for what eluded you[3] or what befell you; and God is aware of what you do.

154 Then He sent down upon you, after distress, security, slumber overcoming a number of you; and a number had grieved themselves[1] thinking about God other than the truth[2] — the thought of ignorance — saying: "Have we any part[3] in the affair?" Say thou: "The affair belongs entirely to God." They hide within themselves what they reveal not to thee, saying: "Had we any part[4] in the affair, we would not have been slain here."[5] Say thou: "Had you been in your houses, those for whom killing was decreed would have gone forth to their resting places";[6] and: "That God might try what is in your breasts"; and: "That He might refine what is in your hearts." And God knows what is in the breasts.

155 Those who turned back among you the day the two hosts met: the satan[1] caused them to slip only for some of what they earned. But God has pardoned them; God is forgiving and clement.

156 ¶3.17 O you who heed warning:[1] be not like those who ignore warning,[2] and say of their brothers when they travel in the earth or are on an expedition: "Had they been with us, they would not have died or been killed," that God might make that a sorrow in their hearts; for God gives life, and gives death; and God sees what you do.

given[1] the Writ[2] before you, and from the idolaters,[3] much hindrance.[4] But if you are patient and in prudent fear:[5] that is among the resolution of affairs.[6]

187 And when God took an agreement of those given[1] the Writ:[2] "You are to make it plain[3] to mankind, and not to conceal it," then they cast it behind their backs, and sold it at a cheap price; and evil is what they bought.

188 Think not those who exult at what they have accomplished,[1] and love to be praised for what they have not done[...].[2] And think them not in a place of safety from the punishment; and they have a painful punishment.

189 And to God belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth; and God is over all things powerful.

190 ¶3.20 In the creation of the heavens and the earth and the alternation of night and day are proofs[1] for men of understanding:

191 Those who remember God, standing and sitting and on their sides, and reflect upon the creation of the heavens and the earth: "Our Lord: Thou createdst not this to no purpose. Glory[1] be to Thee! And protect Thou us from the punishment of the Fire!

192 "Our Lord: whom Thou causest to enter the Fire: him hast Thou disgraced"; and there are for the wrongdoers[1] no helpers.

193 "Our Lord: we have heard a caller calling to faith: 'Believe in[1] your Lord!' And we have believed. Our Lord: forgive Thou us our transgressions,[2] and remove Thou from us our evil deeds;[3] and take Thou us[4] with the virtuous.[5]

194 "Our Lord: give Thou us[1] what Thou hast promised us by Thy messengers, and disgrace Thou us not on the Day of Resurrection; Thou wilt not break the appointment."

195 And their Lord responded to them: "I cause not to be lost the work of any that works among you, male or female; you are of one another."[1] And those who emigrated and were turned out of their homes, and were hindered[2] in My cause, and fought and were killed: I will remove from them their evil deeds,[3] and I will make them enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, as a reward from God; and God, with Him is the best of rewards.

196 Let not delude thee the going to and fro of those who ignore warning[1] in the land:

197 A little enjoyment, then is their shelter Gehenna; and evil is the resting-place.

198 But those who are in prudent fear[1] of their Lord: they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow, they abiding eternally therein, as a welcome from God; and what is with God is better for the virtuous.

199 And among the doctors of the Law[1] are those who believe in[2] God and what was sent down to you, and what was sent down to them: — humble[3] towards God, they sell not the proofs[4] of God at a cheap price — those have their reward with their Lord; God is swift in reckoning.

200 O you who heed warning:[1] be patient; and vie in patience; and be steadfast;[2] and be in prudent fear[3] of God, that you might succeed.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

2 And give the fatherless[1] their property; and exchange not the bad for the good,[2] nor consume their property into your property; that is a great misdeed.[3]

3 And if you fear[1] that you will not do justice by the fatherless,[2] then marry what pleases you of women:[3] two or[4] three or[5] four. But if you fear[6] that you will not do justice, then one — or what your right hands[7] possess; that is more likely that you will not deviate.[8]

4 And give the women their dowries as a gift willingly;[1] but if they remit to you anything of it voluntarily, then consume it with satisfaction and pleasure.

And he that is free from need, let him abstain; and he that is poor, let him take[5] according to what is fitting.[6] And when you deliver to them their property, take witnesses over them. And sufficient is God as reckoner.

11 ¶4.2 God charges you concerning your children: for the male is the like of the portion of two females; but if there are women above two, then for them is two-thirds of what he[1] left; and if she is one, then for her is half; and for his parents: for each one of them[2] is one-sixth of what he left if he has a child. Then if he has not a child and there inherit from him his parents, for his mother is one-third; but if he has brothers or sisters:[3] for his mother is one-sixth, after a bequest he has made, or debt — your parents and your children: you know not which of them is nearer to you in benefit — as an obligation from God; God is knowing and wise.

15 ¶4.3 And those who commit sexual immorality[1] among your women, call to witness against them four from among you;[2] then if they bear witness, confine them to houses[3] until death takes them, or God makes for them another[4] path.[5]

16 And the two[1] who commit it[2] among you, hinder[3] them; but if they[4] repent and make right, let them[5] be;[6] God is accepting of repentance and merciful.[7]

19 O you who heed warning:[1] it is not lawful for you to inherit from women against their will;[2] and neither constrain them that you might take away part of what you gave them save that they commit manifest sexual immorality.[3] And live with them according to what is fitting.[4] And if you dislike them, it may be that you dislike a thing and God makes therein much good.

And that you be patient is best for you;[8] and God is forgiving and merciful.

believe in[5] God and the Last Day;[6] that is best, and best in respect of result.[7]

60 ¶4.9 Hast thou not considered[1] those who claim to believe in[2] what is sent down to thee, and what was sent down before thee, desiring to go for judgment to idols[3] when they were commanded to reject it?[4] And the satan[5] desires to lead them far astray.

61 And when it is said to them: "Come to what God has sent down, and to the Messenger,"[1] thou seest the waverers[2] turn away from[3] thee in aversion.

62 How will it be[1] when calamity befalls them because of what their hands have sent ahead?[2] Then will they come to thee, swearing by God: "We intended only good conduct and success!"[3]

63 Those are they of whom God knows what is in their hearts; turn thou away from them; but admonish thou them, and speak thou to them concerning their souls an effective[1] word.[2]

64 And We sent any messenger only that he[1] be obeyed by the leave of God. And had they, when they wronged their souls, come to thee and asked forgiveness of God, and the Messenger had asked forgiveness for them, they would have found God accepting of repentance and merciful.

96 Degrees from Him, and forgiveness and mercy; and God is forgiving and merciful.

97 ¶4.14 Those whom the angels take[1] wronging their souls — they say: "In what condition were you?"[2] Say they: "We were oppressed in the land." They say: "Was not God's earth spacious for you to emigrate therein?" — those: their shelter is Gehenna; and evil is it as a journey's end;

98 Save the oppressed among the men, and the women, and the children — without means,[1] nor guided to a path;

99 Those: it may be that God will pardon them; and God is pardoning and forgiving.

100 And whoso emigrates in the cause of God will find in the earth much refuge and abundance; and whoso leaves his house as an émigré to God and His messenger, then death overtakes him: his reward is upon[1] God; and God is forgiving and merciful.

101 ¶4.15 And when you are travelling in the earth, you do no wrong[1] to cut short some of the duty[2] if you fear[3] that those who ignore warning[4] will subject you to means of denial[5] — the false claimers of guidance[6] are an open enemy to you[7] —

102 And when[1] thou art among them,[2] uphold thou the duty[3] for them;[4] then let there stand a number of them[5] with thee, and let them take their arms; then when they[6] have submitted,[7] let them[8] be behind you[9] and let another number come that has not performed the duty,[10] and let them perform the duty[11] with thee; and let them[12] take their precautions and their arms. (Those who ignore warning[13] wish that you would neglect your arms and your equipment, so they might assault you in a single assault; but you do no wrong[14] if there is a hindrance[15] to you from rain or you are sick, that you lay aside your arms; but take your precautions: God has prepared for the false claimers of guidance[16] a humiliating punishment.)

103 And when you have concluded[1] the duty,[2] remember God standing, and sitting, and upon your sides,[3] and when you are at ease; but uphold the duty[4] — the duty[5] is upon the believers[6] a time-limited[7] Writ[8] —

104 And faint not in seeking the people;[1] if you are suffering, then are they suffering even as you are suffering; but you hope from God for that for which they hope not; and God is knowing and wise.

105 ¶4.16 We have sent down to thee the Writ[1] with the truth,[2] that thou mightest judge between men by what God has shown thee; and be thou not an advocate[3] for the treacherous;

106 And ask thou forgiveness of God; God is forgiving and merciful.

107 And argue thou not on behalf of those who deceive themselves; God loves not him who is treacherous and sinful.

108 They conceal from men, but they conceal not from God; and He is with them[1] when they plan by night what is displeasing to Him of speech;[2] and God encompasses what they do.

109 Here you are, those who have argued on their behalf in the life of this world; but who will argue with God on their behalf on the Day of Resurrection, or who will be their guardian?

110 And whoso does evil or wrongs his soul then seeks forgiveness of God, he will find God forgiving and merciful.

111 And whoso commits[1] a sin[2] only commits it against himself; and God is knowing and wise.

122 But those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: We will make them enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, they abiding eternally therein forever. The promise of God is true;[2] and who is more truthful than God in speech?

123 It[3] is not according to your vain desires,[1] nor the vain desires of the doctors of the Law;[2] whoso does evil has the recompense thereof and will not find, besides[3] God, ally or helper.

138 Bear thou tidings[1] to the waverers[2] that they have a painful punishment;

139 Those who take the false claimers of guidance[1] as allies rather than[2] the believers,[3] do they seek with them power and glory?[4] But power and glory[5] belong to God altogether.

140 (And He has sent down upon you[1] in the Writ[2] that when you hear the proofs[3] of God denied and mocked: "Sit not with them until they discourse vainly[4] concerning a subject[5] other than that; then would you be like them.") God will gather the waverers[6] and the false claimers of guidance[7] into Gehenna all together:

141 Those who watch and wait with regard to you. Then if there be a victory for you from God they say: "Were we not with you?" but if there be for the false claimers of guidance[1] a portion they say: "Did we not gain mastery over you,[2] but defended you against the believers?"[3] And God will judge between you on the Day of Resurrection; and God makes not for the false claimers of guidance[4] any path against the believers.[5]

142 ¶4.21 The waverers[1] seek to deceive God, but He is deceiving them; and when they rise up for the duty,[2] they rise up to be seen of men, and remember not God save a little,

143 Wavering in-between[1] — neither to these, nor to those; and he whom God causes to go astray, thou wilt not find for him a path.

144 O you who heed warning:[1] take not the false claimers of guidance[2] as allies instead of[3] the believers;[4] would you give God over[5] you a clear authority?

145 The waverers[1] will be in the lowest depths of the Fire; and thou wilt find no helper for them

146 Save those who repent, and make right, and hold fast to God, and are sincere in their doctrine[1] to God; those are with the believers,[2] and God will give the believers[3] a great reward.

147 What has God to do with your punishment if you are grateful and believe? And God is grateful and knowing.

148 God likes not the public mention of evil[1] save by one wronged;[2] and God is hearing and knowing.

149 If you reveal good, or keep it secret, or forgive evil[1] — God is pardoning and powerful.

151 It is they who are the false claimers of guidance[1] in truth;[2] and We have prepared for the false claimers of guidance[3] a humiliating punishment.

152 And those who believe in[1] God and His messengers and make not a distinction between any of them, those will God give their rewards; and God is forgiving and merciful.

154 And We raised above them the mount[1] for their agreement; and We said to them: "Enter the gate in submission";[2] and We said to them: "Transgress not the Sabbath"; and We took from them a stern agreement.

168 Those who ignore warning[1] and do wrong — God will not forgive them, nor will He guide them on a road

169 Save the road to Gehenna,[1] they abiding eternally therein forever; and that is easy for[2] God.

170 O mankind: the Messenger has come to you with the truth[1] from your Lord; so believe, it is better for you. And if you deny, to God belongs what is in the heavens and the earth; and God is knowing and wise.

171 O doctors of the Law:[1] exceed not bounds in your doctrine,[2] nor ascribe to God save the truth.[3] The Messiah,[4] Jesus,[5] son of Mary[6] was only the messenger of God, and His word which He conveyed to Mary,[7] and a spirit from Him. So believe in[8] God and His messengers, and say not: "Three." Desist; it is best for you. God is but One God. Glory[9] be to Him that He should have a son! To Him belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth; and God is sufficient as disposer of affairs.[10]

173 Then as for those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: He will give them their rewards in full, and increase them out of His bounty; and as for those who disdain and wax proud: He will punish them with a painful punishment; and they will not find for them, besides[2] God, ally or helper.

174 O mankind: there has come to you evidence from your Lord; and We have sent down to you a clear light.

grazing livestock save what is recited to you, hunting not being permitted when you are forbidden;[2] God ordains what He wills.

2 O you who heed warning:[1] violate[2] not the tokens of God,[3] nor the inviolable month,[4] nor the offering,[5] nor the necklaces,[6] nor the visitors to the inviolable house seeking the favour of their Lord and approval. And when you are permitted,[7] then you may hunt. And let not hatred of a people who turned you away from[8] the inviolable place of worship[9] move you to commit injustice.[10] And assist one another to virtue and prudent fear;[11] and assist not one another in sin[12] and enmity. And be in prudent fear[13] of God; God is severe in retribution.

3 Forbidden to you is carrion, and blood, and the flesh of swine, and that dedicated to other than God, and the strangled, and the beaten, and the fallen, and the gored, and that eaten by the beast of prey save what you slaughter, and that sacrificed upon the altar, and that you seek apportionment by divining arrows[1] — that is perfidy[2] — (this day have those who ignore warning[3] despaired[4] of your doctrine,[5] so fear them not, but fear Me; this day have I perfected for you your doctrine[6] and completed My favour upon you, and approved for you submission[7] as doctrine[8]) but whoso is compelled by hunger, without inclination to sin[9] — God is forgiving and merciful.

shame[1] of his brother. He said: “Woe is me! Am I not able to be as this raven, and hide the shame[2] of my brother?” And he became of the remorseful.

32 For that cause We prescribed for the children of Israel that whoso takes[1] a life[2] other than for a life[3] or corruption in the land, it will be as if he killed mankind altogether; (and whoso gives life,[4] it will be as if he gave life to mankind altogether — and Our messengers came to them with clear signs, then many of them after that[5] are committers of excess in the earth —)

33 The reward[1] but of those who war against God and His messenger, and strive to work corruption in the land, that[2] they[3] be killed, or they be crucified,[4] or their hands and feet be cut off on opposite sides, or they be banished from the land. That[...].[5] They[6] have disgrace in the World; and they have in the Hereafter a great punishment

He wills. And there increases many of them in inordinacy and denial what was sent down to thee from thy Lord. And We have cast among them enmity and hatred until the Day of Resurrection; whenever they lit the fire of war, God extinguished it; and they strive in the land for corruption; and God loves not the workers of corruption.

65 And had the doctors of the Law[1] believed and been in prudent fear,[2] We would have removed their evil deeds[3] from them and made them enter the Gardens of Bliss.

66 And had they upheld[1] the Torah and the Gospel[2] and what was sent down to them from their Lord, they would have eaten from above them and from under their feet.[3] Among them is a moderate community; but many of them, evil is what they do.

67 ¶5.10 O Messenger: convey thou what has been sent down to thee from thy Lord; and if thou do it not, then thou wilt not have conveyed His message. And God will protect thee from men. God guides not the people of the false claimers of guidance.[1]

68 Say thou: "O doctors of the Law:[1] you have nothing to stand upon until you uphold[2] the Torah and the Gospel[3] and what was sent down to you from your Lord."[4] And there increases many of them in inordinacy and denial what was sent down to thee from thy Lord; so grieve thou not over the people of the false claimers of guidance.[5]

69 Those who heed warning,[1] and those who hold to Judaism,[2] and the Sabaeans,[3] and the Christians[4] — whoso believes in[5] God and the Last Day and works righteousness — no fear will be upon them, nor will they grieve.

70 We took an agreement of the children of Israel and sent to them messengers. Whenever a messenger came to them with what their souls desired not, a faction[1] they denied, and a faction they killed,

71 And considered there would be no means of denial,[1] so they became blind and deaf. Then turned God towards them; then became many among them blind and deaf; and God sees what they do.

72 They have denied who say: "God is the Messiah,[1] son of Mary."[2] And the Messiah[3] said: "O children of Israel: serve God, my Lord and your Lord; whoso ascribes a partnership[4] to God, him[5] has God forbidden the Garden, and his shelter is the Fire; and for the wrongdoers[6] there are no helpers."

73 They have denied who say: "God is the third of three." And there is no god save One God. And if they desist not from so saying, there will touch those who ignore warning[1]

74 Will they then not[1] turn to God and seek His forgiveness? And God is forgiving and merciful.

75 The Messiah,[1] son of Mary,[2] was but a messenger; messengers had passed away before him;[3] and his mother was a woman of truth; they both ate food.[4] See thou how We make plain[5] the proofs[6] to them; then see thou how they are deluded.

76 Say thou: "Serve you, besides[1] God, what has power over you for neither harm nor benefit?" And God, He is the Hearing, the Knowing.

81 And had they believed in[1] God and the Prophet and what has been sent down to him, they would not have taken them as allies; but many among them are perfidious.[2]

82 Thou wilt find the strongest of men in enmity to those who heed warning[1] the Rabbinic Jews[2] and the idolaters;[3] and thou wilt find the nearest of them in love to those who heed warning[4] those who say: "We are Christians";[5] for it is that[6] among them are priests and monks, and that they[7] wax not proud!

83 And when they listen to what has been sent down to the Messenger,[1] thou seest their eyes overflow with tears because of what they recognise of the truth.[2] They say: "Our Lord: we believe, so write Thou us down among the witnesses;

103 God appointed not any baḥīrah[1] or sā'ibah[2] or waṣīlah[3] or ḥām[4] — but those who ignore warning[5] invent lies[6] about God; and most of them do not reason.

104 And when it is said to them: "Come to what God has sent down, and to the Messenger," they say: "Sufficient for us is that upon which we found our fathers."[1] Even though their fathers knew not anything and were not guided?

105 O you who heed warning:[1] upon you are your souls;[2] whoso has gone astray cannot harm you when you are guided. To God is your return all together; then He will inform you of what you did.

106 O you who heed warning:[1] a witness between you when death approaches one of you at the time of bequest is two just men among you; or two others from other than yourselves if you are travelling in the earth when the calamity of death befalls you. Detain them[2] after the duty,[3] and they[4] shall swear by God, if you doubt:[5] "We would not sell it for a price,[6] though he were a relative,[7] nor will we conceal the witness of God; then would we be among the sinners."

28 The truth is,[1] what they concealed before will be clear to them; and if they were sent back, they would return to what they were forbidden; and they are liars.

29 And they say: "There is only our life in the World, and we will not be raised."

30 And if thou couldst see when they are set before their Lord: — He will say: "Is then this not[1] the truth?"[2] They will say: "Verily,[3] by our Lord!" He will say: "Then taste the punishment for what you denied!"

31 ¶6.4 They have lost who deny the meeting with God; when[1] the Hour has come upon them unexpectedly, they will say: "O our regret over what we neglected concerning it!" And they will bear their burdens upon their backs; in truth,[2] evil is what they will bear.

32 And the life of this world is only play and diversion; and the abode of the Hereafter is better for those of prudent fear.[1] Will you then not[2] use reason!

33 We know that it grieves thee what they say; and they deny not thee, but the wrongdoers[1] reject the proofs[2] of God.

34 And messengers were denied before thee; but they were patient over that wherein they were denied and hindered[1] until Our help came to them. And there is none to change[2] the words of God; and there has already come to thee some of the report of the emissaries.

35 And if their evasion be hard for thee: if thou art able to seek a tunnel in the earth or a stairway in the sky to bring to them a proof[...].[1] And had God willed, He would have gathered them together to the guidance; so be thou not of the ignorant.

36 There respond only those who hear; and the dead, God raises them — then to Him will they be returned.

37 And they say: "Oh, that a proof[1] had but[2] been sent down upon him from his Lord!" Say thou: "God is able to send down a proof."[3] But most of them know not:[4]

38 And there is no creature in the earth, nor bird flying on its wings save they are communities the likes of you — We have not neglected anything in the Writ[1] — then to their Lord will they be gathered.

39 And those who deny Our proofs[1] are deaf and dumb, in darkness.[2] Whom God wills, He leads him astray; and whom He wills, He sets him on a straight path.

40 Say thou: "Have you considered:[1] if the punishment of God comes upon you, or the Hour comes upon you, will you call to other than God, if you be truthful?"[2]

41 The truth is,[1] to Him will you call; and He will remove that for which you call to Him if He wills; and you will forget that[2] to which you ascribe a partnership.[3]

42 ¶6.5 And We have sent to communities before thee; then We took them with affliction and adversity, that they might humble themselves.

43 Oh, that when Our disaster came upon them they had but[1] humbled themselves! But their hearts hardened, and the satan[2] made fair to them what they were doing.

44 So when they forgot that whereof they had been reminded, We opened upon them the gates of all things; when[1] they had exulted in what they were given, We took them suddenly; and then were they in despair,

45 And cut off was the root[1] of the people who did wrong; and praise belongs to God, the Lord of All Creation!

46 Say thou: "Have you considered:[1] if God takes away your hearing and your sight and seals your hearts, who is the god save God who will restore it to you?" See thou how We expound the proofs;[2] then they turn away.

47 Say thou: "Have you considered:[1] if the punishment of God come to you unexpectedly or with warning,[2] will there be destroyed save the wrongdoing[3] people?"

48 And We send the emissaries only as bearers of glad tidings and warners; then whoso believes and makes right: no fear will be upon them, nor will they grieve.

And many lead astray by their vain desires,[2] without knowledge;[3] thy Lord: He best knows the transgressors.

you are idolaters.[5]

122 ¶6.15 Is one who was dead and to whom We gave life and for whom We appointed a light wherein he walks among men like one in darkness[1] from which he cannot come out? Thus is made fair to the false claimers of guidance[2] what they do.[3]

123 And thus[1] have We appointed in every city its greatest lawbreakers, that they should scheme therein; and they scheme only against themselves, and they perceive not.

124 And when a proof[1] comes to them, they say: "We will not believe until we be given the like of what was given the messengers of God."[2] God best knows where He places His message; there will befall those who are lawbreakers humiliation before God and severe punishment for what they schemed.

125 And whom God wills to guide, He expands his breast towards submission;[1] and whom He wills to lead astray, He makes his breast constricted, distressed, as if he were ascending into the sky; thus does God appoint abomination for those who do not believe.[2] proofs[2] for people who take heed;

127 They have the Abode of Peace with their Lord, and He is their ally because of what they did.

128 And the day He gathers them all together: "O congregation of domini:[1] you have desired many[2] among the servi."[3] And their allies[4] among the servi[5] will say: "Our Lord: we benefited one another; but we have reached our term which Thou appointedst[6] for us." He will say: "The Fire is your dwelling, you abiding eternally therein!" save that God should will; thy Lord is wise and knowing.

And there has come to you clear evidence from your Lord, and guidance, and a mercy; then who is more unjust than he who denies the proofs[2] of God, and turns away from them? 82 And the response of his people was only that they said: "Turn them out of your city; they are a people who keep themselves pure!"

83 And We delivered him and his household save his wife; she was of those who stayed behind;

84 And We rained upon them a rain.[1] Then see thou how was the final outcome of the lawbreakers.

87 "And if a number among you believes in[1] that wherewith I have been sent, and a number believes not: be patient until God judges between us; and He is the best of judges."

88 Said the eminent ones who had waxed proud among his people: "We will turn thee, O Shuʿayb, and those who heed warning[1] with thee, out of our city if you return not to our creed." He said: "Even though we be unwilling?

89 "We should have invented a lie about God if we returned to your creed after God has delivered us from it. It is not for us to return to it save if God our Lord should will. Our Lord encompasses all things in knowledge. In God have we placed our trust." — "Our Lord, decide Thou between us and our people with justice,[1] for Thou art the best of those who give decision."

90 And said the eminent ones who disbelieved[1] among his people: "If you follow Shuʿayb, you will then be the losers."

91 So the earthquake seized them; and morning found them lying prone in their home,

92 Those who denied Shuʿayb, as though they had never lived[1] therein; those who denied Shuʿayb, it was they who were the losers.

94 ¶7.12 And We sent not to a city a prophet save that We took its people with affliction and adversity, that they might humble themselves.

95 Then We changed the place of evil[1] for good until they increased in number[2] and said: "Adversity and prosperity did touch our fathers,"[3] — then We took them unawares, when they perceived not.

96 And had the people of the cities believed and been in prudent fear,[1] We would have opened upon them blessings from the heaven and the earth; but they denied, so We seized them for what they earned.

97 Did then the people of the cities feel secure from Our might coming upon them by night while they slept?

98 Or did the people of the cities feel secure from Our might coming upon them at midday while they played?

99 Did they then feel secure from the scheme of God? And none feels secure from the scheme of God save the losing people.

101 Those cities: We relate some of their reports to thee; and their messengers came to them with clear signs, but they were not to believe in[1] what they had denied before; thus God seals the hearts of the false claimers of guidance.[2]

102 And We found not for most of them any covenant;[1] but We found most of them perfidious.[2]

103 Then We raised up after them Moses with Our proofs[1] to Pharaoh[2] and his eminent ones, but they wronged them; then see thou how was the final outcome of the workers of corruption: —

104 And Moses said: "O Pharaoh:[1] I am a messenger from the Lord of All Creation,

106 Said he: "If thou hast come with a proof,[1] bring thou it, if thou be of the truthful."

109 ¶7.14 Said the eminent ones of the people of Pharaoh:[1] "This is a learned sorcerer[2]

110 "Who would turn you out of your land; so what do you command?"

111 They said: "Delay thou him and his brother, and send thou into the cities gatherers

112 "To bring to thee every learned sorcerer."[1]

113 And the sorcerers[1] came to Pharaoh.[2] They said: "There is a reward for us if we be the victors."[3]

114 Said he: "Yea; and you will be of those brought near."[1]

115 They said: "O Moses: wilt thou cast, or will we be the ones who cast?"

116 He said: "Cast." And when they cast, they bewitched the eyes of the people, and struck fear into them, and they produced a mighty sorcery.[1]

117 And We instructed[1] Moses: "Cast thou thy staff," — and then it swallowed up what they falsified!

118 And the truth[1] was established, and what they did made vain.

120 And the sorcerers[1] fell in submission.[2]

123 Said Pharaoh:[1] "You believe in[2] him[3] before I gave you leave. This is a scheme you schemed in the city that you might turn out its people. But you will come to know!

135 But when We removed the scourge from them to a term they were to reach, then they reneged.

136 And We took vengeance on them, and drowned them[1] in the sea[2] because they denied Our proofs[3] and were heedless of them.

137 And We caused the people who were despised to inherit the east of the land and its west which We had blessed.[1] And the most fair word of thy Lord was fulfilled to the children of Israel because they were patient; and We annihilated what Pharaoh[2] and his people wrought and what they built.[3]

138 And We passed the children of Israel through the sea; and they came upon a people devoted to[1] idols[2] which they had. They said: "O Moses: make thou for us a god, just as they have gods." He said: "You are a people in ignorance.

139 "These: doomed to ruin is what they are in, and vain is what they have been doing."

140 He said: "Am I to seek for you a god other than God when He has favoured you above all mankind?"

142 ¶7.17 And We appointed for Moses thirty nights, and completed them with ten; so he completed the time appointed by his Lord of forty nights. And Moses said to his brother Aaron: "Be thou my successor[1] among my people; and make thou right; and follow thou not the path of the workers of corruption."

143 And when Moses came at Our appointed time and his Lord spoke to him, he said: "My Lord: show Thou me that I might look upon Thee." Said He: "Thou wilt not see Me; but look thou upon the mountain: if it should remain in its place, then thou wilt see Me." And when his Lord was revealed[1] upon the mountain, He made it level;[2] and Moses fell down thunderstruck.[3] Then when he recovered, he said: "Glory[4] be to Thee! I turn to Thee repentant; and I am the first of the believers!"[5]

144 Said He: "O Moses: I have chosen thee above mankind, by My messages and by My words; so hold thou to what I have given thee, and be thou among the grateful."

145 And We wrote for him on the tablets every[1] thing as an admonition and an explanation for everything:[2] "Hold thou them fast, and command thou thy people to take the best thereof. I will show thee the abode of the perfidious:[3]

150 And when Moses returned to his people, wrathful and grieved, he said: "Evil is what you took up while I was away;[1] were you impatient over the command of your Lord?" And he cast down the tablets, and seized his brother by the head, dragging him to him. Said he: "Son of my mother: the people despised me and were about to kill me. 160 And We divided them into twelve tribes as communities.[1] And We instructed[2] Moses when his people sought water of him: "Strike thou with thy staff the rock"; and there gushed therefrom twelve springs — each people knew its drinking-place. And We caused the cloud to overshadow them, and sent down upon them manna and quails: "Eat of the good things that We provided you." And they wronged Us not, but they wronged their souls.

171 And when We raised[1] the mountain above them as if it were a canopy: — and they supposed it was to fall upon them[2] — "Hold fast what We give you; and remember what is therein, that you might be in prudent fear."[3]

172 ¶7.22 And when thy Lord brought forth from the children of Adam, from their backs,[1] their progeny, and made them bear witness as to themselves: "Am I not your Lord?" — they said: "Verily,[2] we bear witness." — "Lest you say on the Day of Resurrection: 'Of this were we unaware,'

173 "Or you say: 'Our fathers but ascribed a partnership[1] before, and we were progeny after them; wilt Thou then destroy us for what the creators of vanity did?'"

174 And thus[1] do We set out and detail[2] the proofs,[3] and that they might return.

175 And recite thou to them the report of him to whom We gave Our proofs,[1] but he detached himself from them; so the satan[2] followed[3] him, and he was of those who err.

65 ¶8.9 O Prophet: rouse thou the believers[1] to fight: if there be of you twenty patient, they will defeat two hundred; and if there be of you a hundred, they will defeat a thousand of those who ignore warning,[2] because they are people who understand not.[3]

66 Now has God lightened for you — and He knows there is weakness in you — so if there be of you a hundred patient, they will defeat two hundred; and if there be of you a thousand, they will defeat two thousand, by the leave of God; and God is with the patient.[1]

67 It is not for a prophet to have captives until he has battled strenuously[1] in the land. You desire the goods of the World, and God desires the Hereafter; and God is exalted in might and wise.

68 Had it not been for a Writ[1] from God which had gone before, a great punishment would have touched you for what you took.

69 So eat of what you took in spoils as lawful and good, and be in prudent fear[1] of God; God is forgiving and merciful.

70 ¶8.10 O Prophet: say thou to those in your hands of the captives: “If God knows any good in your hearts, He will give you better than what has been taken from you, and will forgive you”; and God is forgiving and merciful.

3 And a proclamation from God and His messenger to mankind on the day of the greater pilgrimage:[1] "God is free of the idolaters,[2] as is[3] His messenger. And if you repent, it is better for you; but if you turn away, know that you cannot escape[4] God." And bear thou tidings[5] to those who ignore warning[6] of a painful punishment,

4 Save the idolaters[1] with whom you made a covenant then who have not been deficient towards you in anything, nor assisted anyone against you; so fulfil to them your[2] covenant to its[3] term; God loves those of prudent fear.[4]

5 And when the inviolable months[1] have passed, then kill the idolaters[2] wheresoever you find them, and seize them, and restrain[3] them, and lie in wait for them at every place of ambush. But if they repent,[4] and uphold the duty,[5] and render the purity,[6] then let them go their way; God is forgiving and merciful.

29 Fight[1] those who believe not in[2] God or the Last Day, and make not unlawful what God and His messenger have made unlawful,[3] and adhere not to the doctrine[4] of truth[5] among those given[6] the Writ,[7] until they make[8] reparation[9] under supervision[10] when they are brought low.

30 ¶9.5 And the Rabbinic Jews[1] say: "'Uzayr[2] is the son of God";[3] and the Christians[4] say: "The Messiah[5] is the son of God." That is the speech of their mouths; they imitate the speech of those who ignored warning[6] before. May God curse them![7] How are they deluded?[8]

31 They take their rabbis and their religious scholars as lords rather than[1] God, and the Messiah,[2] son of Mary;[3] and they were not commanded save to serve One God; there is no god save He. Glory[4] be to Him above that to which they ascribe a partnership![5]

32 They want to extinguish the light of God with their mouths; and God refuses save to perfect His light, though the false claimers of guidance[1] be averse.

33 He it is that sent His messenger with the guidance and the doctrine[1] of truth,[2] that He might make it manifest over all doctrine,[3] though the idolaters[4] be averse.

34 O you who heed warning:[1] many among the rabbis and the religious scholars consume the wealth of men in vanity, and turn away from[2] the path of God. And those who amass gold and silver and spend it not in the cause of God: give thou them tidings[3] of a painful punishment: —

39 Save you go forth, He will punish you with a painful punishment and replace you with a people other than you — and you will not harm Him at all; and God is over all things powerful —

40 Save you help him.[1] And God helped him when those who ignore warning[2] turned him out, the second of two, when they[3] were in the cave, when he said to his companion: "Grieve thou not; God is with us."[4] Then God sent down His tranquillity upon him, and strengthened him with forces you did not see, and made the word of those who ignore warning[5] the lowest; and the word of God, it is the uppermost; and God is exalted in might and wise.

41 Go forth, light or[1] heavy, and strive with your wealth and your lives in the cause of God; that is best for you, if you would know.

42 Had it been goods[1] nearby and a short journey, they would have followed thee; but far for them was the destination. And they will swear by God: "Had we been able, we would have gone forth with you," destroying their souls;[2] and God knows that they are 45 There but ask leave of thee those who believe not in[1] God and the Last Day, and whose hearts doubt, so they in their doubt are wavering.

63 Know they not that whoso works against God and His messenger, for him is the fire of Gehenna, wherein he abides eternally? That is the Tremendous Disgrace.

And you have enjoyed your lot as they enjoyed their lot who were before you; and you have discoursed vainly[1] like those discoursed vainly; those: their works are vain in the World and the Hereafter; and it is they who are the losers.

70 Has not the report of those before them come to them: the people of Noah, and ʿĀd, and Thamūd, and the people of Abraham, and the people[1] of Madyan,[2] and the cities thrown down? Their messengers brought them clear signs; and God wronged them not, but they wronged their souls.

71 And the believing men[1] and the believing women[2] are allies of one another:[3] they enjoin what is fitting,[4] and forbid perversity,[5] and uphold the duty,[6] and render the purity,[7] and obey God and His messenger;[8] those: God will have mercy on them; God is exalted in might and wise.

72 And God has promised the believing men[1] and the believing women[2] gardens beneath which rivers flow — they abiding eternally therein — and goodly dwellings in gardens of perpetual abode; and approval from God is greater;[3] that[4] is the Great Achievement.

73 ¶9.10 O Prophet: strive thou[1] against the atheists[2] and the waverers,[3] and be thou harsh with them; and their shelter is Gehenna; and evil is the journey's end.

74 They swear by God that they did not say — when they did say — the word of denial, and denied after their submission.[1] And they purposed what they have not reached; and they resented only that God and His messenger enriched them of His[2] bounty. Then if they repent, it will be better for them; and if they turn away, God will punish them with a painful punishment in the World and the Hereafter; and they will not have in the earth any ally or helper.

75 And among them is he who made a covenant with God: "If He gives us of His bounty, we will give charity and be among the righteous."

76 Then when He gave them of His bounty, they withheld it and turned away; and they are averse.

77 And He requited them with wavering[1] in their hearts to the day they meet Him, because they broke to God what they promised Him, and because they lied.

81 ¶9.11 Those who remained behind exulted at their remaining behind the messenger of God, and disliked to strive with their wealth and their lives in the cause of God; and they said: "Go not forth in the heat." Say thou: "The fire of Gehenna is more intense in heat," would that they understood.

82 Then let them laugh a little and weep much, as reward for what they earned.

84 And perform thou not the duty[1] for any among them that dies ever, nor stand thou over his grave; they denied God and His messenger, and died while they were perfidious.[2]

85 And let not their wealth or their children impress thee; God but intends to punish them thereby in the World, and that their souls should depart while they are false claimers of guidance.[1]

86 And when a sūrah[1] is sent down to believe in[2] God and strive alongside[3] His messenger, the affluent among them ask leave of thee, saying: "Leave thou us to be with those who sit."

113 It is not for the Prophet and those who heed warning[1] to ask for forgiveness for the idolaters,[2] though they be relatives, after it has become clear to them that they are the companions of Hell.

114 And the request for forgiveness of Abraham for his father was only because of a promise he had promised him;[1] but when it had become clear to him that he was an enemy to God, he declared himself quit of him;[2] Abraham was compassionate and clement.

115 And God would not send a people astray after He has guided them until He has made plain[1] to them of what they should be in prudent fear;[2] God knows all things.

117 God has turned towards the Prophet, and the émigrés, and the helpers who followed him in the hour of hardship, after the hearts of a faction among them had almost deviated; then turned He towards them — He is to them kind and merciful —

118 And towards the three who were left behind when[1] the earth had become straitened for them, vast as it was,[2] and their souls had become straitened for them, and they thought that there was no refuge from God save to Him;[3] then turned He towards them, that they might turn.[4] God, He is the Accepting of Repentance, the Merciful.

119 ¶9.15 O you who heed warning:[1] be in prudent fear[2] of God, and be with the truthful.

120 It is not for the people of the city[1] and those around them of the desert Arabs[2] to remain behind the messenger of God, and prefer their lives to his life.[3] Is it not that[4] there befalls them neither thirst, nor fatigue, nor hunger, in the cause of God, neither take they any step that enrages the atheists,[5] nor achieve they against the enemy an attainment save that it is recorded for them as a righteous deed! God causes not to be lost the reward of the doers of good.

Then they turn away. God has turned away their hearts because they are people who understand not.

5 He it is that made the sun an illumination, and the moon a light;[1] and He determined for it phases, that you might know the number of years and the reckoning. God created that not save in truth;[2] He sets out and details[3] the proofs[4] for people who know.

a scheme concerning Our proofs.[1] Say thou: "God is swifter in scheme!" Our messengers[2] write down what you scheme.

22 He it is that lets you travel in the earth and the sea; when[1] you have boarded[2] ships[3] and sailed by them with a good breeze and exulted thereat––[4] A tempest wind came upon them, and the waves came on them from every side, and they thought they were encompassed therein; they called to God, sincere to Him in doctrine:[5] "If Thou deliver us from this, we will be among the grateful!"

23 Then when He delivers them, they rebel in the earth without cause.[1]) O mankind: your sectarian zealotry[2] is but against yourselves, — the enjoyment of the life of this world — then to Us is your return and We will inform you of what you did.

24 The likeness of the life of this world is but like water We send down from the sky, and the plants of the earth mingle with it, whereof men and cattle eat: when[1] the earth has taken her decoration, and is made fair, and its people think they have power over it, Our command comes by night or by day, and We make it reaped as if it had not flourished the day before[2] — thus do We set out and detail[3] the proofs[4] for people who reflect.

25 And God calls to the Abode of Peace, and guides whom He wills to a straight path.

26 For those who do good is the best and more; and there will cover their faces neither dust[1] nor disgrace. Those are the companions of the Garden; therein they abide eternally.

27 And for those who earn evil deeds[1] is a reward for evil[2] by the like thereof; and disgrace will cover them — they will not have against God any defender — as if their faces were covered with pieces of darkening night. Those are the companions of the Fire; therein they abide eternally.

28 And the day We gather them all together, then will We say to those who ascribe a partnership:[1] "Your places — you and your partners!"[2] Then We will separate them, and their partners[3] will say: "It was not us you served.

29 "Sufficient is God as witness between us and you; we were, of your service, unaware."

30 Thereupon will every soul prove[1] what it did before; and they will be returned to God, their protector, the Truth;[2] and strayed from them will be what they invented.

brings forth the dead from the living, and He who directs the matter[2] — then will they say: "God"[3] — then say thou: "Will you then not[4] be in prudent fear!"

32 For that is God, your Lord, the Truth;[1] then what is there after the truth but error? How then are you diverted?

33 Thus[1] did the word of thy Lord become binding[2] upon those who are perfidious,[3] that they do not believe.[4]

34 Say thou: "Is there among your partners[1] one that begins creation then repeats it?" Say thou: "God begins creation then repeats it; how then are you deluded?"

35 Say thou: "Is there among your partners[1] one that guides to the truth?"[2] Say thou: "God guides to the truth;[3] is then He who[4] guides to the truth[5] worthier[6] to be followed, or he who guides not save he be guided? Then what ails you? How judge you?"

36 And most of them follow only assumption;[1] assumption avails nothing against the truth.[2] God knows what they do.

37 And this Qur'an[1] is not such as could be invented by other than[2] God; but it is a confirmation of what is before it,[3] and an exposition of the Writ about which there is no doubt,[4] from the Lord of All Creation.

39 The truth is,[1] they have denied what they compassed not in knowledge, and whose interpretation has not yet come to them. Thus denied those before them. Then see thou how was the final outcome of the wrongdoers.[2]

63 Those who heed warning[1] and are in prudent fear:[2]

71 ¶10.8 And recite thou to them the report of Noah, when he said to his people: "O my people: if my presence[1] and my reminding you of the proofs[2] of God be grievous to you, then in God have I placed my trust; so resolve upon your plan[3] and your partners;[4] then let not your plan[5] be unclear[6] to you;[7] then move decisively[8] against me, and grant me no respite.

72 "And if you turn away, then have I asked of you no reward; my reward is only upon[1] God; and I have been commanded to be among those submitting."[2]

73 Then they denied him;[1] so We delivered him, and those with him in the ship, and made them successors, and We drowned those who denied Our proofs.[2] Then see thou

75 Then raised We up, after them, Moses and Aaron before Pharaoh[1] and his eminent ones with Our proofs,[2] but they had waxed proud; and they were a people of lawbreakers.

83 ¶10.9 And there believed not Moses save a progeny of his people, for fear of Pharaoh[1] and their eminent ones, that they would subject them to means of denial;[2] and Pharaoh[3] was exalted in the land, and he was of the committers of excess.

88 And Moses said: "Our Lord: Thou hast given Pharaoh[1] and his eminent ones adornment and wealth in the life of this world, our Lord, that they might lead astray from Thy path. Our Lord: destroy Thou their wealth, and harden Thou their hearts, so that they believe not until they see the painful punishment."

But whoso denies it among the parties,[7] then the Fire is his appointed place.[8] And be thou not in doubt about it, it is the truth[9] from thy Lord; but most men do not believe.[10]

18 And who is more unjust than he who invents a lie about God? Those will be brought before their Lord, and the witnesses will say: "These are they who lied against their Lord." In truth,[1] the curse of God is upon the wrongdoers:[2]

19 Those who turn away from[1] the path of God and would make it crooked, and of the Hereafter they are deniers.

20 Those will not escape[1] in the earth, and they have not, besides[2] God, any allies. Doubled for them is the punishment; they could not hear, neither did they see;

21 Those are they who have lost their souls, and strayed from them is what they invented.

22 Without doubt, it is they, in the Hereafter, who will be the greatest losers.

23 Those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds, and humble themselves unto their Lord: those are the companions of the Garden; therein they abide eternally.

24 The likeness of the two factions is like the blind and the deaf, and the seeing and the hearer: are they equal in likeness? Will you then not[1] take heed!

truth,[3] ʿĀd denied their Lord — so away with ʿĀd, the people of Hūd![4]

61 ¶11.6 And to Thamūd, their brother Ṣāliḥ. He said: “O my people: serve God; you have no god but He. He produced you from the earth and settled you therein, so ask forgiveness of Him; then turn to Him; my Lord is near and responsive.”

62 They said: “O Ṣāliḥ: thou hadst been among us one in whom hope was placed before this![1] Dost thou forbid us to serve what our fathers served? We are, about that to which thou invitest us, in sceptical doubt.”

63 He said: “O my people: have you considered:[1] if I be upon clear evidence from my Lord, and He has given me mercy from Him, then who would help me against God if I disobeyed Him? Then would you not increase me other than in loss.”[2]

64 And: “O my people: this is the she-camel of God: to you a proof.[1] So leave her to feed in God’s earth, and touch her not with evil[2] lest a near punishment seize you.”

65 Then they hamstrung[1] her;[2] and he said: “Enjoy yourselves in your homes three days — that is a promise not to be belied.”

66 And when Our command came, We delivered Ṣāliḥ and those who heeded

71 And his wife was standing; and she laughed; and We gave her glad tidings of Isaac, and after Isaac, Jacob.

72 She said: "Oh, woe is me! Shall I bear a child when I am an old woman and this, my husband, an old man? This is an amazing thing!"

73 They said: "Dost thou marvel at the command of God? The mercy of God and His blessings be upon you, people of the house; He is praiseworthy and glorious."

with Us concerning the people of Lot;[1]

75 Abraham was clement, compassionate, penitent.
76 "O Abraham: forsake thou this; the command of thy Lord has come, and there will come to them a punishment which cannot be repelled."

77 And when Our messengers came to Lot, he was distressed for them and straitened with unease for them;[1] and he said: "This is a trying[2] day."

78 And his people came to him, hastening towards him; and before had they been doing evil deeds.[1] He said: "O my people: these are my daughters; they are purer for you. So be in prudent fear[2] of God, and disgrace me not concerning my guests. Is then there not[3] among you a right-minded man?"[4]

79 They said: "Thou knewest we have no right[1] to[2] thy daughters; and thou knowest what we desire."

80 He said: "Would that I had power against you, or could take shelter in a strong support!"

81 Said they: "O Lot: we are messengers of thy Lord; they will not reach thee. And travel thou with thy household during a portion of the night; and let not any one of you turn around save thy wife — there will befall her what befalls them. Their appointment is the morning; is then the morning not[1] near?"

98 He will precede his people on the Day of Resurrection, and lead them to the Fire, and evil is the place[1] led to.

99 And they[1] were followed[2] here[3] by a curse; and on the Day of Resurrection evil is the gift given.

100 That is from the reports of the cities We relate to thee; among them[1] are standing and reaped.[2]

101 And We wronged them not, but they wronged their souls; and their gods to whom they called, besides[1] God, availed them nothing when the command of thy Lord came; and they increased them not save in ruin.

102 And thus is the seizing of thy Lord, when He takes the cities when they are doing wrong;[1] His seizing is painful and strong.

103 In that is a proof[1] for those who fear the punishment of the Hereafter; that is a day to which mankind will be gathered; and that is a day witnessed;

104 And We delay it not save to a set term.

105 On the day it comes no soul will speak save by His leave. And among them will be wretched and glad:

106 And as for those wretched — then in the Fire! — they will have therein roaring[1] and wailing,

107 They abiding eternally therein so long as the heavens and the earth endure save that thy Lord should will; thy Lord is doer of what He wills.

108 And as for those glad — then in the Garden! — they abiding eternally therein so long as the heavens and the earth endure save that thy Lord should will; a gift without end.[1]

109 So be thou not in doubt concerning what these serve: they serve only as their fathers served before; and We will pay them in full their portion without reduction.

110 ¶11.10 And We gave Moses the Writ;[1] then were there differences concerning it. And were it not for a word that preceded from thy Lord, it would have been decided between them;[2] and they are in sceptical doubt concerning it.[3] cease not to differ,

119 Save he upon whom thy Lord has mercy. And for that[1] He created them; and the word of thy Lord will be fulfilled:[2] "I will fill Gehenna with the jinna[3] and mankind all together."

120 And all We relate to thee from the reports of the messengers is that whereby We make firm thy heart. And there has come to thee in this the truth,[1] and an admonition, and a reminder for the believers.[2]

121 And say thou to those who do not believe:[1] "Work according to your power[2] — we are working.

122 "And wait — we are waiting."

123 And to God belongs the unseen of the heavens and the earth; and to Him will be returned the whole matter. So serve thou Him, and place thou thy trust in Him; and thy Lord is not unmindful of what you do.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

33 He said: "My Lord: prison is preferable to me than that to which they[1] invite me; and save Thou divert their[2] plan from me, I will incline to them[3] and be of the ignorant."

34 And his Lord responded to him, and diverted their[1] plan from him; He is the Hearing, the Knowing.

97 They said: “O our father: ask thou forgiveness for us for our transgressions;[1] we were of the offenders.”[2]

98 He said: “I will ask forgiveness for you of my Lord; He is the Forgiving, the Merciful.”

My Lord has made it true.[4] And He did good to me when He took me out of the prison, and brought you from the desert[5] after the satan[6] had provoked to evil between me and my brothers. 16 Say thou: "Who is the Lord of the heavens and the earth?" Say thou: "God." Say thou: "Have you then taken, besides[1] Him, allies which have not power to do themselves benefit or harm?" Say thou: "Is the blind equal to the seeing? Or is darkness[2] equal to the light?" If[3] they have ascribed to God partners[4] that created the like of His creation,[5] then the creation appears the same to them.[6] Say thou: "God is creator of all things, and He is the One, the Vanquishing."

17 He sends down from the sky water, and the valleys flow according to their measure, then the flood carries a swelling froth; and from what they burn in the fire seeking[1] ornaments or tools there is a froth like it. Thus does God present[2] truth[3] and vanity: as for the froth, it departs as dross; and as for what is of benefit to men, it remains in the earth. Thus does God strike similitudes.

18 For those who respond to their Lord is the best; and those who respond not to Him: had they all that is in the earth altogether, and the like thereof with it, they would seek to ransom themselves[1] thereby. Those have an evil reckoning, and their shelter is Gehenna; and evil is the resting-place.

26 God expands provision for whom He wills, and He straitens. And they exult at the life of this world; but the life of this world compared with[1] the Hereafter is only a passing pleasure.[2]

27 ¶13.4 And those who ignore warning[1] say: "Oh, that a proof[2] were but[3] sent down upon him from his Lord!" Say thou: "God leads astray whom He wills, and guides to Him such as turn back:[4]

28 "Those who heed warning[1] and whose hearts find rest in the remembrance[2] of God." In truth,[3] in the remembrance[4] of God do hearts find rest.

29 Those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: they have blessedness,[2] and a good journey's end.[3]

30 Thus have We sent thee among a community — communities have passed away before it — that thou recite to them what We have revealed[1] to thee; but they deny the Almighty.[2] Say thou: "He is my Lord: — there is no god save He[3] — in Him have I placed my trust, and to Him is my return."

31 And were there a recitation[1] whereby the mountains were set in motion, or the earth rent asunder, or the dead caused to speak[...].[2] The truth is,[3] to God belongs the command altogether. Have not those who heed warning[4] despaired[5] that, had God willed, He would have guided mankind all together? And those who ignore warning:[6] disaster will cease not to strike them[7] for what they have wrought, or to descend[8] near their abodes, until the promise of God comes; God will not break the appointment.

1 alif lām rā[1] A Writ[2] We have sent down to thee,[3] that thou bring forth mankind out of darkness[4] into the light, by the leave of their Lord, to the path of the Exalted in Might, the Praiseworthy,

2 Of God, to whom belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth; and woe to the false claimers of guidance[1] from a severe punishment!

3 Those who prefer the life of this world to the Hereafter, and turn away from[1] the path of God, and would make it crooked: those are in extreme error.

4 And We sent a messenger only in the tongue of his people, that he might make plain[1] to them; and God sends astray whom He wills, and guides whom He wills; and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[2]

5 And We sent Moses with Our proofs:[1] "Bring thou thy people forth out of darkness[2] into the light, and remind thou them of the days of God." In that[3] are proofs[4] for every one patient and grateful.

6 And when[1] Moses said to his people: "Remember the favour of God upon you when He delivered you from the house of Pharaoh:[2] they were afflicting you with an evil punishment, and slaughtering your sons and sparing your women; and in that was a great trial from your Lord."

7 ¶14.2 And when[1] your Lord proclaimed: "If you are grateful, I will increase you; but if you deny, My punishment is severe."

9 Has not the report reached you of those before you: — the people of Noah, and ʿĀd, and Thamūd, and those after them? None knows them save God. Their messengers came to them with clear signs, but they returned their hands to their mouths,[1] and said: "We deny that wherewith you have been sent, and we are in sceptical doubt about that to which you invite us."

10 Their messengers said: "Can there be about God any doubt: the Creator of the Heavens and the Earth? He calls you, that He will forgive you of your transgressions,[1] and delay you to a stated term." They said: "You are only mortals like us, who would turn us away from[2] what our fathers served. So bring us a clear authority."

23 And those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds will be made to enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, they abiding eternally therein by the leave of their Lord. Their greeting therein will be: "Peace!"

24 Hast thou not considered[1] how God struck a similitude? A good word[2] is like a good tree: its root firm, and its branches in the sky.

25 It brings its fruit at all times,[1] by the leave of its Lord. And God strikes similitudes for mankind, that they might take heed.

26 And the likeness of a bad word is like a bad tree: uprooted from[1] the earth, it has no fixed lodging.

27 God strengthens those who heed warning[1] with a firm word[2] in[3] the life of this world and in[4] the Hereafter. And God sends astray the wrongdoers;[5] and God does what He wills.

49 Inform thou My servants that I am the Forgiving, the Merciful,

50 And that My punishment is the painful punishment.
51 And inform thou them of the guests of Abraham,
52 When they entered upon him, and said: "Peace!" He said: "We are afraid of you."

53 They said: "Fear thou not, we bring thee glad tidings of a learned lad."

54 He said: "Bring you glad tidings to me, though old age has come upon me? Of what then bring you glad tidings?"

55 They said: "We have brought thee glad tidings in truth;[1] so be thou not of those who despair."

56 He said: "And who despairs of the mercy of his Lord save those who are astray?"[1]

57 He said: "Then what is your business, O emissaries?"

58 They said: "We have been sent to a lawbreaking people,
59 "Save the house of Lot — them will we deliver all together,
60 "Save his wife"; We[1] decreed that she be of those who stay behind.

61 ¶15.5 And when the emissaries came to the house of Lot,

62 He said: "You are people unknown."[1]

63 They said: "The truth is,[1] we bring thee that concerning which they doubted.[2]

64 "And we come to thee with the truth;[1] and we are the truthful.

65 "So travel thou with thy household in a portion of the night, and follow thou their backs;[1] and let not any one of you turn round, but go on to where you are commanded."

66 And We[1] decreed for him that command: "The root of those will be cut off[2] in the morning."

67 And the people of the city came rejoicing.[1]

68 He said: "They are my guests, so put me not to shame;

69 "And be in prudent fear[1] of God, and disgrace me not."

70 They said: "Did we not forbid thee all mankind?"[1]

71 He said: "These are my daughters, if you must act."[1]

72 By thy life, they were in their intoxication wandering blindly!

73 And the Blast seized them at sunrise.

74 And We utterly overthrew it[1] and rained upon it stones of baked clay.[2]

75 In that are proofs[1] for those who can discern.[2]

77 In that is a proof[1] for the believers.[2]

78 And the companions of the woods[1] were wrongdoers,[2]

79 And We took vengeance on them — and both are on a clear highway.[1]

80 ¶15.6 And the companions of the rocky tract[1] denied the emissaries.

81 And We brought them Our proofs,[1] but they turned away from them.

82 And they hewed houses from the mountains, feeling secure.

83 But the Blast seized them in the morning,

84 And there availed them not what they had earned.

85 And We created not the heavens and the earth and what is between them[1] but in truth.[2] And the Hour is coming; so forbear thou with comely forbearance.

3 He created the heavens and the earth in truth;[1] exalted is He above that to which they ascribe a partnership![2]

4 He created man from a sperm-drop — and then is he an open disputant.

5 And the cattle, He created them (for you therein are warmth and benefits; and of them you eat,

6 And for you therein is comeliness when you bring them home to rest, and when you take them out to pasture;

7 And they bear your loads to a land you could not have reached save with great trouble to yourselves; your Lord is kind and merciful.)

8 And horses, and mules, and donkeys for you to ride, and as adornment; and He creates what you know not.

9 And upon[1] God is the course of the path; and some of them[2] deviate.[3] And had He willed, He would have guided you all together.
10 ¶16.2 He it is that sends down from the sky water for you; from it is drink; and from it are plants[1] in which you put out to pasture;

11 He causes to grow for you thereby the crops, and the olives, and the date-palms, and the grapevines, and every[1] fruit. In that is a proof[2] for people who reflect.

وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمُ ٱلَّيۡلَ وَٱلنَّهَارَ وَٱلشَّمۡسَ
وَٱلۡقَمَرَ وَٱلنُّجُومُ مُسَخَّرَٰتُۢ بِأَمۡرِهِۦٓ إِنَّ
فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَٰتٖ لِّقَوۡمٖ يَعۡقِلُونَ ١٢

12 And He made subject for you the night, and the day, and the sun, and the moon; and the stars are made subject by His command — in that are proofs[1] for people who reason —

وَمَا ذَرَأَ لَكُمۡ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ مُخۡتَلِفًا
أَلۡوَٰنُهُۥٓ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَةٗ لِّقَوۡمٖ يَذَّكَّرُونَ
١٣

13 As is[1] what He created[2] for you in the earth of different hues; in that is a proof[3] for people who take heed.

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِي سَخَّرَ ٱلۡبَحۡرَ لِتَأۡكُلُواْ مِنۡهُ
لَحۡمٗا طَرِيّٗا وَتَسۡتَخۡرِجُواْ مِنۡهُ حِلۡيَةٗ
تَلۡبَسُونَهَا وَتَرَى ٱلۡفُلۡكَ مَوَاخِرَ فِيهِ
وَلِتَبۡتَغُواْ مِن فَضۡلِهِۦ وَلَعَلَّكُمۡ
تَشۡكُرُونَ ١٤

14 And He it is that made subject the sea, that you might eat therefrom fresh flesh, and bring forth therefrom ornaments which you wear — and thou seest the ships[1] ploughing therein — and that you might seek of His bounty, and that you might be grateful.

وَأَلۡقَىٰ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ رَوَٰسِيَ أَن تَمِيدَ
بِكُمۡ وَأَنۡهَٰرٗا وَسُبُلٗا لَّعَلَّكُمۡ
تَهۡتَدُونَ ١٥

15 And He cast into the earth firm mountains lest it sway with you; and rivers and ways, that you might be guided;

وَعَلَٰمَٰتٖ وَبِٱلنَّجۡمِ هُمۡ يَهۡتَدُونَ ١٦

16 And landmarks; and by the star[1] are they guided.

أَفَمَن يَخۡلُقُ كَمَن لَّا يَخۡلُقُ أَفَلَا
تَذَكَّرُونَ ١٧

17 Is then He who[1] creates like one who creates not? Will you then not[2] take heed!

وَإِن تَعُدُّواْ نِعۡمَةَ ٱللَّهِ لَا تُحۡصُوهَآ إِنَّ
ٱللَّهَ لَغَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ١٨

18 And if you should count the favour of God, you will not calculate it; God is forgiving and merciful.

وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ مَا تُسِرُّونَ وَمَا تُعۡلِنُونَ

19 And God knows what you keep secret and what you make known.

وَٱلَّذِينَ يَدۡعُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ لَا

20 And those to whom they call, besides[1] God, create not anything, but they are created:

يَخۡلُقُونَ شَيۡـٔٗا وَهُمۡ يُخۡلَقُونَ ٢٠

أَمۡوَٰتٌ غَيۡرُ أَحۡيَآءٖ وَمَا يَشۡعُرُونَ أَيَّانَ
يُبۡعَثُونَ ٢١

21 Dead, not living; and they perceive not when they will be raised.

إِلَٰهُكُمۡ إِلَٰهٞ وَٰحِدٞ فَٱلَّذِينَ لَا
يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ قُلُوبُهُم مُّنكِرَةٞ وَهُم
مُّسۡتَكۡبِرُونَ ٢٢

22 ¶16.3 Your God is One God. And those who believe not in[1] the Hereafter, their hearts deny,[2] and they have waxed proud.

لَا جَرَمَ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَعۡلَمُ مَا يُسِرُّونَ وَمَا
يُعۡلِنُونَ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلۡمُسۡتَكۡبِرِينَ
٢٣

23 Without doubt, God knows what they keep secret and what they make known; He loves not those that wax proud.

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُم مَّاذَآ أَنزَلَ رَبُّكُمۡ قَالُوٓاْ

24 And when it is said to them: "What is it your Lord sent down?" they say: "Legends of the former peoples,"

لِيَحۡمِلُوٓاْ أَوۡزَارَهُمۡ كَامِلَةٗ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ
وَمِنۡ أَوۡزَارِ ٱلَّذِينَ يُضِلُّونَهُم بِغَيۡرِ عِلۡمٍ
أَلَا سَآءَ مَا يَزِرُونَ ٢٥

25 That they might bear their burdens in full on the Day of Resurrection, and some of the burdens of those whom they lead astray without knowledge. In truth,[1] evil is what they will bear.

قَدۡ مَكَرَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِهِمۡ فَأَتَى ٱللَّهُ
بُنۡيَٰنَهُم مِّنَ ٱلۡقَوَاعِدِ فَخَرَّ عَلَيۡهِمُ
ٱلسَّقۡفُ مِن فَوۡقِهِمۡ وَأَتَىٰهُمُ ٱلۡعَذَابُ مِنۡ
حَيۡثُ لَا يَشۡعُرُونَ ٢٦

26 ¶16.4 Those before them schemed; then God came at their building from the foundations so the roof fell down on them from above them; and the punishment came upon them whence[1] they perceived not.

ثُمَّ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ يُخۡزِيهِمۡ وَيَقُولُ أَيۡنَ
شُرَكَآءِيَ ٱلَّذِينَ كُنتُمۡ تُشَٰٓقُّونَ فِيهِمۡ

وَٱلسُّوٓءَ عَلَى ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ٢٧

27 Then on the Day of Resurrection will He disgrace them, and say: "Where are My partners[1] for whom[2] you were hostile?"[3] Those given knowledge will say: "Disgrace this day, and evil, are upon the false claimers of guidance:[4]

29 "So enter the gates of Gehenna, abiding eternally therein." Evil is the dwelling of those that wax proud.

30 And it will be said to those who were in prudent fear:[1] "What did your Lord send down?" They will say: "Good." For those who do good in the World there is good; and the home of the Hereafter is better: — and how excellent is the home of those of prudent fear![2] —

31 Gardens of perpetual abode which they will enter, beneath which rivers flow, wherein they have whatever they will. Thus does God reward those of prudent fear:[1]

32 Those whom the angels take while virtuous.[1] They will say: "Peace be upon you! Enter the Garden because of what you did."

33 Look they save for the angels to come to them, or for the command of thy Lord to come? Thus did those before them; and God wronged them not, but they wronged their souls,

34 And there befell them the evil deeds[1] that they did, and there surrounded them that whereat they mocked.

Then is there upon[5] the messengers save the clear notification?

36 And We raised up in every community a messenger: "Serve God and avoid idols."[1] And among them was he whom God guided; and among them was he upon whom misguidance was binding.[2] So travel in the earth and see how was the final outcome of the deniers.

37 Though[1] thou desire their guidance, God will not guide him whom He leaves to stray; and they have no helpers.

38 And they swear by God their strongest oaths: "God will not raise up him who dies." Verily,[1] it is a promise binding upon[2] Him, — but most men know not —

39 That He might make plain[1] to them that wherein they differ, and that those who ignore warning[2] might know that they were liars.

40 Our word to a thing when We intend it is that We but say to it: "Be thou," and it is.

52 And to Him belongs what is in the heavens and the earth, and His is the doctrine[1] forever. Will you then be in prudent fear[2] of other than God?

53 And whatever you have of favour, it is from God; then when affliction touches you, then to Him do you cry out.

60 For those who believe not in[1] the Hereafter is the likeness of evil. And for God is the highest likeness; and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[2]

64 And We sent down the Writ[1] upon thee only that thou make plain[2] to them that wherein they differ, and as guidance, and as a mercy for people who believe.

106 Whoso denies God after his faith[...][1] — save he who is compelled thereto but whose heart finds rest in faith; but whoso expands his breast to denial, upon them is wrath from God; and they have a great punishment.

112 ¶16.15 And God strikes a similitude: — a city secure, at peace, its provision coming to it in abundance from every side; but it denied the favours of God, then God let it taste the cloak[1] of hunger and fear because of what they wrought.

113 And a messenger from among them had come to them, then they denied him;[1] then the punishment took them while they were wrongdoers.[2]

20 She said: "How can I have a lad, when no mortal has touched me, neither have I been unchaste?"

21 He said: "Thus said thy Lord: 'It is easy for Me — and that We make him a proof[1] for mankind, and a mercy from Us; and it is a matter ordained.'"

22 Then she bore him,[1] and withdrew with him to a distant place.

23 And the pains of childbirth brought her to the trunk of the date-palm. She said: "Would that I had died before this and been utterly forgotten!"[1]

24 Then he[1] called to her, from below her:[2] "Grieve thou not; thy Lord has placed beneath thee a stream.

25 "And shake thou towards thee the trunk of the date-palm; it will drop upon thee ripe, fresh dates.

26 "So eat thou, and drink thou, and let thine eye be comforted; and if thou see any mortal, 27 And she brought him to her people, bearing him. They said: "O Mary:[1] thou hast done[2] an unheard-of thing.

28 "O sister of Aaron:[1] thy father was not an evil man, and thy mother was not unchaste."

29 Then she pointed to him. They said: "How can we speak to one who is in the cradle a child?"

30 He said: "I am the servant of God; He has given me the Writ,[1] and made me a prophet,

31 "And made me blessed wherever I be — and enjoined upon me the duty[1] and the purity[2] as long as I live —

32 "And dutiful to my mother; and He has not made me arrogant or wretched.

33 "And peace be upon me the day I was born, and the day I die,[1] and the day I am raised up alive!"[2]

34 (That is Jesus,[1] son of Mary[2] — the word of truth[3] concerning which they doubt.

35 It is not for God to take a son. Glory[1] be to Him! When He decrees a matter, He but says to it: "Be thou," and it is.

39 And warn thou them of the Day of Regret, when the matter will be concluded; but they are in heedlessness, and they do not believe.[1]

48 "And I will withdraw from you[1] and that to which you call besides[2] God, and I will call to my Lord;[3] it may be that I will not in my call to my Lord be wretched."

49 So when he had withdrawn from them, and what they served besides[1] God, We gave him Isaac and Jacob; and each We made a prophet.

63 That is the Garden which We cause those to inherit among Our servants who are in prudent fear.[1]

67 Does not man remember that We created him before, when he was nothing?

68 Then, by thy Lord, will We gather them and the satans![1] Then will We bring them to be present round about Gehenna on bended knee;

69 Then will We extract from every sect[1] those of them most severe towards the Almighty[2] in disdain;

70 Then will We best know those most worthy to be burned therein.

71 And there is not one of you save will arrive at[1] it; that is upon thy Lord an inevitability decreed.

72 Then will We deliver those who were in prudent fear,[1] and leave the wrongdoers[2]

ٱللَّهُ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ لَهُ ٱلۡأَسۡمَآءُ ٱلۡحُسۡنَىٰ ٨

94 He has counted them; and He numbered them exactly.[1]
95 And each of them will come to Him on the Day of Resurrection alone.
96 Those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds — the Almighty[2] will appoint for them love.[3]

97 And We have made it[1] easy[2] in thy tongue,[3] only that thou bear glad tidings therewith to those of prudent fear,[4] and thou warn therewith a contentious people.
98 And how many a generation We destroyed before them! Perceivest thou any one of them, or hearest thou from them a sound?

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

1 ṭā hā[1]

2 We have not sent down upon thee the Qur'an[1] that thou be wretched,
3 But only as a reminder to him who fears —

4 A revelation[1] from Him who created the earth and the high heavens.

5 The Almighty[1] established Himself upon the Throne;
6 To Him belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and what is between them,[1] and what is under the soil.

7 And if thou be public in speech, then He knows the secret and what is more hidden.

8 God, there is no god save He;[1] to Him belong the best names.

9 ¶20.2 And has there come to thee the story[1] of Moses?
10 When he saw a fire, and said to his people: "Stay here; I perceive a fire. I might bring you therefrom a firebrand, or find at the fire guidance."

11 And when he came to it, he was called: "O Moses:
12 "I am thy Lord; so remove thou thy sandals; thou art in the sacred valley of Ṭuwa.[1]

13 "And I have chosen thee, so hearken thou to what is revealed:[1]
14 "I am God. There is no god save I, so serve thou Me; and uphold thou the duty[1] for My remembrance:[2]

15 "The Hour is coming — I almost conceal it — that every soul might be rewarded for that for which it strives;

16 "And let not turn thee away from[1] it him who believes not in[2] it but follows his vain desire, or thou wilt perish.

17 "And what is that in thy right hand, O Moses?"
18 Said he: "It is my staff. I lean on it, and beat down therewith leaves for my sheep; and I have therefor other uses."

19 He said: "Cast thou it down, O Moses."

20 And he cast it down, and then was it a serpent moving.
21 He said: "Take thou it, and fear thou not; We will return it to its former state.

its revelation[4] to thee be complete; and say thou: "My Lord: increase Thou me in knowledge."

115 And We made a covenant with Adam before, but he forgot;[1] and We found not in him determination.[2]

116 ¶20.8 And when We said to the angels: "Submit[1] to Adam," then they submitted.[2] Not so[2] Iblīs; he refused.

117 Then We said: "O Adam: this is an enemy to thee and to thy wife. Then let him not turn you[1] out of the garden, that thou be wretched.

118 "It is for thee to be neither hungry nor naked therein,
119 "And that thou suffer neither thirst therein, nor the heat of the sun."
120 Then the satan[1] whispered to him,[2] saying: "O Adam: shall I direct thee to the Tree of Eternity and a dominion that decays not?"

121 And they[1] ate thereof, and their[2] shame[3] became clear to them; and they[4] began to draw over them of the leaves of the garden; and Adam opposed his Lord, so he erred.

122 Then his Lord chose him, and turned towards him, and guided.

123 He said: "Get you[1] down from it[2] all together, an enemy to one another.[3] And if there comes to you guidance from Me, then whoso follows My guidance, he will neither go astray, nor will he be wretched.

95 And a prohibition is upon a city that We have destroyed, that they shall not return.[1]

96 When[1] Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj[2] have been loosed,[3] and they from every elevation[4] hasten forth[...][5]

98 You and what you serve, besides[1] God, are the fuel[2] of Gehenna! You will arrive at[3] it.

101 Those for whom the best from Us has preceded — those are from it far removed;

102 They hear not a whisper[1] thereof;[2] and they in what their souls desired abide eternally.

103 The greatest terror will not grieve them, and the angels will receive them: — "This is your day which you were promised" —

104 The day We fold up the heaven like the folding up of a scroll for the writs.[1] As We began the first creation, We will repeat it — a promise binding upon[2] Us. Truly, We are the doers.[3]

2 The day you see it, every one nursing will neglect what she suckled, and every one pregnant will deliver her burden,[1] and thou wilt see mankind intoxicated when they are not intoxicated; but the punishment of God is severe.

17 Those who heed warning,[1] and those who hold to Judaism,[2] and the Sabaeans,[3] and the Christians,[4] and the Magians,[5] and those who ascribe a partnership:[6] God will decide between them on the Day of Resurrection; God is witness over all things.

18 Dost thou not see[1] that to God submits[2] whoso is in the heavens, and whoso is in the earth, and the sun, and the moon, and the stars, and the mountains, and the trees, and the creatures, and many among mankind? And upon many has the punishment become binding.[3] And whom God humiliates, he has none to honour him; God does what He wills.

6 Save with their wives[1] or what their right hands possess,[2] then are they not blameworthy;

7 — But whoso seeks beyond that: it is they who are the transgressors —

8 And those who attend to their trusts and their covenant,

9 And those who preserve their duties:[1]

10 It is they who are the heirs,

11 Those who inherit Paradise;[1] therein will they abide eternally.

12 And We created man from an extract[1] of clay;

15 Then after that will you die;

16 Then on the Day of Resurrection will you be raised.

And address thou Me not on behalf of those who do wrong; they will be drowned.

32 And We sent among them a messenger from among them: "Serve God; you have no god but He. Will you then not[1] be in prudent fear!"

41 Then the Blast seized them with justice,[1] and We made them as decaying herbage:[2] — "Then away with the wrongdoing[3] people!"

42 Then We produced, after them, other generations.

43 No community outstrips its term, nor will they defer.

44 Then We sent Our messengers in succession. Every time its messenger came to a community, they denied him; and We caused some of them to follow[1] others, and made them legends:[2] — "Then away with a people who do not believe!"[3]

45 Then sent We Moses and his brother Aaron with Our proofs[1] and a clear authority

46 To Pharaoh[1] and his eminent ones; but they had waxed proud, and they were a self-exalting people.

47 And they said: "Shall we believe two mortals like ourselves, and whose people serve us?"

48 Then they denied them,[1] and were among those destroyed.

49 And We gave Moses the Writ,[1] that they might be guided.

50 And We made the son[1] of Mary[2] and his mother[3] a proof,[4] and We gave them[5] shelter upon high ground: a fixed lodging and a running spring.

86 Say thou: "Who is Lord of the Seven Heavens and Lord of the Great Throne?"

87 They will say: "God."[1] Say thou: "Will you then not[2] be in prudent fear!"
88 Say thou: "In whose hand is dominion of all things — and He grants protection, and against whom there is no protection, if you know?"

89 They will say: "In God's." Say thou: "How then are you taken by sorcery?"[1]
90 The truth is,[1] We brought them the truth,[2] and they are liars.

91 God has not taken any son. And there is not with Him any god; then would each god have taken what he created, and some of them would have overcome others. Glory[1] be to God above what they describe —

And let them not strike their feet to make known what they hide of their adornment.[5] And turn to God altogether, O believers,[6] that you might be successful.

32 And give in marriage[1] the unmarried among you, and the righteous among your male slaves and your female slaves; if they be poor, God will enrich them out of His bounty; and God is encompassing and knowing.

And those who seek the writ[2] from among those your right hands possess: contract with them[3] if you know good to be in them; and give to them out of the wealth God has given you. And compel not your slave-girls to whoredom,[4] if they desire chastity[...][5] — seeking the enjoyment of the life of this world. And whoso compels them,[6]

35 ¶24.5 God is the light of the heavens and the earth. The likeness of His light is as a niche wherein is a lamp — the lamp in a glass,[1] the glass as it were a shining star — lit from a blessed tree, an olive neither of East nor West; its oil would nigh illuminate, though no fire touched it: — light upon light! — God guides to His light whom He wills! And God strikes similitudes for men; and God knows all things.

38 That God might reward them for the best of what they did, and increase them out of His bounty; and God gives provision to whom He wills without reckoning.[1]

39 And those who ignore warning,[1] their deeds are like a mirage in a desert: the thirsty one thinks it water; when[2] he has come to it, he finds it nothing,[3] but finds God with him, and He pays his account in full — and God is swift in reckoning —

40 Or[1] like darkness[2] in a fathomless sea: there covers it a wave, above which[3] is a wave, above which[4] are clouds: — darknesses one above another! — when he holds out his hand, he scarcely sees it. And he for whom God has made no light, there is for him no light.

42 And to God belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth; and to God is the journey's end.

He makes them a mass, and thou seest the rain come forth from the midst of it. And He sends down from the sky, from mountains therein of hail, and He strikes therewith whom He wills, and turns away therefrom whom He wills. The brilliance of His lightning almost takes away the sight.

44 God turns about[1] the night and the day; in that is a lesson for those of vision.

45 And God created every creature from water. And among them is what goes upon its belly, and among them is what goes upon two legs, and among them is what goes upon four. God creates what He wills; God is over all things powerful.

46 We have sent down manifest proofs;[1] and God guides whom He wills to a straight path.

50 Is there in their hearts a disease? If[1] they doubt, or fear[2] that God would deal unjustly with them — or would His messenger:[3] — nay,[4] it is they who are the wrongdoers.[5]

51 The only word[1] of the believers,[2] when they are invited to God and His messenger, that he[3] judge between them, is that they say: "We hear and we obey," — and it is they who are the successful.[4]

52 And whoso obeys God and His messenger,[1] and fears God, and is in prudent fear[2] of Him: — it is they who are the attainers of success.

53 And they swore by God their strongest oaths, that if thou shouldst command them, they would go forth. Say thou: "Swear not — obedience is known";[1] God is aware of what you do.

54 Say thou: "Obey God and obey the Messenger." Then if you turn away, then upon him is what he has been given to bear, and upon you is what you have been given to bear. And if you obey him,[1] you will be guided. And upon the Messenger is only the clear notification,

They serve Me; they ascribe not a partnership[4] with Me to anything — and whoso denies after that: — it is they who

Thus God makes plain[9] to you the proofs;[10] and God is knowing and wise.

59 And when the children among you reach puberty, then let them ask leave even as those before them asked;[1] thus God makes plain[2] to you His proofs.[3] And God is knowing and wise.

who ask leave of thee: those are they who believe in[4] God and His messenger. So when they ask leave of thee for some matter of theirs, give thou leave to whom thou wilt among them, and ask thou forgiveness of God for them; God is forgiving and merciful.

63 Make not the calling of the Messenger among yourselves as your call one of another. God knows those who slip away surreptitiously[1] among you. And let those who oppose His[2] command[3] beware lest a means of denial[4] befall them, or there befall them a painful punishment.

64 In truth,[1] to God belongs what is in the heavens and the earth. He knows upon what you stand.[2] And the day they are returned to Him, then will He inform them of what they did; and God knows all things.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

25[2] 1 Blessed be He who has sent down the Division[1] upon His servant, that he might be a warner to all mankind,

2 He to whom belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth, and has not taken a son or had a partner[1] in dominion, but created everything, then ordained it entirely.[2]

36 They said: "Delay thou him and his brother, and raise thou up in the cities gatherers

38 And the sorcerers[1] were assembled at the appointed time of a known day.

39 And it was said to the people: "Will you assemble

41 And when the sorcerers[1] came they said to Pharaoh:[2] "Will there be a reward for us, if we are the victors?"

42 He said: "Yea; and you will then be of those brought near."[1]

43 Moses said to them: "Cast what you will cast."

44 And they cast their ropes and their staffs, and said: "By the power and glory[1] of Pharaoh[2] are we the victors!"

47 They said: "We believe in[1] the Lord of All Creation,

48 "The Lord of Moses and Aaron."

49 Said he: "You have believed him[1] before I gave you leave. He is your chief who taught you sorcery.[2] And you will come to know! I will cut off your hands and your feet on opposite sides, and crucify[3] you all together."

50 They said: "No harm! To our Lord are we returning.

24 So he watered for them;[1] then he turned away to the shade and said: “My Lord: I am in need of what Thou hast sent down to me of good.”

25 And there came to him one of the two, walking shyly. She said: “My father calls thee,

27 Said he: “I desire to marry thee to one of these two daughters of mine, provided that thou hire thyself to me eight years.[1] And if thou shouldst complete ten, be that up to thee. And I desire not to create hardship for thee. Thou wilt find me, if God wills, among the righteous.”

28 He said: “That is between me and thee:[1] whichever of the two terms I complete, let there be no enmity against me; and God is guardian over what we say.”

35 And We have left thereof a proof[1] as clear evidence for people who reason.

36 And to Madyan[1] their brother Shuʿayb: he said: "O my people: serve God and expect the Last Day, and commit not evil in the earth, working corruption."

37 Then they denied him,[1] and the earthquake seized them, and morning found them lying prone in their home.

38 And ʿĀd and Thamūd: — and it has become clear to you from their dwellings[1] — (and the satan[2] made their deeds fair to them, and turned them away from[3] the path when they were endowed with perception)

39 And Qārūn[1] and Pharaoh[2] and Hāmān:[3] — and Moses had come to them with clear signs — and they had waxed proud in the earth, but they did not outrun.

And God wronged them not, but they wronged their souls.

41 The likeness of those who take allies, besides[1] God, is as the likeness of the spider that takes[2] a house; and the weakest of houses is the house of the spider, did they but know.

47 And thus sent We down the Writ[1] to thee. And those to whom We[2] gave the Writ[3] believe in[4] it; and among those[5] are some who believe in[6] it.[7] And none rejects Our proofs[8] but the false claimers of guidance.[9]

48 And thou didst not recite any Writ[1] before it, nor didst thou inscribe one[2] with thy right hand; then might the creators of vanity have doubted.

49 The truth is,[1] it[2] is clear proofs[3] in the breasts of those given knowledge. And none rejects Our proofs[4] but the wrongdoers.[5]

50 And they say: "Oh, that proofs[1] were but[2] sent down upon him from his Lord!" Say thou: "The proofs[3] are only with God, and I am only a clear warner."

51 Does it not suffice them that We have sent down upon thee the Writ[1] recited to them? In that is a mercy and a reminder for people who believe.

52 Say thou: "God is sufficient between me and you as witness." He knows what is in the heavens and the earth; and those who believe in[1] vanity and deny God, it is they who are the losers.

55 The day the punishment covers them from above them and from beneath their feet, and He will say: "Taste what you did!"

56 O My servants who heed warning:[1] My earth is spacious;[2] so Me — serve you Me.

57 Every soul will taste death; then to Us will you be returned.

58 And those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds, We will settle them in high chambers of the Garden beneath which rivers flow, they abiding eternally therein. Excellent is the reward of those who act,[2]

61 And if thou askest them: "Who created the heavens and the earth and made subject the sun and the moon?" they will say: "God." How then are they deluded?

62 God expands provision for whom He wills of His servants, and He straitens for him; God knows all things.

63 And if thou askest them: "Who sends down water from the sky, and therewith gives life to the earth after its death?" they will say: "God." Say thou: "Praise belongs to God." The truth is,[1] most of them do not reason.

6 The promise of God![1] God fails not in His promise; but most men know not,

8 Have they not reflected within themselves? God created the heavens and the earth and what is between them[1] only in truth[2] and for a stated term; and many among men are deniers of the meeting with their Lord.

9 Have they not travelled in the earth and seen how was the final outcome of those who

25 And among His proofs[1] is that the heaven and the earth stand by His command; then when He calls you with a call, from the earth will you then come forth!

26 And to Him belongs whoso is in the heavens and the earth; all are to Him humbly obedient.

27 And He it is that begins creation; then He repeats it — and it is most easy for Him. And to Him belongs the highest likeness in the heavens and the earth; and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[1]

28 ¶30.4 He strikes for you a similitude from yourselves: — have you from among those whom your right hands possess any partners[1] in what We have provided for you, so that you are equal therein, you fearing them as you fear each other?[2] Thus do We set out and detail[3] the proofs[4] for people who reason.

29 The truth is,[1] those who do wrong follow their vain desires[2] without knowledge; then who will guide him whom God has sent astray? And they have no helpers.

30 So set thou thy face[1] towards the doctrine,[2] inclining to truth:[3] — the nature[4] of God with which He created people — (there is no changing the creation of God) that is the right doctrine,[5] (but most men know not)

31 Turning in repentance to Him. And be in prudent fear[1] of Him, and uphold the duty;[2] and be not of the idolaters:[3]

32 Of those who divide their doctrine[1] and become sects, each party exulting at what it has.[2]

33 And when affliction touches men, they call to their Lord, turning in repentance to Him; then when He lets them taste mercy from Him, then a faction among them ascribes a partnership[1] to their Lord,

34 That they might deny what We have given them. So enjoy yourselves; and you will come to know!

35 If[1] We have sent down upon them an authority:[2] then it speaks of that to which they ascribe a partnership[...].[3]

36 And when We let men taste mercy, they exult thereat; but if evil[1] befalls them because of what their hands sent ahead, then they despair.

37 Have they not considered[1] that God expands provision for whom He wills, and He straitens? In that are proofs[2] for people who believe.

38 So give thou the relative his due,[1] and the needy, and the wayfarer.[2] That is best for those who desire the face of God; and it is they who are the successful.[3]

39 And what you give of usury that it might increase in the wealth of men, there is no increase with God; but what you give of purity,[1] desiring the face of God: it is they[2]

41 ¶30.5 Corruption[1] has appeared on land and sea for what the hands of men have earned, that He might let them taste some of what they have done, that they might return.

54 ¶30.6 God is He who created you of weakness, then appointed He, after weakness, strength; then He appointed, after strength, weakness and white hair. He creates what He wills; and He is the Knowing, the Powerful.

55 And the day the Hour strikes, the lawbreakers will swear that they had tarried but an hour; thus were they deluded.

56 But those given knowledge and faith will say: "You have tarried concerning[1] the Writ[2] of God[3] until the Day of Resurrection — so this is the Day of Resurrection, but you knew not."

57 So, that day, their excuses will not profit those who do wrong, nor will they be allowed to make amends.

58 And We have struck for men in this Qur'an[1] every[2] similitude.[3] And if thou come to them with a proof,[4] those who ignore warning[5] will say: "You[6] are only creators of vanity."

59 Thus does God seal the hearts of those who know not.

4 Those who uphold the duty,[1] and render the purity,[2] and of the Hereafter are certain:[3]

11 "This is the creation of God; then show me[1] what those besides[2] Him have created." The truth is,[3] the wrongdoers[4] are in manifest error.

وَلَقَدۡ ءَاتَيۡنَا لُقۡمَٰنَ ٱلۡحِكۡمَةَ أَنِ ٱشۡكُرۡ لِلَّهِۚ وَمَن يَشۡكُرۡ فَإِنَّمَا يَشۡكُرُ لِنَفۡسِهِۦۖ وَمَن كَفَرَ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَنِيٌّ حَمِيدٞ ﴿١٢﴾

12 ¶31.2 And We gave Luqmān[1] wisdom:[2] "Be thou grateful to God." And whoso is grateful, he is but grateful for his soul; and whoso denies[3] — God is free from need and praiseworthy.

وَإِذۡ قَالَ لُقۡمَٰنُ لِٱبۡنِهِۦ وَهُوَ يَعِظُهُۥ يَٰبُنَيَّ لَا تُشۡرِكۡ بِٱللَّهِۖ إِنَّ ٱلشِّرۡكَ لَظُلۡمٌ عَظِيمٞ ﴿١٣﴾

13 And when Luqmān said to his son, while he exhorted him: "O my son: ascribe thou not a partnership[1] to God; ascribing partnership[2] is a tremendous injustice."

وَوَصَّيۡنَا ٱلۡإِنسَٰنَ بِوَٰلِدَيۡهِ حَمَلَتۡهُ أُمُّهُۥ وَهۡنًا عَلَىٰ وَهۡنٖ وَفِصَٰلُهُۥ فِي عَامَيۡنِ أَنِ ٱشۡكُرۡ لِي وَلِوَٰلِدَيۡكَ إِلَيَّ ٱلۡمَصِيرُ ﴿١٤﴾

14 And We enjoined upon man concerning his parents: — his mother bore him in weakness upon weakness; and his weaning is in two years — "Be thou grateful to Me, and to thy parents; unto Me is the journey's end.

وَإِن جَٰهَدَاكَ عَلَىٰٓ أَن تُشۡرِكَ بِي مَا لَيۡسَ لَكَ بِهِۦ عِلۡمٞ فَلَا تُطِعۡهُمَاۖ وَصَاحِبۡهُمَا فِي ٱلدُّنۡيَا مَعۡرُوفٗاۖ وَٱتَّبِعۡ سَبِيلَ مَنۡ أَنَابَ إِلَيَّۚ ثُمَّ إِلَيَّ مَرۡجِعُكُمۡ فَأُنَبِّئُكُم بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿١٥﴾

15 "But if they strive with thee to make thee ascribe a partnership[1] to that of which thou hast no knowledge, then obey thou them not. And accompany thou them in the World according to what is fitting;[2] but follow thou the path of him who turns to Me. Then to Me is your return, and I will tell you what you did."

17 "O my son: uphold thou the duty,[1] and enjoin thou what is fitting,[2] and forbid thou perversity,[3] and be thou patient over what befalls thee; that is among the resolution of affairs.[4]

18 "And turn thou not thy cheek to men,[1] and walk thou not in the earth haughtily; God loves not every conceited boaster.

19 "And be thou modest in thy walk, and lower thou thy voice; the most loathsome of voices is the voice of the donkey."

20 ¶31.3 Do you not see that God made subject to you what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and has lavished upon you His favours, outward and inward? But among men is he who disputes concerning God, without knowledge, or guidance, or an illuminating Writ;[1]

21 And when it is said to them: "Follow what God has sent down," they say: "Nay,[1] we will follow that upon which we found our fathers." — Even though the satan[2] invites them to the punishment of the Inferno?

22 And whoso submits his face to God, and is a doer of good, he has grasped the most firm handhold;[1] and to God is the final outcome of matters.

23 And whoso denies: let not his denial grieve thee; unto Us is their return, and We will inform them of what they did; God knows what is in the breasts.

24 We will let them enjoy a little; then will We drive them to a stern punishment.

25 And if thou askest them: "Who created the heavens and the earth?" they will say: "God." Say thou: "Praise belongs to God!" The truth is,[1] most of them know not.

26 To God belongs what is in the heavens and the earth. God, He is the Free from Need, the Praiseworthy.

27 And had all that is in the earth of trees been but pens, and the sea replenished thereafter with seven seas,[1] the words of God would not be exhausted;[2] God is exalted in might and wise.

29 Dost thou not see[1] that God makes the night enter into the day, and makes the day enter into the night — and He made subject the sun and the moon, each running to a stated term — and that God is of what you do aware?

[2] 1 alif lām mīm[1]

2 The[1] revelation[2] of the Writ about which there is no doubt,[3] from the Lord of All Creation.

3 If[1] they say: "He has invented it,"[2] the truth is:[3] it is the truth[4] from thy Lord, that thou warn a people to whom no warner came before thee, that they might be guided.

4 God is He who created the heavens and the earth and what is between them[1] in six days,[2] then established Himself upon the Throne. You have not, besides[3] Him, any ally or intercessor. Will you then not[4] take heed!

5 He directs the matter from the heaven to the earth; then it rises to Him in a day the measure whereof is a thousand years of what you count.

6 That is the Knower of the Unseen and the Seen, the Exalted in Might, the Merciful,

7 Who made good everything He created, and began the creation of man from clay;

8 Then He made his progeny of an extraction of despised water;[1]

9 Then He fashioned him, and breathed into him of His Spirit; and He made for you hearing and sight and hearts;[1] little are you grateful.

11 Say thou: “There will take you the angel of death who has been given charge of you; then to your Lord will you be returned.”

12 ¶32.2 And if thou couldst see when the lawbreakers will hang their heads before their Lord: “Our Lord: we have seen and heard, so send Thou us back. We will work righteousness! We are those who are certain!”[1]

13 And had We willed, We could have given every soul its guidance. But the word from Me is binding:[1] “I will fill Gehenna with the jinna[2] and mankind all together!”

14 “So taste! Because you forgot the meeting of this your day, We have forgotten you. And taste the punishment of eternity because of what you did!”

15 Only those believe in[1] Our proofs[2] who, when they are reminded thereof, fall down in submission;[3] and they give glory[4] with the praise of their Lord, and they wax not proud.

16 Their sides forsake their beds; they call to their Lord in fear and hope,[1] and of what We have provided them they spend.

18 Is then he who[1] is a believer[2] like him who is perfidious?[3] They are not equal.

19 As for those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: for them are the Gardens of Shelter as a welcome for what they did.

20 And as for those who are perfidious:[1] their shelter is the Fire. As often as they desire to come out therefrom, they are brought back into it; and it is said to them: “Taste the punishment of the Fire which you denied!”

21 And We will let them taste of the lower[1] punishment before the greater, that they might return.[2]

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

35[2] 1 Praise belongs to God, Originator of the Heavens and the Earth who made the angels messengers having wings: two, three, and four![1] He increases in creation what He wills; God is over all things powerful.

2 What God opens to men of mercy, none can withhold it; and what He withholds, none can send it after Him; and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[1]

3 O mankind: remember the favour of God upon you. Is there any creator, other than God, who provides for you from the heaven and the earth? There is no god save He;[1] how then are you deluded?

4 And if they deny thee: messengers were denied before thee; and to God are matters[1] returned.

5 O mankind: the promise of God is true;[1] so let not the life of this world delude you; and let not the Deluder[2] delude you about God.

6 The satan[1] is an enemy to you; so take him as an enemy; he but calls his party that they might be among the companions of the Inferno.

7 Those who ignore warning:[1] they have a severe punishment; and those who heed warning[2] and do righteous deeds: they have forgiveness and a great reward.

9 And God is He who sends the winds, that they stir up a cloud; and We drive it to a dead land, and give life thereby to the earth after its death. Thus is the Resurrection.

10 Whoso desires power and glory:[1] power and glory belong to God altogether. To Him the good word ascends, and the righteous deed raises it; but those who plot evil deeds:[2] they have a severe punishment; and the scheme of those, it will perish.

And to God is the journey's end.

19 And not equal are the blind and the seeing,

20 Nor the darknesses and the light,

21 Nor the shade and the heat,

22 And not equal are the living and the dead. God makes hear whom He wills; and thou canst not make hear those in the graves —

23 Thou art only a warner.

24 We have sent thee with the truth[1] as a bearer of glad tidings, and as a warner. And there was no community save a warner passed among it.

25 And if they deny thee, then those before them denied; their messengers came to them with clear signs, and with the writings,[1] and the Illuminating Writ;[2]

26 Then I seized those who ignored warning[1] — then how was My rejection!

27 ¶35.4 Dost thou not see[1] that God sends down from the sky water? And We bring forth therewith fruit differing in its hues; and among the mountains are streaks, white and red — differing in their hues — and deep black,

28 And among men and beasts and cattle, differing in their hues; thus[1] there but fear God the knowledgeable among His servants; God is exalted in might and forgiving.

29 Those who recite the Writ[1] of God[2] and uphold the duty[3] and spend of what We have provided them, secretly and openly, expect a trade that perishes not,

30 That He will pay their rewards in full, and increase them out of His bounty; He is forgiving and appreciative.

31 And that which We revealed[1] to thee of the Writ:[2] it is the truth,[3] confirming what was before it;[4] God is of His servants aware and seeing.

32 Then We caused to inherit the Writ[1] those whom We have chosen of Our servants; and among them is he who wrongs his soul, and among them is one lukewarm, and among them are the frontrunners in good deeds by the leave of God; that[2] is the great favour.

33 Gardens of perpetual abode will they enter, adorned therein with bracelets of gold, and pearls, and their raiment therein is silk.

34 And they will say: "Praise belongs to God who has removed from us grief! Our Lord is forgiving and appreciative,

35 "Who has settled us in the enduring abode out of His bounty. There does not touch us herein fatigue, and there does not touch us herein weariness."

36 And those who ignore warning,[1] they have the fire of Gehenna. Not decreed is it for them that they might die, and nor will its punishment be lightened for them. Thus reward We every ingrate.

41 God holds the heavens and the earth lest they[1] cease. And if they[2] should cease, no one could hold them[3] after Him. He is clement and forgiving.

42 And they swore by God their strongest oaths that if a warner came to them, they would be more guided than any of the communities; but when a warner came to them, it increased them only in aversion,

43 Waxing proud in the land, and scheming evil; but the evil scheme surrounds none save its authors.[1] Then look they save for the practice[2] of the former peoples? And thou wilt not find in the practice of God any change; and thou wilt not find in the practice of God any alteration.

44 Have they not travelled in the earth and seen how was the final outcome of those who were before them? And they were stronger than them in power; but God is not such that anything in the heavens or in the earth should frustrate[1] Him; He is knowing and powerful.

45 And were God to take men[1] for what they earn, He would not leave any creature upon its surface.[2] But He delays them to a stated term. But when their term comes, then is God of His servants seeing.

5 A[1] revelation[2] of the Exalted in Might, the Merciful,
6 That thou warn a people whose fathers were not warned; and they are heedless.

7 Binding[1] has become the word upon most of them, so they do not believe.[2]

8 We placed yokes on their necks up to the chins, and they with heads forced high;

9 And We made a barrier before them and a barrier behind them, and covered them, so they see not.

10 And it is the same to them whether thou warnedst them, or thou hast not warned them: they do not believe.[1]

11 Thou but warnest[1] him who follows the remembrance,[2] and fears the Almighty[3] unseen. So bear thou glad tidings to him of forgiveness and a noble[4] reward.

14 When We sent to them two, then they denied them, so We reinforced with a third, and they said: "We are emissaries to you,"

15 Said they: "You are only mortals like us; and the Almighty[1] has not sent down anything. You only lie."

16 They said: "Our Lord knows that we are emissaries to you,

17 "And upon us is only the clear notification."

18 Said they: "We think you an evil omen. If you cease not, we will stone you; and there will touch you from us a painful punishment."

19 They said: "Your evil omen is with yourselves.[1] Is it[2] that you were reminded? The truth is,[3] you are a people committing excess."
20 And a man came running from the furthest part of the city.[1] He said: "O my people: follow the emissaries!

21 "Follow those who ask of you no reward, and they are guided.

45 But when[1] it is said to them: "Be in prudent fear[2] of what is before you,[3] and what is behind you, that you might obtain mercy[...]."[4]

46 And there comes not to them a proof[1] among the proofs[2] of their Lord save they turn away therefrom.

47 And when it is said to them: "Spend of what God has provided you," those who ignore warning[1] say to those who heed warning:[2] "Shall we feed one whom, had God willed, He would have fed? You are only in manifest error."

48 And they say: "When is this promise, if you be truthful?"[1]

49 They look only for one Blast which will seize them while they are disputing —

50 They will not be able to make a bequest, nor will they return to their people.

51 ¶36.4 And the Trumpet will be blown; and then from the graves will they hasten forth[1] to their Lord.

52 They will say: "Woe is us! Who has raised us from our sleeping place?" — "This[1] is what the Almighty[2] promised! And the emissaries spoke truth!"[3]

53 It will be only one Blast — and then are they summoned before Us all together:

54 "This day no soul will be wronged in anything, and you will not be rewarded save for what you did."

55 The companions of the Garden, this day, will be engaged in gladness,[1]

56 They and their wives, in shade, upon couches reclining.

57 They have therein fruit, and they have what they call for.

58 "Peace!" — as a word[1] from a merciful Lord —

59 "But separate yourselves this day, O you lawbreakers!

60 "Did I not commission you, O children of Adam, that you serve not the satan,"[1] — he is an open enemy to you —

61 "But that you serve Me? This is a straight path.

62 "And he led astray among you a great multitude. Did you then not use reason?

63 "This is Gehenna: — which you were promised —

64 "Burn therein this day, for what you denied!"

65 This day will We seal their mouths, and their hands will speak to Us, and their feet will bear witness as to what they earned.

66 And had We willed, We would have blinded their eyes;[1] then would they compete for the path, but how would they see?[2]

67 And had We willed, We would have so transformed them in their places, they could neither proceed nor return.[1]

68 And to whom We give long life, We reverse him in creation. Will you then not[1] use reason!

69 ¶36.5 And We taught him not poetry, and it does not behove him; it is only a remembrance[1] and a clear recitation[2]

70 To warn whoso is alive, and that the word might become binding against the false claimers of guidance.[1]

71 Have they not considered[1] that We created cattle for them of what Our hands made, then are they their masters?

72 And We subdued them to them, and some of them they ride, and some of them they eat;

73 And they have in them benefits and drinks. Will they then not[1] be grateful?

74 But they have taken gods other than[1] God, that they might be helped.

75 They cannot help them,[1] and they[2] are for them[3] a force summoned.[4]

76 So let not their speech grieve thee; We know what they conceal and what they make known.

78 And he strikes for Us a similitude,[1] and forgets his creation; he says: "Who will give life to the bones when they are rotted away?"

79 Say thou: "He will give them life who produced them the first time," — and He knows all creation —

80 "Who made for you from the green tree fire, and then therefrom you kindle."

81 Is not He who created the heavens and the earth able to create the like of them? Verily;[1] and He is the Knowing Creator.

82 His command, when He intends a thing, is that He says to it: "Be thou," and it is.

83 So glory[1] be to Him in whose hand is the dominion of all things! And to Him you will be returned.

11 So ask thou them: are they[1] harder to create, or those We have created?[2] We created them[3] of clinging clay.

12 Yet[1] thou dost marvel; and they deride

13 And, when they are reminded, bear not in mind
14 And, when they see a proof,[1] turn in derision.

101 So We gave him glad tidings of a clement lad;

23 “This, my brother, has ninety-nine ewes, and I have one ewe; so he said: ‘Place thou her in my charge’; and he overcame me in speech.”

24 Said he: “He has wronged thee in asking thy ewe for his ewes; and many among acquaintances oppress one another save those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds — and few are they.” And David understood that We had but subjected him to means of denial;[2] and he asked forgiveness of his Lord, and fell down humbly[3] and repented.

25 So We forgave him that; and he has nearness to Us and a good journey’s end.[1]

26 “O David: We have appointed thee a successor in the earth; so judge thou between men with justice;[1] and follow thou not vain desire lest it cause thee to stray from the path of God.” Those who stray from the path of God will have a severe punishment because they forgot the Day of Reckoning.

32 He said: “I have loved the love of good out of[1] remembrance[2] of my Lord!” — until it[3] disappeared behind the partition: —

35 He said: “My Lord: forgive Thou me, and give Thou me a dominion such as behoves no one after me;[1] Thou art the Bestower!”

36 So We made subject to him the wind — running by his command gently[1] whithersoever he directed —

29 God has struck a similitude: — a man concerning whom are partners[1] quarrelling, and a man in submission to one[2] man. Are they[3] equal in likeness? Praise belongs to God! The truth is,[4] most of them know not.

65 And it has been revealed[1] to thee and to those before thee: "If thou ascribe a partnership,[2] thy deeds will be made vain, and thou wilt be among the losers."

66 Nay,[1] but God shalt thou serve; and be thou among the grateful.)

67 And they measured God not with the measure due[1] Him. And the earth altogether will be His handful on the Day of Resurrection, and the heavens will be folded up in His right hand. Glory[2] be to Him! And exalted is He above that to which they ascribe a partnership![3]

68 And the Trumpet will be blown, and whoso is in the heavens and whoso is in the earth will fall down thunderstruck[1] save whom God wills. Then will it be blown again; and then will they be standing, looking on.

69 And the earth will shine with the light of its Lord; and the Writ[1] will be set up, and the prophets and the witnesses will be brought, and it will be concluded between them with justice,[2] and they will not be wronged.

70 And every soul will be paid in full for what it did; and He best knows what they do.

They will say: "Verily."[4] But the word of punishment is binding[5] upon the false claimers of guidance.[6]

72 It will be said: "Enter the gates of Gehenna, abiding eternally therein"; and evil is the dwelling of the proud.

73 And those who were in prudent fear[1] of their Lord will be driven towards the Garden in companies. When[2] they have come to it and the gates thereof have been opened[...].[3] And the keepers thereof will say to them: "Peace be upon you! You did well; so enter it,[4] abiding eternally."

3 The Forgiver of Transgression,[1] and the Accepter of Repentance, the Severe in Retribution, the Owner of Abundance. There is no god save He;[2] unto Him is the journey's end.

4 None disputes concerning the proofs[1] of God save those who ignore warning,[2] so let not delude thee their going to and fro in the land.

5 There denied before them the people of Noah, and the parties after them; and every community purposed against their messenger to seize him, and disputed with falsehood to refute thereby the truth.[1] Then I seized them — and how was My retribution![2]

6 And thus became binding[1] the word of thy Lord upon those who ignore warning,[2] that they are the companions of the Fire.

7 Those who bear the Throne and those round about it give glory[1] with the praise of their Lord, and believe in[2] Him, and ask forgiveness for those who heed warning:[3] "Our Lord: Thou encompassest all things in mercy and knowledge, so forgive Thou those who have repented and followed Thy path, and protect Thou them from the punishment of Hell!

8 "Our Lord: make Thou them enter[1] the Gardens of Perpetual Abode which Thou hast promised them and whoso was righteous among their fathers, and their wives, and their progeny[2] — Thou art the Exalted in Might, the Wise[3] —

9 "And protect Thou them from evil deeds;[1] and he whom Thou protectest from evil deeds[2] that day, upon him hast Thou had mercy." And that[3] is the Great Achievement.

10 ¶40.2 Those who ignore warning[1] will be called: "The hatred of God is greater than your hatred of yourselves — when you were invited to faith, but denied."

11 (They will say: "Our Lord: twice hast Thou given us death, and twice hast Thou given us life;[1] and we have confessed our transgressions[2] — is there to a way out any path?")

12 "That is because, when God was called to alone, you denied; but if a partnership[1] was ascribed to Him, you believed"; then judgment belongs to God, the Exalted, the Great.

13 (He it is that shows you His proofs[1] and sends down for you from the sky provision; and there takes heed only whoso turns in repentance.

14 So call to God, sincere to Him in doctrine,[1] though the false claimers of guidance[2] be averse.)

15 The Raiser of Degrees, the Owner of the Throne: He casts the Spirit of His command upon whom He wills of His servants, that he might warn of the Day of Meeting:

16 The day they emerge nothing of them will be hidden from God: "Whose is the dominion this day?" — "It belongs to God, the One, the Vanquishing:

17 "This day is each soul rewarded for what it earned! No injustice this day!" God is swift in reckoning.

18 And warn thou them of the Day of the Drawing Near,[1] when the hearts will choke[2] in the throats:[3] — No loyal friend for the wrongdoers![4] No intercessor who is obeyed!

19 He knows the treachery of the eyes and what the breasts conceal.

20 And God decides in justice.[1] And those to whom they call besides[2] Him decide not anything; God, He is the Hearer, the Seeing.

21 ¶40.3 Have they not travelled in the earth and seen how was the final outcome of those who were before them? They were stronger than them in power and impact[1] in the earth; but God seized them for their transgressions;[2] and they had not from God any defender,

22 For it is that[1] their messengers brought them clear signs, but they denied, so God seized them. He is strong, and severe in retribution.

11 Then He directed Himself to the sky when it was smoke, and said to it and to the earth: "Come,[1] willingly or unwillingly."[2] They[3] said: "We come willingly."

12 And He determined[1] them[2] — seven heavens in two days[3] — and instructed[4] each heaven in its command. And We adorned the lower heaven with lamps and as protection. That is the determination of the Exalted in Might, the Knowing.

13 Then if they turn away, say thou: "I warn you of a thunderbolt like the thunderbolt of ʿĀd and Thamūd,"

14 When the messengers had come to them from before them and from after them:[1] "Serve not save God," they said: "If our Lord had willed, He would have sent down angels,

15 Then as for ʿĀd: they had waxed proud in the land without cause,[1] and they said: "Who is stronger than us in power?" Had they not considered[2] that God who created them, He was stronger than them in power? And they rejected Our proofs.[3]

16 Then We sent upon them a howling wind in days of calamity, that We might let them taste the punishment of disgrace in the life of this world; and the punishment of the Hereafter is more disgracing, and they will not be helped.

17 And as for Thamūd: We guided them, but they preferred blindness over guidance, so the thunderbolt of the punishment of humiliation seized them for what they earned.

18 And We delivered those who heeded warning[1] and were in prudent fear.[2]

19 ¶41.3 And the day the enemies of God are gathered to the Fire — and they will be marshalled[1] —

24 And if they be patient, the Fire is a home for them; and if they seek to make amends, they will not be of those who might make amends.

25 And We assigned to them companions, and they made fair to them what was before them,[1] and what following them; and upon them the word concerning the communities of domini[2] and servi[3] which had passed away before them became binding:[4] — they were losers.

43 Nothing is said to thee but what has been said to the messengers before thee: — "Thy Lord is possessor of forgiveness, and possessor of painful retribution,"[1] —

44 And had We made it a recitation[1] in a foreign tongue, they would have said: "Oh, that its proofs[2] were but[3] set out and detailed[4] — a foreign tongue and an Arab!"[5] Say thou: "It is for those who heed warning[6] a guidance and a healing"; but those who do not believe:[7] in their ears is deafness, and it is for them blindness; those: they are called from a far place.

45 ¶41.6 And We gave Moses the Writ,[1] but it was disputed about.[2] And were it not for a word that preceded from thy Lord, it would have been concluded between them; and they are in sceptical doubt concerning it.

46 Whoso works righteousness, it is for his soul; and whoso does evil, it is against it; and thy Lord is not unjust to the servants.[1]

47 To Him is referred knowledge of the Hour.[1] And no fruits come forth from their sheaths and no female bears or gives birth save with His knowledge. And the day He calls them: — "Where are My partners?"[2] — they will say: "We proclaim to Thee, there is not among us any witness."

48 And strayed from them will be what they called to before; and they will know that they have no place of refuge.

49 Man grows not weary of calling for good; but if evil touches him, he is without hope and despairing.

50 And if We let him taste mercy after an affliction touches him, he will say: "This is mine;[1] and I think not that the Hour will come — and if I am brought back to my Lord, mine will be the best with Him!" But We will inform those who ignore warning[2] about what they did, and We will let them taste of a stern punishment.

51 And when We favour man, he turns away and distances himself;[1] but when evil touches him, then is he full of long supplication.

52 Say thou: "Have you considered:[1] if it[2] is from God, then you denied it — who is further astray than one who is in extreme schism?"

53 We will show them Our proofs[1] in the horizons, and in themselves, until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth.[2] Does it not suffice concerning thy Lord that He is witness to all things?

54 In truth,[1] they are in doubt about the meeting with their Lord. In truth,[2] He encompasses all things.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

3 Thus[1] reveals[2] to thee, and to those before thee, God, the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[3]

4 To Him belongs what is in the heavens and what is in the earth; and He is the Exalted, the Great.

5 The heavens are nigh rent from above themselves,[1] and the angels give glory[2] with the praise of their Lord and ask forgiveness for those upon the earth. In truth,[3] God, He is the Forgiver, the Merciful.

6 And those who take allies besides[1] Him: God is custodian over them; and thou art not a guardian over them.

7 And thus We have revealed[1] to thee an Arabic recitation,[2] that thou warn the mother of cities[3] and whoso is around her, and thou warn of the Day of Gathering whereof there is no doubt: a faction will be in the Garden, and a faction in the Inferno.

8 And had God willed, He would have made them one community; but He makes whom He wills enter into His mercy; and the wrongdoers[1] have neither ally nor helper.

9 If[1] they have taken allies besides[2] Him:[3] then God, He is the Ally, and He gives life to the dead, and He is over all things powerful.

10 And that wherein you differ in anything, the judgment thereof is to God: "That is God, my Lord; in whom I place my trust, and to whom I turn."

11 ¶42.2 The Originator of the Heavens and the Earth has made for you of yourselves pairs,[1] and of the cattle pairs; He creates[2] you thereby — there is nothing like Him — and He is the Hearer, the Seeing.

12 To Him belong the keys of the heavens and the earth. He expands provision for whom He wills, and He straitens; He knows all things.

13 He ordained for you of doctrine[1] what He enjoined upon Noah, and that We have revealed[2] to thee, and what We enjoined upon Abraham and Moses and Jesus:[3] "Uphold[4] the doctrine,[5] and be not divided therein." Difficult for the idolaters[6] is that to which thou invitest them.[7] God chooses for Himself whom He wills, and guides to Himself him who turns in repentance.

14 And they became divided only after knowledge came to them, through sectarian zealotry[1] between them. And were it not for a word that preceded from thy Lord to a stated term, it would have been concluded between them. And those who were caused to inherit the Writ[2] after them are in sceptical doubt concerning it.

15 So to that[1] then call thou. And keep thou to the path as thou art commanded, and follow thou not their vain desires,[2] but say thou: "I believe in[3] what God sent down of Writ,[4] and I have been commanded to be just among you. God is our Lord and your Lord. We have our works, and you have your works;[5] there is no argument[6] between us and you; God will bring us together, and to Him is the journey's end."

16 And those who dispute concerning God after that answer has been made to him:[1] their argument[2] has no weight with their Lord; and upon them is wrath, and they have a severe punishment.

17 God it is who has sent down the Writ[1] with the truth[2] and the balance.[3] And what can make thee know that the Hour might be nigh!

18 Those who believe not in[1] it seek to hasten it;[2] but those who heed warning[3] are in dread of it and know that it is the truth.[4] Nay,[5] those who are in doubt concerning the Hour are in extreme error.

19 God is subtle with His servants; He provides for whom He wills. And He is the Strong, the Exalted in Might.

21 If[1] they have partners[2] which ordained for them of doctrine[3] that for which God has not given leave[...].[4] And had it not been for the word of decision, it would have been concluded between them; and the wrongdoers[5] have a painful punishment.

22 Thou wilt see the wrongdoers[1] fearful of what they have earned; and it will befall them. And those who heed warning[2] and do righteous deeds will be in the lush meadows of the Gardens; they will have what they wish with their Lord. That[3] is the great favour,

23 That of which God gives glad tidings to His servants who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds. Say thou: "I ask of you for it no reward save love among kin." And whoso commits a good deed, We will increase him in good therein; God is forgiving and appreciative.

51 And it is not for a mortal that God should speak to him save by revelation[1] or from behind a partition, or that He send a messenger and that he reveal,[2] by His leave, what He wills; He is exalted and wise.

وَكَذَٰلِكَ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ رُوحٗا مِّنۡ أَمۡرِنَاۚ مَا كُنتَ تَدۡرِي مَا ٱلۡكِتَٰبُ وَلَا ٱلۡإِيمَٰنُ وَلَٰكِن جَعَلۡنَٰهُ نُورٗا نَّهۡدِي بِهِۦ مَن نَّشَآءُ مِنۡ عِبَادِنَاۚ وَإِنَّكَ لَتَهۡدِيٓ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٖ مُّسۡتَقِيمٖ ﴿٥٢﴾

52 And thus We have revealed[1] to thee a Spirit of Our command. Thou knewest not what the Writ[2] was, or faith, but We made it[3] a light whereby We guide whom We will of Our servants. And thou — thou guidest[4] to a straight path:

صِرَٰطِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلَّذِي لَهُۥ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۗ أَلَآ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ تَصِيرُ ٱلۡأُمُورُ ﴿٥٣﴾

3 We have made it an Arabic recitation,[1] that you might use reason,

4 And it is in the foundation of the Writ,[1] with Us, exalted and wise.

5 Shall We then turn the remembrance[1] away[2] from you because you are a people committing excess?

6 And how many a prophet did We send to the former peoples!
7 But there came not to them a prophet save they mocked him.

8 And We destroyed stronger than them in might; and the example of the former peoples has gone before.

9 And if thou askest them who created the heavens and the earth,[1] they will say: "There created them the Exalted in Might, the Knowing--"[2]

10 Who made the earth a bed for you, and made roads for you therein that you might be guided;

[2] 1 ḥā mīm[1]

2 By the Clear Writ![1]

3 We sent it[1] down on a blessed night[2] — We are warning —

4 Wherein[1] is separated every wise command

5 By command from Us — We are sending —

6 As mercy from thy Lord; He is the Hearing, the Knowing,

7 Lord of the Heavens and the Earth and what is between them,[1] if you are certain.[2]

8 There is no god save He;[1] He gives life and He gives death; your Lord, and the Lord of your fathers of old.

9 The truth is,[1] they are in doubt, playing.

10 So watch thou for the day the sky will bring obvious[1] smoke[2]

11 Covering mankind: "This is a painful punishment!

12 "Our Lord: remove Thou from us the punishment; we are believers!"[1]

13 How should they have the reminder when a clear messenger has come to them,[1]

﴿١٣﴾

ثُمَّ تَوَلَّوْا۟ عَنْهُ وَقَالُوا۟ مُعَلَّمٌ مَّجْنُونٌ ﴿١٤﴾

14 Then they turned away from him and said: "One taught and possessed"?[1]

إِنَّا كَاشِفُوا۟ ٱلْعَذَابِ قَلِيلًا إِنَّكُمْ عَآئِدُونَ ﴿١٥﴾

15 We, indeed, remove the punishment a little; you, indeed, revert.[1]

يَوْمَ نَبْطِشُ ٱلْبَطْشَةَ ٱلْكُبْرَىٰٓ إِنَّا مُنتَقِمُونَ ﴿١٦﴾

16 The day We seize with the greatest seizing We will take retribution!

۞ وَلَقَدْ فَتَنَّا قَبْلَهُمْ قَوْمَ فِرْعَوْنَ وَجَآءَهُمْ رَسُولٌ كَرِيمٌ ﴿١٧﴾

17 And We had subjected the people of Pharaoh[1] before them to means of denial,[2] and there came to them a noble messenger:

أَنْ أَدُّوٓا۟ إِلَىَّ عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ إِنِّى لَكُمْ رَسُولٌ أَمِينٌ ﴿١٨﴾

18 "Deliver up to me the servants of God; I am to you a trustworthy messenger."

وَأَن لَّا تَعْلُوا۟ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ إِنِّىٓ ءَاتِيكُم بِسُلْطَٰنٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿١٩﴾

19 And: "Exalt not yourselves against God; I bring you a clear authority."

وَإِنِّى عُذْتُ بِرَبِّى وَرَبِّكُمْ أَن تَرْجُمُونِ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 And: "I have sought refuge in my Lord and your Lord lest you stone me."

وَإِن لَّمْ تُؤْمِنُوا۟ لِى فَٱعْتَزِلُونِ ﴿٢١﴾

21 And: "If you believe me not, then stay away from me."

فَدَعَا رَبَّهُۥٓ أَنَّ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ قَوْمٌ مُّجْرِمُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 And he called to his Lord that these were a people of lawbreakers.

فَأَسْرِ بِعِبَادِى لَيْلًا إِنَّكُم مُّتَّبَعُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 "Then travel thou with My servants by night: — you will be followed.

وَٱتْرُكِ ٱلْبَحْرَ رَهْوًا إِنَّهُمْ جُندٌ مُّغْرَقُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 "And leave thou the sea tranquil: — they are a force to be drowned."

كَمْ تَرَكُوا۟ مِن جَنَّٰتٍ وَعُيُونٍ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 How many were the gardens and springs they left

وَزُرُوعٍ وَمَقَامٍ كَرِيمٍ ﴿٢٦﴾

26 And cornlands and noble station[1]

وَنَعْمَةٍ كَانُوا۟ فِيهَا فَٰكِهِينَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 And prosperity wherein they found gladness!

كَذَٰلِكَ وَأَوْرَثْنَٰهَا قَوْمًا ءَاخَرِينَ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 Thus![1] And We gave it as an inheritance to another people.

فَمَا بَكَتْ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلسَّمَآءُ وَٱلْأَرْضُ وَمَا كَانُوا۟ مُنظَرِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

29 And the heaven and the earth wept not for them, nor were they granted respite,

وَلَقَدْ نَجَّيْنَا بَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ مِنَ ٱلْعَذَابِ ٱلْمُهِينِ ﴿٣٠﴾

30 ¶44.2 And We delivered the children of Israel from the humiliating punishment,

مِن فِرْعَوْنَ إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ عَالِيًا مِّنَ ٱلْمُسْرِفِينَ ﴿٣١﴾

31 From Pharaoh:[1] — he was a high one among the committers of excess.

وَلَقَدِ ٱخْتَرْنَٰهُمْ عَلَىٰ عِلْمٍ عَلَى ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾

32 And We chose them,[1] according to knowledge, above all mankind,

وَءَاتَيْنَٰهُم مِّنَ ٱلْـَٔايَٰتِ مَا فِيهِ بَلَٰٓؤٌا۟ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٣٣﴾

33 And We gave them among proofs[1] that wherein was a clear trial.

إِنَّ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ لَيَقُولُونَ ﴿٣٤﴾

34 These[1] say:

إِنْ هِىَ إِلَّا مَوْتَتُنَا ٱلْأُولَىٰ وَمَا نَحْنُ بِمُنشَرِينَ ﴿٣٥﴾

35 "There is only our former[1] death, and we will not be raised.

فَأْتُوا۟ بِـَٔابَآئِنَآ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٣٦﴾

36 "So bring us our fathers, if you be truthful."[1]

أَهُمْ خَيْرٌ أَمْ قَوْمُ تُبَّعٍ وَٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ أَهْلَكْنَٰهُمْ إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا۟ مُجْرِمِينَ ﴿٣٧﴾

37 Are they better, or the people of Tubbaʿ?[1] And those before them we destroyed: — they were lawbreakers.

وَمَا خَلَقْنَا ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا لَٰعِبِينَ ﴿٣٨﴾

38 And We created not the heavens and the earth and what is between them[1] in play.

مَا خَلَقْنَٰهُمَآ إِلَّا بِٱلْحَقِّ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ

39 We created them not but in truth,[1] but most of them know not.

48 "Then pour over his head from the punishment of scalding water!"

49 "Taste thou — thou art the exalted in might, the noble!

50 "This is that whereof you doubted."

51 Those of prudent fear[1] will be in a secure station[2]

52 Among gardens and springs,

53 Clothed in finest silk and brocade, facing one another.

54 Thus![1] And We will marry them to pure, lustrous-eyed maidens.[2]

55 They will call therein for every fruit in safety.

56 They will not taste therein of death save the former[1] death, and He will protect them

2 The revelation[1] of the Writ[2] is from God, the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[3]

3 In the heavens and the earth are proofs[1] for the believers;[2]

4 And in your creation and the creatures He scatters in the earth are proofs[1] for people who are certain;[2]

5 And in[1] the alternation of night and day,[2] and in[3] what God sends down from the sky of provision and gives life thereby to the earth after its death, and in[4] the circulation of the winds are proofs[5] for people who reason.

6 Those are the proofs[1] of God; We recite them to thee in truth.[2] Then in what narration[3] after God and His proofs[4] will they believe?

8 Who hears the proofs[1] of God recited to him then persists in waxing proud as if he heard them not! Then give thou him tidings[2] of a painful punishment.

9 And when he knows anything of Our proofs,[1] he takes them in mockery;[2] those have a humiliating punishment.

10 Behind them[1] is Gehenna; and that which they have earned will avail them nothing, nor what they took as allies besides[2] God; and they have a great punishment.

11 This is guidance. And those who deny the proofs[1] of their Lord: they have a punishment of a painful scourge.

12 ¶45.2 God it is who made subject for you the sea, that the ships[1] might run therein by His command, and that you might seek of His bounty; and that you might be grateful.

13 And He made subject for you what is in the heavens and what is in the earth — altogether from Him.[1] In that are proofs[2] for people who reflect.

14 Say thou to those who heed warning,[1] that they forgive those who look not for the days of God, that He might reward people for what they earned.

15 Whoso works righteousness, it is for his soul; and whoso does evil, it is against it; then to your Lord will you be returned.

16 And We gave the children of Israel the Writ,[1] and judgment, and prophethood,

وَٱلۡحُكۡمَ وَٱلنُّبُوَّةَ وَرَزَقۡنَٰهُم مِّنَ
ٱلطَّيِّبَٰتِ وَفَضَّلۡنَٰهُمۡ عَلَى ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ١٦

and provided them with good things, and favoured them above all mankind,

17 And We gave them clear signs of the command;[1] and they differed only after knowledge had come to them, through sectarian zealotry[2] between them. Thy Lord will decide between them on the Day of Resurrection concerning that wherein they differed.

18 Then set We thee upon a way[1] of the command; follow thou it,[2] and follow thou not the vain desires[3] of those who know not;

19 They will avail thee nothing against God. And the wrongdoers[1] are allies of one another; and God is the ally of those of prudent fear.[2]

20 This is a means of insight[1] for mankind, and guidance, and a mercy for people who are certain.[2]

21 If[1] those who commit evil deeds[2] think that We will make them like those who heed warning[3] and do righteous deeds: — the same in their living and their dying[4] — evil is what they judge.

30 Then as for those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: their Lord will make them enter into His mercy; that[2] is the clear achievement.

31 And as for those who ignore warning:[1] "Were not Our proofs[2] recited to you? But you had waxed proud and were a people of lawbreakers.

32 "And when it was said: 'The promise of God is true,[1] as is[2] the Hour about which there is no doubt,' you said: 'We know not what the Hour is; we think only assumption, and We are not convinced.'"

33 And the evil deeds[1] they did will appear to them, and there will surround them that whereat they mocked.

34 And it will be said: "This day do We forget you, as you forgot the meeting of this day of yours. And your shelter is the Fire, and you have no helpers.

35 "That is because you took the proofs[1] of God in mockery, and the life of this world deluded you." So, that day, they will not be brought forth therefrom, nor will they be allowed to make amends.

36 And to God belongs the praise — "The Lord of the Heavens! And the Lord of the Earth! The Lord of All Creation!" —

37 And to Him belongs the majesty in the heavens and the earth; and He is the Exalted

5 And who is further astray than he who calls, besides[1] God, to such as will not respond to him until the Day of Resurrection? And they of their call are unaware;

6 And when mankind is gathered, they will be enemies to them and be deniers of their service.

15 And We enjoined upon man: towards his parents, good conduct. His mother bore him with aversion, and brought him forth with aversion; and the bearing of him and the weaning of him is thirty months.[1] When[2] he has reached maturity, and reaches forty years,[3] he says: "My Lord: direct Thou me to be grateful for Thy favour with which Thou hast favoured me and my parents, and to work righteousness pleasing to Thee; and make Thou me right in my progeny. I have turned to Thee repentant. And I am of those submitting."[4]

any change.[4]

24 And He it is that restrained their hands from you, and your hands from them, in a belly of destruction[1] after He made you victorious over them; and God is, of what you do, seeing.

25 Those are they who disbelieved,[1] and turned you away from[2] the inviolable place of worship,[3] and the offering[4] was prevented from reaching its place of sacrifice.[5] And were it not for believing men[6] and believing women[7] whom you knew not whom you might have trampled[...][8] — then had dishonour befallen you on their account[9] without knowledge — that God might make enter into His mercy whom He wills. Had they been separate, We would have punished those who ignore warning[10] among them with a painful punishment.

26 When those who ignore warning[1] set in their hearts bigoted disdain:[2] — the bigoted disdain[3] of ignorance — then God sent down His tranquillity upon His messenger and upon the believers,[4] and imposed upon them the word of prudent fear;[5] and they have more right[6] to it and are worthy of it; and God is knowing of all things.

27 ¶48.4 God has confirmed the vision to His messenger in truth:[1] — "You will enter the inviolable place of worship,[2] if God wills, secure, shaven-headed and cut;[3] not fearing."[4] And He knew what you knew not, and He appointed, besides[5] that, a near victory.

28 He it is that sent His messenger with the guidance and the doctrine[1] of truth,[2] that He might make it manifest over all doctrine;[3] and sufficient is God as witness:[4]

29 Muḥammad is the messenger of God.[1] And those with him[2] are hard against the atheists,[3] merciful among themselves — thou seest them lowly,[4] in submission,[5] seeking favour from God and approval, their mark[6] on their faces[7] of the effects[8] of the Submission[9] — that[10] is their[11] likeness in the Torah. And their[12] likeness in the Gospel[13] is like a seed that put forth its shoot, and strengthens it, and established itself upon its stem pleasing the sowers, that by them He might enrage[14] the atheists.[15] God has promised those who heed warning[16] and do righteous deeds among them forgiveness and a great reward.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

17 They think it a favour to thee that they have submitted. Say thou: "Think not your submission[1] a favour to me. The truth is,[2] God has bestowed favour upon you that He has guided you to faith, if you be truthful."[3]

34 "Enter it in peace!" That is the Day of Eternity;
35 They have what they desire therein; and with Us is more.
36 And how many a generation We destroyed before them stronger than them in might! And they penetrated into[1] the land; had they any place of refuge?[2]

37 In that is a reminder for him who has a heart or gives ear with a conscious mind.[1]

38 And We created the heavens and the earth and what is between them[1] in six days,[2] and there touched Us no weariness.

39 So be thou patient over what they say, and give thou glory[1] with the praise of thy Lord before the rising of the sun, and before its[2] setting.

40 And some of the night, glorify[1] thou Him; and at the ends of the Submission.[2]
41 And listen thou for the day the Caller will call from a near place,

42 The day they will hear the Blast in truth:[1] that is the Day of Emergence:

43 — It is We who give life, and We give death; and to Us is the journey's end —

44 The day the earth is split asunder from about them, they hastening forth;[1] that is a gathering easy for Us.

27 And he placed it near them; he said: "Will you not eat?"

28 And he sensed fear from them.[1] They said: "Fear thou not!" And they gave him glad tidings of a learned lad.

35 And We brought out whoso therein was of the believers,[1]

36 And We found not therein but one house of those submitting.[1]

37 And We left therein a proof[1] for those who fear the painful punishment.

38 And in Moses:[1] when We sent him to Pharaoh[2] with a clear authority: —

39 He turned away with his supporters,[1] saying: “A sorcerer,[2] or one possessed.”

40 So We took him and his forces, and cast them into the sea;[1] and he was blameworthy.

25 And they will draw near to one another, asking of one another: —

26 They will say: “We were before, among our families, apprehensive,

27 “But God was gracious to us, and protected us from the punishment of the scorching wind.

28 “We called upon Him before; He is the Virtuous, the Merciful.”

29 ¶52.2 So remind thou! And by the favour of thy Lord thou art neither a soothsayer nor possessed.

30 If[1] they say: “A poet — we will wait for the vicissitudes[2] of Fate for him,”[3]

31 Say thou: “Wait — I am with you among those waiting.”

32 If[1] their reason[2] commands them this:[3] or if[4] they are a people transgressing all bounds:[5]

33 Or if[1] they say: “He has invented it,”[2] — the truth is,[3] they do not believe.[4]
34 Then let them produce a narrative[1] the like thereof, if they be truthful.[2]

1 By the star when it descends!
2 Your companion has not strayed, nor has he erred,[1]
3 Nor speaks he from vain desire.
4 It is only a revelation[1] revealed,[2]
5 Taught him[1] by one strong in power,
6 Possessed of firmness; and he stood,[1]
7 And he[1] was[2] in the highest horizon;[3]
8 Then he[1] drew nearer, and descended,
9 And was at a distance of two bows' length or nearer,
10 Then He[1] revealed[2] to His servant what He revealed.[3]
11 The heart lied not about what it saw.
12 Will you then dispute with him about what he saw?[1]
13 And he saw him[1] in another descent,[2]

17 The vision did not deviate, nor did it transgress.
18 Indeed, he saw of the greatest proofs[1] of his Lord.
19 Have you considered Al-Lāt and Al-ʿUzzā,
20 And Manāt the third, the other?[1]
21 Have you the males, and He the females?
22 That, then, is an unjust division.
23 They are only names you have named, you and your fathers, for which God sent down no authority. They follow only assumption, and what their[1] souls desire; but there has come to them guidance from their Lord.
24 If[1] man is to have what he desires:[2]
25 Then to God belong the Latter and the Former.[1]
26 ¶53.2 And how many an angel is there in the heavens! Their intercession avails nothing save after that God gives leave to whom He wills and is pleased.
27 Those who believe not in[1] the Hereafter name the angels with the names of females.[2]
28 But they have no knowledge thereof, they follow only assumption; and assumption avails nothing against the truth.[1]
29 So turn thou away from him who turns away from Our remembrance[1] and desires

يُرِدْ إِلَّا ٱلْحَيَوٰةَ ٱلدُّنْيَا ﴿٢٩﴾

only the life of this world.

ذَٰلِكَ مَبْلَغُهُم مِّنَ ٱلْعِلْمِ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ هُوَ

30 That is their attainment of knowledge.[1] Thy Lord: He best knows him who strays from His path; and He best knows him who is guided.

فَلَا تُزَكُّوٓا۟ أَنفُسَكُمْ هُوَ أَعْلَمُ بِمَنِ

32 Those who avoid the enormities of sin[1] and sexual immoralities[2] save slight mistakes[3] — thy Lord is vast in forgiveness. He best knew you when He produced you from the earth, and when you were foetuses in the wombs of your mothers; then hold not yourselves to be pure;[4] He best knows those of prudent fear.[5]

﴿٣٦﴾
وَلَقَدۡ رَٰوَدُوهُ عَن ضَيۡفِهِۦ فَطَمَسۡنَآ
أَعۡيُنَهُمۡ فَذُوقُواْ عَذَابِي وَنُذُرِ ﴿٣٧﴾
وَلَقَدۡ صَبَّحَهُم بُكۡرَةً عَذَابٞ مُّسۡتَقِرّٞ
﴿٣٨﴾

27 "We are sending the she-camel as a means of denial[1] for them; so watch thou them and be thou steadfast.

28 "And inform thou them that the water is to be divided between them — each drink attended."[1]

29 Then they called their companion, and he betook himself and did hamstring.[1]
30 Then how were My punishment and My warnings?[1]
31 We sent upon them one Blast, and they were like the dry stalks of the fence-maker.

32 And We have made the Qur'an[1] easy for remembrance;[2] so is there any who will remember?

33 The people of Lot denied the warnings.

34 We sent upon them a storm of stones save the family of Lot — We delivered them at dawn

35 As favour from Us; thus do We reward him who is grateful.

36 And he had warned them of Our seizing, but they disputed the warnings.

37 And they demanded of him his guests, so We put out their eyes: "Then taste My punishment and My warnings!"

38 And in the early morning there came upon them an abiding punishment:

فَذُوقُواْ عَذَابِي وَنُذُرِ ﴿٣٩﴾
وَلَقَدۡ يَسَّرۡنَا ٱلۡقُرۡءَانَ لِلذِّكۡرِ فَهَلۡ مِن
مُّدَّكِرٖ ﴿٤٠﴾
وَلَقَدۡ جَآءَ ءَالَ فِرۡعَوۡنَ ٱلنُّذُرُ ﴿٤١﴾
كَذَّبُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا كُلِّهَا فَأَخَذۡنَٰهُمۡ أَخۡذَ
عَزِيزٖ مُّقۡتَدِرٍ ﴿٤٢﴾
أَكُفَّارُكُمۡ خَيۡرٞ مِّنۡ أُوْلَٰٓئِكُمۡ أَمۡ
لَكُم بَرَآءَةٞ فِي ٱلزُّبُرِ ﴿٤٣﴾
أَمۡ يَقُولُونَ نَحۡنُ جَمِيعٞ مُّنتَصِرٞ ﴿٤٤﴾
سَيُهۡزَمُ ٱلۡجَمۡعُ وَيُوَلُّونَ ٱلدُّبُرَ ﴿٤٥﴾
بَلِ ٱلسَّاعَةُ مَوۡعِدُهُمۡ وَٱلسَّاعَةُ أَدۡهَىٰ
وَأَمَرُّ ﴿٤٦﴾
إِنَّ ٱلۡمُجۡرِمِينَ فِي ضَلَٰلٖ وَسُعُرٖ ﴿٤٧﴾
يَوۡمَ يُسۡحَبُونَ فِي ٱلنَّارِ عَلَىٰ وُجُوهِهِمۡ
ذُوقُواْ مَسَّ سَقَرَ ﴿٤٨﴾
إِنَّا كُلَّ شَيۡءٍ خَلَقۡنَٰهُ بِقَدَرٖ ﴿٤٩﴾
وَمَآ أَمۡرُنَآ إِلَّا وَٰحِدَةٞ كَلَمۡحِۭ بِٱلۡبَصَرِ
﴿٥٠﴾
وَلَقَدۡ أَهۡلَكۡنَآ أَشۡيَاعَكُمۡ فَهَلۡ مِن
مُّدَّكِرٖ ﴿٥١﴾
وَكُلُّ شَيۡءٖ فَعَلُوهُ فِي ٱلزُّبُرِ ﴿٥٢﴾
وَكُلُّ صَغِيرٖ وَكَبِيرٖ مُّسۡتَطَرٞ ﴿٥٣﴾

39 "Then taste My punishment and My warnings!"
40 And We have made the Qur'an[1] easy for remembrance;[2] so is there any who will remember?

41 ¶54.3 And the warnings came to the house of Pharaoh.[1]
42 They denied Our proofs,[1] all of them, then We seized them with the seizing of One exalted in might and omnipotent.

43 Are your atheists[1] better than those?[2] If[3] you have immunity in the writings:[4]

44 Or if[1] they say: "We are an assembly to be victorious:[2]
45 "The host[1] will be defeated, and turn the backs," —
46 The truth is,[1] the Hour is their appointment; and the Hour is more calamitous and more bitter.[2]

47 The lawbreakers are in error and insanity!

48 The day they are dragged into the Fire on their faces: "Taste the touch of Saqar!"[1]

49 We created everything in measure

50 And Our command is but one — as the twinkling of an eye[...].[1]

51 And We have destroyed your sects[1] before,[2] so is there any who will remember?

52 And everything they did is in the writings.[1]

53 And everything, small and great, is inscribed.

إِنَّ ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ فِى جَنَّٰتٍ وَنَهَرٍ ﴿٥٤﴾

54 Those of prudent fear[1] will be among gardens and a river,

فِى مَقْعَدِ صِدْقٍ عِندَ مَلِيكٍ مُّقْتَدِرٍ ﴿٥٥﴾

55 In a seat of honour,[1] in the presence of an Omnipotent Sovereign.

بِسْمِ ٱللَّـهِ ٱلرَّحْمَـٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

55[2] ۞ ٱلرَّحْمَـٰنُ ﴿١﴾

1 The Almighty:[1]

عَلَّمَ ٱلْقُرْءَانَ ﴿٢﴾

2 Taught the Qur'an,[1]

خَلَقَ ٱلْإِنسَـٰنَ ﴿٣﴾

3 Created man,

عَلَّمَهُ ٱلْبَيَانَ ﴿٤﴾

4 Taught him the clear statement.[1]

ٱلشَّمْسُ وَٱلْقَمَرُ بِحُسْبَانٍ ﴿٥﴾

5 The sun and the moon are in calculation,[1]

وَٱلنَّجْمُ وَٱلشَّجَرُ يَسْجُدَانِ ﴿٦﴾

6 And the star and the tree submit.[1]

وَٱلسَّمَآءَ رَفَعَهَا وَوَضَعَ ٱلْمِيزَانَ ﴿٧﴾

7 And the heaven — He raised it (and He set up the balance,

أَلَّا تَطْغَوْا۟ فِى ٱلْمِيزَانِ ﴿٨﴾

8 That you transgress not in the balance;

وَأَقِيمُوا۟ ٱلْوَزْنَ بِٱلْقِسْطِ وَلَا تُخْسِرُوا۟ ٱلْمِيزَانَ ﴿٩﴾

9 And uphold the weight with equity,[1] and cause not loss to the balance.)

وَٱلْأَرْضَ وَضَعَهَا لِلْأَنَامِ ﴿١٠﴾

10 And the earth — He set it out for living creatures,

فِيهَا فَـٰكِهَةٌ وَٱلنَّخْلُ ذَاتُ ٱلْأَكْمَامِ ﴿١١﴾

11 Therein is fruit, and date-palms with sheaths,

وَٱلْحَبُّ ذُو ٱلْعَصْفِ وَٱلرَّيْحَانُ ﴿١٢﴾

12 And the grain with husks, and fragrant herbs.

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿١٣﴾

13 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

خَلَقَ ٱلْإِنسَـٰنَ مِن صَلْصَـٰلٍ كَٱلْفَخَّارِ ﴿١٤﴾

14 He created man of sounding clay like pottery,

وَخَلَقَ ٱلْجَآنَّ مِن مَّارِجٍ مِّن نَّارٍ ﴿١٥﴾

15 And He created the demon dominus[1] from a mixture of fire.

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿١٦﴾

16 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

رَبُّ ٱلْمَشْرِقَيْنِ وَرَبُّ ٱلْمَغْرِبَيْنِ ﴿١٧﴾

17 The Lord of the Two Easts, and the Lord of the Two Wests:

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿١٨﴾

18 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

مَرَجَ ٱلْبَحْرَيْنِ يَلْتَقِيَانِ ﴿١٩﴾

19 Loosed the two seas,[1] meeting together,[2]

بَيْنَهُمَا بَرْزَخٌ لَّا يَبْغِيَانِ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 Between them[1] a barrier they[2] transgress not;

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٢١﴾

21 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

يَخْرُجُ مِنْهُمَا ٱللُّؤْلُؤُ وَٱلْمَرْجَانُ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 From them[1] come forth the pearl and the seed pearl.[2]

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

وَلَهُ ٱلْجَوَارِ ٱلْمُنشَـَٔاتُ فِى ٱلْبَحْرِ كَٱلْأَعْلَـٰمِ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 And His are the ships raised in the sea like banners.[1]

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

كُلُّ مَنْ عَلَيْهَا فَانٍ ﴿٢٦﴾

26 ¶55.2 Everyone on it[1] is to perish,

وَيَبْقَىٰ وَجْهُ رَبِّكَ ذُو ٱلْجَلَـٰلِ وَٱلْإِكْرَامِ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 But the face of thy Lord will remain,[1] Owner of Majesty and Honour.[2]

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

يَسْـَٔلُهُۥ مَن فِى ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ كُلَّ يَوْمٍ هُوَ فِى شَأْنٍ ﴿٢٩﴾

29 There asks of Him whoso is in the heavens and the earth; every day is He involved:[1]

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٣٠﴾

30 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

سَنَفْرُغُ لَكُمْ أَيُّهَ ٱلثَّقَلَانِ ﴿٣١﴾

31 We will attend to you, O you two encumbered ones!

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٣٢﴾

32 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

يَـٰمَعْشَرَ ٱلْجِنِّ وَٱلْإِنسِ إِنِ ٱسْتَطَعْتُمْ أَن تَنفُذُوا۟ مِنْ أَقْطَارِ ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ فَٱنفُذُوا۟ لَا تَنفُذُونَ إِلَّا بِسُلْطَـٰنٍ ﴿٣٣﴾

33 O congregation of domini[1] and servi:[2] if you are able to penetrate the regions[3] of the heavens and the earth, then penetrate! You will not penetrate save by authority:

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٣٤﴾

34 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

يُرۡسَلُ عَلَيۡكُمَا شُوَاظٞ مِّن نَّارٖ وَنُحَاسٞ
فَلَا تَنتَصِرَانِ ﴿٣٥﴾

35 Sent against you[1] will be a flame of fire and smoke;[2] and you[3] will not be helped.

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٣٦﴾

36 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

فَإِذَا ٱنشَقَّتِ ٱلسَّمَآءُ فَكَانَتۡ وَرۡدَةٗ
كَٱلدِّهَانِ ﴿٣٧﴾

37 And when the sky is rent asunder, and turns rose-red like oil,[1]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٣٨﴾

38 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

فَيَوۡمَئِذٖ لَّا يُسۡـَٔلُ عَن ذَنۢبِهِۦٓ إِنسٞ وَلَا
جَآنّٞ ﴿٣٩﴾

39 Then, that day, neither servus[1] nor dominus[2] will be questioned about his transgression.[3]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٤٠﴾

40 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

يُعۡرَفُ ٱلۡمُجۡرِمُونَ بِسِيمَٰهُمۡ فَيُؤۡخَذُ
بِٱلنَّوَٰصِي وَٱلۡأَقۡدَامِ ﴿٤١﴾

41 The lawbreakers will be known by their mark,[1] and they will be seized by the forelocks and the feet:

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٤٢﴾

42 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

هَٰذِهِۦ جَهَنَّمُ ٱلَّتِي يُكَذِّبُ بِهَا
ٱلۡمُجۡرِمُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾

43 “This is Gehenna!” — which the lawbreakers deny —

يَطُوفُونَ بَيۡنَهَا وَبَيۡنَ حَمِيمٍ ءَانٖ ﴿٤٤﴾

44 They will go[1] between it and boiling, scalding water.

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٤٥﴾

45 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

وَلِمَنۡ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهِۦ جَنَّتَانِ ﴿٤٦﴾

46 ¶55.3 But for him who fears the standing[1] of his Lord[2] are two gardens

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٤٧﴾

47 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

ذَوَاتَآ أَفۡنَانٖ ﴿٤٨﴾

48 With spreading branches[1]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٤٩﴾

49 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

فِيهِمَا عَيۡنَانِ تَجۡرِيَانِ ﴿٥٠﴾

50 Wherein[1] two springs flow;

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٥١﴾

51 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

فِيهِمَا مِن كُلِّ فَٰكِهَةٖ زَوۡجَانِ ﴿٥٢﴾

52 Wherein[1] of every fruit are two kinds;[2]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٥٣﴾

53 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

مُتَّكِـِٔينَ عَلَىٰ فُرُشِۭ بَطَآئِنُهَا مِنۡ
إِسۡتَبۡرَقٖ وَجَنَى ٱلۡجَنَّتَيۡنِ دَانٖ ﴿٥٤﴾

54 Reclining upon couches, lined with brocade — and the fruits[1] of both gardens hanging low[2] —

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٥٥﴾

55 (Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?)

56 In them:[1] maidens of modest gaze,[2] whom there deflowered before them neither servus[3] nor dominus:[4]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٥٧﴾

57 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

كَأَنَّهُنَّ ٱلۡيَاقُوتُ وَٱلۡمَرۡجَانُ ﴿٥٨﴾

58 As if rubies and seed pearls![1]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٥٩﴾

59 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

هَلۡ جَزَآءُ ٱلۡإِحۡسَٰنِ إِلَّا ٱلۡإِحۡسَٰنُ ﴿٦٠﴾

60 Will the reward of good be other than good?

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٦١﴾

61 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny?

وَمِن دُونِهِمَا جَنَّتَانِ ﴿٦٢﴾

62 And besides[1] both:[2] two gardens:[3]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٦٣﴾

63 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

مُدۡهَآمَّتَانِ ﴿٦٤﴾

64 Of darkest green,[1]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٦٥﴾

65 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

فِيهِمَا عَيۡنَانِ نَضَّاخَتَانِ ﴿٦٦﴾

66 Wherein[1] are two springs gushing;

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٦٧﴾

67 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

فِيهِمَا فَٰكِهَةٞ وَنَخۡلٞ وَرُمَّانٞ ﴿٦٨﴾

68 Wherein[1] is fruit, and date-palms, and pomegranate;

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٦٩﴾

69 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

فِيهِنَّ خَيۡرَٰتٌ حِسَانٞ ﴿٧٠﴾

70 In all,[1] comely and good:[2]

فَبِأَيِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٧١﴾

71 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

حُورٌ مَّقْصُورَٰتٌ فِى ٱلْخِيَامِ ﴿٧٢﴾

72 Pure-eyed maidens,[1] sheltered[2] in pavilions;

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٧٣﴾

73 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

لَمْ يَطْمِثْهُنَّ إِنسٌ قَبْلَهُمْ وَلَا جَآنٌّ ﴿٧٤﴾

74 Whom there deflowered before them neither servus[1] nor dominus:[2]

75 — Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny? —

مُتَّكِـِٔينَ عَلَىٰ رَفْرَفٍ خُضْرٍ وَعَبْقَرِىٍّ حِسَانٍ ﴿٧٦﴾

76 Reclining on green cushions and finest carpets!

فَبِأَىِّ ءَالَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ﴿٧٧﴾

77 Then which of the blessings of your[1] Lord will you[2] deny!

تَبَـٰرَكَ ٱسْمُ رَبِّكَ ذِى ٱلْجَلَـٰلِ وَٱلْإِكْرَامِ ﴿٧٨﴾

78 Blessed be the name of thy Lord, Owner of Majesty and Honour!

1 When the Event befalls,[1]

خَافِضَةٌ رَّافِعَةٌ ﴿٣﴾

3 Abasing, exalting;

إِذَا رُجَّتِ ٱلْأَرْضُ رَجًّا ﴿٤﴾

4 When the earth is shaken with convulsion,[1]

وَبُسَّتِ ٱلْجِبَالُ بَسًّا ﴿٥﴾

5 And the mountains crumble away[1]

فَكَانَتْ هَبَآءً مُّنۢبَثًّا ﴿٦﴾

6 And are dust dispersing,

وَكُنتُمْ أَزْوَٰجًا ثَلَـٰثَةً ﴿٧﴾

7 And you will be three kinds:[1]

فَأَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلْمَيْمَنَةِ مَآ أَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلْمَيْمَنَةِ ﴿٨﴾

8 The companions of the right! — what of the companions of the right? —

وَأَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلْمَشْـَٔمَةِ مَآ أَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلْمَشْـَٔمَةِ ﴿٩﴾

9 And the companions of the left! — what of the companions of the left? —

وَٱلسَّـٰبِقُونَ ٱلسَّـٰبِقُونَ ﴿١٠﴾

10 And the foremost! The foremost:

أُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ ٱلْمُقَرَّبُونَ ﴿١١﴾

11 Those are they brought near,[1]

فِى جَنَّـٰتِ ٱلنَّعِيمِ ﴿١٢﴾

12 In the Gardens of Bliss,

ثُلَّةٌ مِّنَ ٱلْأَوَّلِينَ ﴿١٣﴾

13 (A multitude of the former peoples,

وَقَلِيلٌ مِّنَ ٱلْـَٔاخِرِينَ ﴿١٤﴾

14 And a few of the latter)

عَلَىٰ سُرُرٍ مَّوْضُونَةٍ ﴿١٥﴾

مُّتَّكِـِٔينَ عَلَيْهَا مُتَقَـٰبِلِينَ ﴿١٦﴾

16 Reclining upon them, facing one another.

يَطُوفُ عَلَيْهِمْ وِلْدَٰنٌ مُّخَلَّدُونَ ﴿١٧﴾

17 Circulating[1] among them are youths[2] made eternal

بِأَكْوَابٍ وَأَبَارِيقَ وَكَأْسٍ مِّن مَّعِينٍ ﴿١٨﴾

18 With cups, and jugs, and a glass from a running spring,

لَّا يُصَدَّعُونَ عَنْهَا وَلَا يُنزِفُونَ ﴿١٩﴾

19 Wherefrom they have no headache, nor are they intoxicated;

وَفَـٰكِهَةٍ مِّمَّا يَتَخَيَّرُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 And such fruit as they choose,

وَلَحْمِ طَيْرٍ مِّمَّا يَشْتَهُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

21 And such flesh of fowl as they desire,

وَحُورٌ عِينٌ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 And pure, lustrous-eyed maidens,[1]

كَأَمْثَـٰلِ ٱللُّؤْلُؤِ ٱلْمَكْنُونِ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 As the likeness of hidden[1] pearls

جَزَآءًۢ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 As reward for what they did.

لَا يَسْمَعُونَ فِيهَا لَغْوًا وَلَا تَأْثِيمًا ﴿٢٥﴾

25 They hear therein neither vain speech, nor cause of sin,

إِلَّا قِيلًا سَلَـٰمًا سَلَـٰمًا ﴿٢٦﴾

26 Only the saying: “Peace! Peace!”

وَأَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلْيَمِينِ مَآ أَصْحَـٰبُ ٱلْيَمِينِ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 And the companions of the right! — what of the companions of the right? —

فِى سِدْرٍ مَّخْضُودٍ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 Among thornless lote trees,

وَطَلْحٍ مَّنضُودٍ ﴿٢٩﴾

29 And acacias layered,

وَظِلٍّ مَّمْدُودٍ ﴿٣٠﴾

30 And shade extended,

وَمَآءٍ مَّسۡكُوبٖ ﴿٣١﴾

وَفَٰكِهَةٖ كَثِيرَةٖ ﴿٣٢﴾

لَّا مَقۡطُوعَةٖ وَلَا مَمۡنُوعَةٖ ﴿٣٣﴾

وَفُرُشٖ مَّرۡفُوعَةٍ ﴿٣٤﴾

إِنَّآ أَنشَأۡنَٰهُنَّ إِنشَآءٗ ﴿٣٥﴾

فَجَعَلۡنَٰهُنَّ أَبۡكَارًا ﴿٣٦﴾

عُرُبًا أَتۡرَابًا ﴿٣٧﴾

لِّأَصۡحَٰبِ ٱلۡيَمِينِ ﴿٣٨﴾

ثُلَّةٞ مِّنَ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ ﴿٣٩﴾

وَثُلَّةٞ مِّنَ ٱلۡأٓخِرِينَ ﴿٤٠﴾

وَأَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلشِّمَالِ مَآ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلشِّمَالِ ﴿٤١﴾

mighty power[3] and benefits for men[4] — and that God might know him who helps Him and His messengers unseen; God is strong and exalted in might.

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا نُوحًا وَإِبْرَٰهِيمَ وَجَعَلْنَا
فِى ذُرِّيَّتِهِمَا ٱلنُّبُوَّةَ وَٱلْكِتَٰبَ فَمِنْهُم
مُّهْتَدٍ وَكَثِيرٌ مِّنْهُمْ فَٰسِقُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾

26 ¶57.4 And We sent Noah, and Abraham, and placed among their progeny prophethood and the Writ.[1] And among them is he who is guided; but many of them are perfidious.[2]

ثُمَّ قَفَّيْنَا عَلَىٰٓ ءَاثَٰرِهِم بِرُسُلِنَا وَقَفَّيْنَا
بِعِيسَى ٱبْنِ مَرْيَمَ وَءَاتَيْنَٰهُ ٱلْإِنجِيلَ
وَجَعَلْنَا فِى قُلُوبِ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّبَعُوهُ رَأْفَةً
وَرَحْمَةً وَرَهْبَانِيَّةً ٱبْتَدَعُوهَا مَا كَتَبْنَٰهَا
عَلَيْهِمْ إِلَّا ٱبْتِغَآءَ رِضْوَٰنِ ٱللَّهِ فَمَا
رَعَوْهَا حَقَّ رِعَايَتِهَا فَـَٔاتَيْنَا ٱلَّذِينَ
ءَامَنُوا۟ مِنْهُمْ أَجْرَهُمْ وَكَثِيرٌ مِّنْهُمْ
فَٰسِقُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 Then We sent, following in their footsteps, Our messengers; and We sent, following, Jesus,[1] son of Mary.[2] And We gave him the Gospel,[3] and We placed in the hearts of those who followed him[4] compassion and mercy. But monasticism,[5] they invented it; We did not prescribe it for them — only the seeking of the approval of God; but they did not observe it with the observance due[6] it. And We gave those who heeded warning[7] among them their reward; but many of them are perfidious.[8]

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ وَءَامِنُوا۟
بِرَسُولِهِۦ يُؤْتِكُمْ كِفْلَيْنِ مِن رَّحْمَتِهِۦ
وَيَجْعَل لَّكُمْ نُورًا تَمْشُونَ بِهِۦ
وَيَغْفِرْ لَكُمْ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 O you who heed warning:[1] be in prudent fear[2] of God, and believe in[3] His messenger; He will give you a double share of His mercy, and appoint for you a light whereby you will walk, and will forgive you, — and God is forgiving and merciful —

لِّئَلَّا يَعْلَمَ أَهْلُ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ أَلَّا يَقْدِرُونَ
عَلَىٰ شَىْءٍ مِّن فَضْلِ ٱللَّهِ وَأَنَّ ٱلْفَضْلَ
بِيَدِ ٱللَّهِ يُؤْتِيهِ مَن يَشَآءُ وَٱللَّهُ ذُو

29 That the doctors of the Law[1] might know that they have no power over the bounty of God, and that bounty is in the hand of God; He gives it to whom He wills; and God is possessor of tremendous bounty.

ٱلْفَضْلِ ٱلْعَظِيمِ ﴿٢٩﴾

بِسْمِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلرَّحْمَٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

۞ قَدْ سَمِعَ ٱللَّهُ قَوْلَ ٱلَّتِى تُجَٰدِلُكَ
فِى زَوْجِهَا وَتَشْتَكِىٓ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ وَٱللَّهُ
يَسْمَعُ تَحَاوُرَكُمَآ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَمِيعٌۢ بَصِيرٌ

58[2] 1 God has heard the word of her that disputes with thee concerning her husband, and makes complaint to God. And God hears you two conversing together; God is hearing and seeing.

﴿١﴾

ٱلَّذِينَ يُظَٰهِرُونَ مِنكُم مِّن نِّسَآئِهِم

2 Those among you who assist among their wives: — they are not their mothers;[1] their mothers are only those who gave them birth. And they say what is perverse[2] of speech, and a falsehood; but God is forgiving and merciful.

وَٱلَّذِينَ يُظَٰهِرُونَ مِن نِّسَآئِهِمْ ثُمَّ
يَعُودُونَ لِمَا قَالُوا۟ فَتَحْرِيرُ رَقَبَةٍ مِّن

وَٱللَّهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ خَبِيرٌ ﴿٣﴾

3 And those who assist among their wives,[1] then go back on what they have said: — the freeing of a slave before they touch one another.[2] By that are you admonished; and God is aware of what you do.

فَمَن لَّمْ يَجِدْ فَصِيَامُ شَهْرَيْنِ مُتَتَابِعَيْنِ
مِن قَبْلِ أَن يَتَمَآسَّا فَمَن لَّمْ يَسْتَطِعْ
فَإِطْعَامُ سِتِّينَ مِسْكِينًا ذَٰلِكَ لِتُؤْمِنُوا۟
بِٱللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ وَتِلْكَ حُدُودُ ٱللَّهِ
وَلِلْكَٰفِرِينَ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٌ ﴿٤﴾

4 And whoso has not the means: — a fast of two months[1] consecutively[2] before they touch one another.[3] And whoso is not able: — the feeding of sixty needy persons. That is that you might believe in[4] God and His messenger. And those are the limits of God; and for the false claimers of guidance[5] is a painful punishment.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُحَآدُّونَ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ كُبِتُوا۟
كَمَا كُبِتَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ وَقَدْ أَنزَلْنَآ
ءَايَٰتٍۭ بَيِّنَٰتٍ وَلِلْكَٰفِرِينَ عَذَابٌ

5 Those who oppose God and His messenger will be abased even as those before them were abased. And We have sent down clear proofs;[1] and for the false claimers of guidance[2] is a humiliating punishment.

6 The day God raises them all together, then will He inform them of what they did. God counted it while they forgot it; and God is over all things witness.

7 ¶58.2 Dost thou not see[1] that God knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth? There is no private conversation of three save He is their fourth, nor of five save He is their sixth — nor of less than that, nor of greater, save He is with them wherever they may be; then will He inform them of what they did on the Day of Resurrection. God knows all things.

8 Hast thou not considered[1] those who were forbidden private conversation then return to what they were forbidden and converse confidentially in sin[2] and enmity and disobedience to the Messenger? And when they come to thee, they greet thee with a greeting wherewith God never greeted thee; and they say within themselves: "Oh, that God but[3] punished us for what we say!"[4] Sufficient for them is Gehenna: they will burn therein; and evil is the journey's end!

9 O you who heed warning:[1] when you converse confidentially, converse not confidentially in sin[2] and enmity, and disobedience to the Messenger, but converse confidentially in virtue and prudent fear.[3] And be in prudent fear[4] of God to whom you will be gathered.

10 Private conversation is but of the satan,[1] that he might grieve those who heed warning;[2] but he will not harm them at all save by the leave of God. And in God let the believers[3] place their trust.

11 O you who heed warning:[1] when it is said to you: "Make room in the assemblies," then make room; God will make room for you. And when it is said: "Arise," then arise. God will raise those who heed warning[2] and those given knowledge among you in degree.[3] And God is aware of what you do.[4]

12 O you who heed warning:[1] when you converse confidentially with the Messenger, send ahead[2] charity before[3] your private conversation.[4] That is better for you, and purer. But if you find not the means[5] — God is forgiving and merciful.

13 Fear you to send ahead[1] charity before[2] your private conversation? Then when you do not — and God has turned towards you — then uphold the duty[3] and render the purity,[4] and obey God and His messenger.[5] And God is aware of what you do.

14 ¶58.3 Hast thou not considered[1] those who take as allies a people with whom God is wroth? They are neither of you nor of them; and they swear to lies, and they know.[2]

١٤

أَعَدَّ ٱللَّـهُ لَهُمْ عَذَابًا شَدِيدًا إِنَّهُمْ سَآءَ
مَا كَانُواْ يَعْمَلُونَ ١٥

15 God has prepared for them a severe punishment; evil is what they did.

ٱتَّخَذُوٓاْ أَيْمَـٰنَهُمْ جُنَّةً فَصَدُّواْ عَن
سَبِيلِ ٱللَّـهِ فَلَهُمْ عَذَابٌ مُّهِينٌ ١٦

16 They took their oaths[1] as a cover,[2] and turned away from[3] the path of God;[4] so for them is a humiliating punishment.

لَّن تُغْنِىَ عَنْهُمْ أَمْوَٰلُهُمْ وَلَآ أَوْلَـٰدُهُم مِّنَ

22 Thou wilt not find people who believe in[1] God and the Last Day loving those who oppose God and His messenger, though they were their fathers, or their sons, or their brothers, or their kindred. Those:--[2] — He has written faith in their hearts, and strengthened them with a Spirit from Himself, and will make them enter gardens

2 He it is that turned out those who ignore warning[1] among the doctors of the Law[2] from their homes at the first gathering. You did not think that they would go forth, and they thought that their strongholds would protect them from God; but God came upon them whence[3] they reckoned not, and He hurled terror into their hearts; they ruined their houses with their hands and the hands of the believers.[4] So learn a lesson, O you who have vision!

وَلَوْلَآ أَن كَتَبَ ٱللَّـهُ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْجَلَآءَ

3 And were it not that God had prescribed exile for them, He would have punished them in the World; and they have in the Hereafter the punishment of the Fire,

7 What God gave in spoil to His messenger from the people of the cities belongs to God and His messenger, and to relatives, and the fatherless,[1] and the needy, and the wayfarer[...][2] that it be not a distribution by turns between the rich among you. And what the Messenger gives you: take it, and from what he forbids you: refrain[3] — and be in prudent fear[4] of God; God is severe in retribution —

وَٱلَّذِينَ جَآءُو مِنۢ بَعْدِهِمْ يَقُولُونَ رَبَّنَا
ٱغْفِرْ لَنَا وَلِإِخْوَٰنِنَا ٱلَّذِينَ سَبَقُونَا
بِٱلْإِيمَٰنِ وَلَا تَجْعَلْ فِى قُلُوبِنَا غِلًّا
لِّلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ رَبَّنَآ إِنَّكَ رَءُوفٌ رَّحِيمٌ
﴿١٠﴾

10 And those who came after them, they say: "Our Lord: forgive Thou us and our brethren who preceded us in faith, and put Thou not in our hearts rancour towards those who heed warning.[1] Our Lord: thou art kind and merciful."

۞ أَلَمْ تَرَ إِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ نَافَقُوا۟ يَقُولُونَ

ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لَئِنْ أُخْرِجْتُمْ لَنَخْرُجَنَّ
مَعَكُمْ وَلَا نُطِيعُ فِيكُمْ أَحَدًا أَبَدًا
وَإِن قُوتِلْتُمْ لَنَنصُرَنَّكُمْ وَٱللَّهُ يَشْهَدُ
إِنَّهُمْ لَكَٰذِبُونَ ﴿١١﴾

11 ¶59.2 Hast thou not considered[1] the waverers?[2] They say to their brethren who ignore warning[3] among the doctors of the Law:[4] "If you are turned out, we will go forth with you, and will not obey anyone concerning you ever; and if you are attacked,[5] we will help you." But God bears witness that they are liars: —

لَئِنْ أُخْرِجُوا۟ لَا يَخْرُجُونَ مَعَهُمْ وَلَئِن
قُوتِلُوا۟ لَا يَنصُرُونَهُمْ وَلَئِن نَّصَرُوهُمْ
لَيُوَلُّنَّ ٱلْأَدْبَٰرَ ثُمَّ لَا يُنصَرُونَ ﴿١٢﴾

12 If they are turned out, they will not go forth with them; and if they are attacked,[1] they will not help them; and if they help them, they will turn their backs,[2] then will they not be helped.

لَأَنتُمْ أَشَدُّ رَهْبَةً فِى صُدُورِهِم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ
ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمْ قَوْمٌ لَّا يَفْقَهُونَ ﴿١٣﴾

13 You are a stronger fear in their breasts than God; for it is that[1] they are people who do not understand!

مُّحَصَّنَةٍ أَوْ مِن وَرَآءِ جُدُرٍۭ بَأْسُهُم بَيْنَهُمْ
شَدِيدٌ تَحْسَبُهُمْ جَمِيعًا وَقُلُوبُهُمْ شَتَّىٰ

14 They will not fight you all together save in fortified cities or from behind walls. Their might is strong among themselves. Thou thinkest them together, but their hearts are diverse;[1] for it is that[2] they are people who do not reason!

15 As the likeness of those shortly before them:[1] — they tasted the evil consequence of their affair, and they have a painful punishment;

16 As the likeness of the satan:[1] — when he says to man: “Deny thou!” then, when he denies, he says: “I am quit of thee; I fear God, the Lord of All Creation!”

17 So[1] the final outcome for both is that they[2] are in the Fire, they[3] abiding eternally therein; and that is the reward of the wrongdoers.[4]

18 ¶59.3 O you who heed warning:[1] be in prudent fear[2] of God. And let a soul look to what it has sent ahead for the morrow.[3] And be in prudent fear[4] of God; God is aware of what you do.

19 And be not like those who forgot God, so He caused them to forget their souls; those: it is they who are the perfidious.[1]

20 Not equal are the companions of the Fire and the companions of the Garden. The companions of the Garden, they are the attainers of success.

21 Had We sent down this Qur’an[1] upon a mountain, thou hadst seen it humbled, split asunder from fear of God. And those similitudes — We strike them for mankind, that they might reflect.

22 He is God. There is no god save He[1] — the Knower of the Unseen and the Seen; He is the Almighty,[2] the Merciful.

23 He is God. There is no god save He[1] — the King, the Holy, the Perfect, the Faithful,[2] the Determiner of Truth,[3] the Exalted in Might, the Compeller, the Supreme. Glory[4] be to God above that to which they ascribe a partnership![5]

24 He is God, the Creator, the Maker, the Giver of Form; to Him belong the best names. To Him gives glory[1] what is in the heavens and the earth; and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[2]

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

60[2]

1 O you who heed warning:[1] take not My enemy and your enemy as allies, extending to them love, when they have denied that which has come to you of the truth[2] — they, turning out the Messenger and you because you believe in[3] God, your Lord, if you go forth to strive in My cause and seeking My pleasure — showing them love in secret. And I best know what you conceal and what you proclaim; and whoso does it among you, he has strayed from the right path.

2 If they come upon[1] you, they will be enemies to you, and stretch out their hands and their tongues against you with evil;[2] and they wish that you should deny.

3 Neither your kin nor your children will benefit you on the Day of Resurrection; He will judge between you; and God sees what you do.

4 There was for you a good model[1] in Abraham and those with him when they said to their people: “We are quit of you and what you serve besides[2] God. We deny you,[3] and become clear between us and you are enmity and hatred forever until you believe in[4] God alone,” — save the saying of Abraham to his father: “I will ask forgiveness for thee, but I have no power for thee against[5] God.” — “Our Lord: in Thee we place our trust; and to Thee have we turned; and to Thee is the journey’s end.

5 “Our Lord: make Thou not us a means of denial[1] for those who ignore warning;[2] and forgive Thou us. Our Lord: thou art the Exalted in Might, the Wise.”[3]

6 There was for you in them a good model[1] for one who hopes for God and the Last Day. And whoso turns away: — God, He is the Free from Need, the Praiseworthy.

7 ¶60.2 It may be that God will put love between you and those of them with whom you have been enemies; and God is powerful; and God is forgiving and merciful.

8 God forbids you not — with those who have neither fought you in doctrine,[1] nor turned you out of your homes — that you should be virtuous with them and equitable towards them;[2] God loves the equitable.

9 God only forbids you as to those who have fought you in doctrine,[1] and turned you out of your homes, and assisted in your expulsion, that you should take them as allies. And whoso takes them as allies — then those, it is they who are the wrongdoers.[2]

10 O you who heed warning:[1] when the believing women[2] come to you as émigrées: examine them. God best knows their faith. And if you know them to be believing women,[3] then return them not to the atheists.[4] Such women[5] are not lawful for them, and they are not lawful for such women.[6] And give them[7] what they spent. And you do no wrong[8] to marry such women[9] when you give them their rewards. And hold not by tie denying women; and ask for what you have spent, and let them[10] ask for what they have spent. That is the judgment of God; He judges between you; and God is knowing and wise.

11 And if any of your wives slip away from you to the atheists,[1] then you are met with the same:[2] give those whose wives have gone the like of what they spent; and be in prudent fear[3] of God in whom you are believers.[4]

12 O Prophet: when the believing women[1] come to thee, swearing fealty to thee: — that they will not ascribe a partnership[2] with God to anything; and they will not steal; and they will not commit unlawful sexual intercourse;[3] and they will not kill their children; and they will not produce a calumny they have invented between their hands and their feet;[4] and they will not disobey thee in what is fitting;[5] — then accept thou their fealty, and ask thou God to forgive them; God is forgiving and merciful.

4 God loves those who fight in His cause in ranks, as though they were a compacted structure.

5 And when Moses said to his people: "O my people: why do you hinder[1] me when you know that I am the messenger of God to you?" Then when they deviated, God caused their hearts to deviate; and God guides not the perfidious[2] people.

6 And when Jesus,[1] son of Mary[2] said: "O children of Israel: I am the messenger of God to you, confirming what is before me[3] of the Torah, and bringing glad tidings of a messenger coming after me, whose name is more praiseworthy."[4] Then when he came to them with clear signs, they said: "This is obvious sorcery."[5]

7 And who is more unjust than he who invents a lie about God, when he is invited to submission?[1] And God guides not the wrongdoing[2] people.

8 They want to extinguish the light of God with their mouths; but God will perfect His light, though the false claimers of guidance[1] be averse.

9 He it is that sent His messenger with the guidance and the doctrine[1] of truth[2] that He[3] might make it manifest over all doctrine,[4] though the idolaters[5] be averse.[6]

10 ¶61.2 O you who heed warning:[1] shall I direct you to a trade that will deliver you from a painful punishment?

11 You believe[1] in[2] God and His messenger and strive in the cause of God with your wealth and your lives — that is best for you, if you but knew —

12 (He will forgive you your transgressions,[1] and make you enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, and goodly dwellings in gardens of perpetual abode. That is the Great Achievement.)

13 But you love another.[1] Help from God[2] and a near victory[...].[3] And give thou glad tidings to the believers.[4]

14 O you who heed warning:[1] be helpers of God, as Jesus,[2] son of Mary,[3] said to the disciples:[4] "Who are my helpers for God?" The disciples[5] said: "We are the helpers of God." And a number of the children of Israel believed, and a number denied,[6] and We strengthened those who heeded warning[7] against their enemy so they became dominant.[8]

the King, the Holy, the Exalted in Might, the Wise.[2]

2 He it is that raised up among the unschooled[1] a messenger from among them, reciting to them His proofs,[2] and increasing them in purity,[3] and teaching them the Writ[4] and wisdom[5] — though they were before in manifest error —

7 Those who ignore warning[1] claim that they will never be raised. Say thou: "Verily,[2] by my Lord, you will be raised! Then will you be informed of what you did; and that is easy for God."[3]

12 Hinderer of good, transgressor, sinful,

13 Relentless and[1] useless,[2]

14 Because he is possessed of wealth and sons.

15 When Our proofs[1] are recited to him, he says: “Legends of the former peoples!”

16 We will brand him on the snout.[1]

17 We have tried them as We tried the companions of the garden, when they swore they would reap its fruit in the morning,

18 And made no allowance.[1]

19 Then an itinerant[1] from thy Lord went about[2] it while they slept,

20 And in the morning it was as if reaped.

21 Then called they to one another in the morning:

22 “Go early to your tilth, if you would be reaping!”

23 So they departed, whispering together:

24 “No needy one will enter it this day against your will.”[1]

25 And they went early, determined upon their purpose.[1]

26 Then when they saw it they said: “We have gone astray![1]

27 “Nay,[1] we have been deprived!”[2]

28 Said the most moderate of them: “Said I not to you: ‘Oh, that you did but[1] give glory!’”[2]

تُسَبِّحُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

قَالُوا۟ سُبْحَٰنَ رَبِّنَآ إِنَّا كُنَّا ظَٰلِمِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

عَسَىٰ رَبُّنَآ أَن يُبْدِلَنَا خَيْرًا مِّنْهَآ إِنَّآ إِلَىٰ رَبِّنَا رَٰغِبُونَ ﴿٣٢﴾

كَذَٰلِكَ ٱلْعَذَابُ وَلَعَذَابُ ٱلْءَاخِرَةِ أَكْبَرُ لَوْ كَانُوا۟ يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾

إِنَّ لِلْمُتَّقِينَ عِندَ رَبِّهِمْ جَنَّٰتِ ٱلنَّعِيمِ ﴿٣٤﴾

أَفَنَجْعَلُ ٱلْمُسْلِمِينَ كَٱلْمُجْرِمِينَ ﴿٣٥﴾

مَا لَكُمْ كَيْفَ تَحْكُمُونَ ﴿٣٦﴾

أَمْ لَكُمْ كِتَٰبٌ فِيهِ تَدْرُسُونَ ﴿٣٧﴾

إِنَّ لَكُمْ فِيهِ لَمَا تَخَيَّرُونَ ﴿٣٨﴾

أَمْ لَكُمْ أَيْمَٰنٌ عَلَيْنَا بَٰلِغَةٌ إِلَىٰ يَوْمِ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ إِنَّ لَكُمْ لَمَا تَحْكُمُونَ ﴿٣٩﴾

سَلْهُمْ أَيُّهُم بِذَٰلِكَ زَعِيمٌ ﴿٤٠﴾

أَمْ لَهُمْ شُرَكَآءُ فَلْيَأْتُوا۟ بِشُرَكَآئِهِمْ إِن كَانُوا۟ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٤١﴾

يَوْمَ يُكْشَفُ عَن سَاقٍ وَيُدْعَوْنَ إِلَى ٱلسُّجُودِ فَلَا يَسْتَطِيعُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

29 They said: “Glory[1] be to our Lord! We were wrongdoers!”[2]

30 Then they approached one other, blaming one another.

31 They said: “Woe is us! We transgressed all bounds.[1]

32 “It may be that our Lord will give us in exchange better than it; to our Lord do we turn in hope.”

33 Thus[1] is the punishment — and the punishment of the Hereafter is greater, had they but known.

34 ¶68.2 For those of prudent fear,[1] with their Lord are the Gardens of Bliss.

35 Shall We then make[1] those submitting[2] like the lawbreakers?

36 What ails you? How judge you?

37 If[1] you have a Writ[2] wherein you study:[3] —

38 “You have therein whatever you choose!”[1]

39 Or if[1] you have oaths binding upon Us reaching to the Day of Resurrection:[2] — “You have whatever you decide!”[3]

40 Ask thou them which of them is, for that, guarantor!

41 If[1] they have partners:[2] then let them bring their partners,[3] if they be truthful.

42 The day the shin[1] is uncovered — and they are invited to the Submission,[2] but they are not able[3] —

43 Their eyes will be humbled,[1] humiliation covering them, for they had been invited to the Submission[2] when they were whole.

44 So leave thou Me with those who deny this narrative.[1] We will lead them by degrees, whence[2] they know not;

45 And I will grant them respite — My plan is firm.[1]
46 If[1] thou askest of them a reward:[2] then are they burdened by debt!

47 If[1] the Unseen be with them:[2] then are they writing![3]
48 And be thou patient for the judgment of thy Lord; and be thou not like the companion of the fish[1] when he called and was angry.[2]

49 Had not favour from his Lord overtaken him, he would have been cast on the bare shore when he was condemned.

50 But his Lord chose him, and made him of the righteous.

51 And those who ignore warning[1] almost cause thee to slip with their eyes when they hear the remembrance,[2] and they say: "He is possessed."

52 But it is only a reminder[1] to all mankind.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

[2] 1 The Inevitable Reality.[1]

مَا ٱلۡحَآقَّةُ ﴿٢﴾

2 What is the Inevitable Reality?

وَمَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا ٱلۡحَآقَّةُ ﴿٣﴾

3 And what will convey to thee what the Inevitable Reality is?

كَذَّبَتۡ ثَمُودُ وَعَادُۢ بِٱلۡقَارِعَةِ ﴿٤﴾

4 Thamūd and ʿĀd denied the Calamity.[1]

فَأَمَّا ثَمُودُ فَأُهۡلِكُواْ بِٱلطَّاغِيَةِ ﴿٥﴾

5 Then as for Thamūd: they were destroyed by the overpowering blast.[1]

وَأَمَّا عَادٞ فَأُهۡلِكُواْ بِرِيحٖ صَرۡصَرٍ
عَاتِيَةٖ ﴿٦﴾

6 And as for ʿĀd: they were destroyed by a howling, raging wind

سَخَّرَهَا عَلَيۡهِمۡ سَبۡعَ لَيَالٖ وَثَمَٰنِيَةَ أَيَّامٍ
حُسُومٗا فَتَرَى ٱلۡقَوۡمَ فِيهَا صَرۡعَىٰ كَأَنَّهُمۡ
أَعۡجَازُ نَخۡلٍ خَاوِيَةٖ ﴿٧﴾

7 Which He compelled against them seven nights and eight days without let; and thou mightest see the people therein lying prostrate like stumps of hollow[1] date-palms.

فَهَلۡ تَرَىٰ لَهُم مِّنۢ بَاقِيَةٖ ﴿٨﴾

8 Then seest thou of them[1] any remnant?

وَجَآءَ فِرۡعَوۡنُ وَمَن قَبۡلَهُۥ وَٱلۡمُؤۡتَفِكَٰتُ
بِٱلۡخَاطِئَةِ ﴿٩﴾

9 And there came Pharaoh[1] — and those before him, and the cities thrown down — with offence,[2]

فَعَصَوۡاْ رَسُولَ رَبِّهِمۡ فَأَخَذَهُمۡ أَخۡذَةٗ
رَّابِيَةً ﴿١٠﴾

10 And they opposed the messenger of their Lord, but He seized them with a surpassing[1] grip.

إِنَّا لَمَّا طَغَا ٱلۡمَآءُ حَمَلۡنَٰكُمۡ فِي
ٱلۡجَارِيَةِ ﴿١١﴾

11 When the water had burst all bounds, We bore[1] you[2] in the ship

لِنَجۡعَلَهَا لَكُمۡ تَذۡكِرَةٗ وَتَعِيَهَآ أُذُنٞ
وَٰعِيَةٞ ﴿١٢﴾

12 That We might make it[1] a reminder for you, and that a conscious ear might be conscious of it.[2]

فَإِذَا نُفِخَ فِي ٱلصُّورِ نَفۡخَةٞ وَٰحِدَةٞ ﴿١٣﴾
وَحُمِلَتِ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ وَٱلۡجِبَالُ فَدُكَّتَا دَكَّةٗ
وَٰحِدَةٗ ﴿١٤﴾

13 Then when the Trumpet is blown with a single blast,
14 And the earth and the mountains are lifted up and levelled with a single blow,[1]

فَيَوۡمَئِذٖ وَقَعَتِ ٱلۡوَاقِعَةُ ﴿١٥﴾

15 Then, that day, the Event will befall,[1]

وَٱنشَقَّتِ ٱلسَّمَآءُ فَهِىَ يَوْمَئِذٍ وَاهِيَةٌ ﴿١٦﴾

16 And the sky be split asunder for it, that day, is frail,

وَٱلْمَلَكُ عَلَىٰٓ أَرْجَآئِهَا وَيَحْمِلُ عَرْشَ رَبِّكَ فَوْقَهُمْ يَوْمَئِذٍ ثَمَٰنِيَةٌ ﴿١٧﴾

17 And the angels on its sides; and there will bear the Throne of thy Lord above them, that day, eight.

يَوْمَئِذٍ تُعْرَضُونَ لَا تَخْفَىٰ مِنكُمْ خَافِيَةٌ ﴿١٨﴾

18 That day, you will be presented; no secret among you will be concealed.

فَأَمَّا مَنْ أُوتِىَ كِتَٰبَهُۥ بِيَمِينِهِۦ فَيَقُولُ هَآؤُمُ ٱقْرَءُوا۟ كِتَٰبِيَهْ ﴿١٩﴾

19 And as for him who is given his writ[1] in his right hand, he will say: “Here, read my writ![2]

إِنِّى ظَنَنتُ أَنِّى مُلَٰقٍ حِسَابِيَهْ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 “I knew that I should meet my reckoning.”

فَهُوَ فِى عِيشَةٍ رَّاضِيَةٍ ﴿٢١﴾

21 Then is he in a pleasing life,

فِى جَنَّةٍ عَالِيَةٍ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 In a high garden

قُطُوفُهَا دَانِيَةٌ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 The fruits whereof are near.

كُلُوا۟ وَٱشْرَبُوا۟ هَنِيٓـًٔۢا بِمَآ أَسْلَفْتُمْ فِى ٱلْأَيَّامِ ٱلْخَالِيَةِ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 “Eat and drink with satisfaction for what you sent ahead in days past.”

وَأَمَّا مَنْ أُوتِىَ كِتَٰبَهُۥ بِشِمَالِهِۦ فَيَقُولُ يَٰلَيْتَنِى لَمْ أُوتَ كِتَٰبِيَهْ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 And as for him who is given his writ[1] in his left hand, he will say: “Would that I had not been given my writ[2]

وَلَمْ أَدْرِ مَا حِسَابِيَهْ ﴿٢٦﴾

26 “And had not known what is my reckoning!

يَٰلَيْتَهَا كَانَتِ ٱلْقَاضِيَةَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 “Would that it had been the end!

مَآ أَغْنَىٰ عَنِّى مَالِيَهْ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 “My wealth has not availed me.

هَلَكَ عَنِّى سُلْطَٰنِيَهْ ﴿٢٩﴾

29 “Gone[1] from me is my authority.”

خُذُوهُ فَغُلُّوهُ ﴿٣٠﴾

30 “Take him, and fetter him;

ثُمَّ ٱلْجَحِيمَ صَلُّوهُ ﴿٣١﴾

31 “Then burn him in Hell;

ثُمَّ فِى سِلْسِلَةٍ ذَرْعُهَا سَبْعُونَ ذِرَاعًا فَٱسْلُكُوهُ ﴿٣٢﴾

32 “Then into a chain the length whereof is seventy cubits insert him!”

إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ لَا يُؤْمِنُ بِٱللَّهِ ٱلْعَظِيمِ ﴿٣٣﴾

33 He believed not in[1] God, the Great,

وَلَا يَحُضُّ عَلَىٰ طَعَامِ ٱلْمِسْكِينِ ﴿٣٤﴾

34 And encouraged not the feeding of the needy

فَلَيْسَ لَهُ ٱلْيَوْمَ هَٰهُنَا حَمِيمٌ ﴿٣٥﴾

35 So there is for him here, this day, no loyal friend,

وَلَا طَعَامٌ إِلَّا مِنْ غِسْلِينٍ ﴿٣٦﴾

36 Nor food save of foul pus,[1]

لَّا يَأْكُلُهُۥٓ إِلَّا ٱلْخَٰطِـُٔونَ ﴿٣٧﴾

37 That none eat save the offenders.[1]

فَلَآ أُقْسِمُ بِمَا تُبْصِرُونَ ﴿٣٨﴾

38 ¶69.2 Then do I swear by what you see وَمَا لَا تُبْصِرُونَ ﴿٣٩﴾

39 And what you see not:

إِنَّهُۥ لَقَوْلُ رَسُولٍ كَرِيمٍ ﴿٤٠﴾

40 It is the word[1] of a noble messenger,

وَمَا هُوَ بِقَوْلِ شَاعِرٍ قَلِيلًا مَّا تُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٤١﴾

41 And it is not the word[1] of a poet[2] — little do you believe —

وَلَا بِقَوْلِ كَاهِنٍ قَلِيلًا مَّا تَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

42 Nor the word of a soothsayer — little do you take heed —

تَنزِيلٌ مِّن رَّبِّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٤٣﴾

43 A revelation[1] from the Lord of All Creation!

وَلَوْ تَقَوَّلَ عَلَيْنَا بَعْضَ ٱلْأَقَاوِيلِ ﴿٤٤﴾

44 (And had he ascribed to Us any sayings,[1]

لَأَخَذْنَا مِنْهُ بِٱلْيَمِينِ ﴿٤٥﴾

45 We would have seized him by the right hand.

ثُمَّ لَقَطَعْنَا مِنْهُ ٱلْوَتِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾

46 Then would We have cut from him the aorta,

فَمَا مِنكُم مِّنْ أَحَدٍ عَنْهُ حَٰجِزِينَ ﴿٤٧﴾

47 And not one of you could have protected him.[1])

وَإِنَّهُۥ لَتَذْكِرَةٌ لِّلْمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٤٨﴾

48 And it is a reminder to those of prudent fear;[1]

وَإِنَّا لَنَعْلَمُ أَنَّ مِنكُم مُّكَذِّبِينَ ﴿٤٩﴾

49 (And We know that among you are deniers)

وَإِنَّهُۥ لَحَسۡرَةٌ عَلَى ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٥٠﴾

50 And it will be a sorrow to the false claimers of guidance;[1]

وَإِنَّهُۥ لَحَقُّ ٱلۡيَقِينِ ﴿٥١﴾

51 And it is the truth[1] of certainty.

فَسَبِّحۡ بِٱسۡمِ رَبِّكَ ٱلۡعَظِيمِ ﴿٥٢﴾

52 So give thou glory[1] with the name of thy Lord, the Great!

بِسۡمِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

سَأَلَ سَآئِلُۢ بِعَذَابٖ وَاقِعٖ ﴿١﴾

70[2] 1 A petitioner[1] asked about a punishment to come

لِّلۡكَٰفِرِينَ لَيۡسَ لَهُۥ دَافِعٞ ﴿٢﴾

2 To the false claimers of guidance[1] — there is none to avert it —

مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ ذِي ٱلۡمَعَارِجِ ﴿٣﴾

3 From God, Owner of the Means of Ascent:[1] —

تَعۡرُجُ ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ وَٱلرُّوحُ إِلَيۡهِ فِي يَوۡمٖ كَانَ مِقۡدَارُهُۥ خَمۡسِينَ أَلۡفَ سَنَةٖ ﴿٤﴾

4 The angels and the Spirit ascend to Him in a day the measure whereof is fifty thousand years,

فَٱصۡبِرۡ صَبۡرٗا جَمِيلٗا ﴿٥﴾

5 So be thou patient with comely patience.[1]

إِنَّهُمۡ يَرَوۡنَهُۥ بَعِيدٗا ﴿٦﴾

6 They see it as far off,

وَنَرَىٰهُ قَرِيبٗا ﴿٧﴾

7 But We see it as near: —

يَوۡمَ تَكُونُ ٱلسَّمَآءُ كَٱلۡمُهۡلِ ﴿٨﴾

8 The day the sky will be like molten brass,[1]

وَتَكُونُ ٱلۡجِبَالُ كَٱلۡعِهۡنِ ﴿٩﴾

9 And the mountains like wool,[1]

وَلَا يَسۡـَٔلُ حَمِيمٌ حَمِيمٗا ﴿١٠﴾

10 And no loyal friend will ask of a loyal friend.

يُبَصَّرُونَهُمۡ يَوَدُّ ٱلۡمُجۡرِمُ لَوۡ يَفۡتَدِي مِنۡ عَذَابِ يَوۡمِئِذِۭ بِبَنِيهِ ﴿١١﴾

11 They will be given sight of them:[1] — the lawbreaker will wish that should he be ransomed from the punishment of that day by his sons,

وَصَٰحِبَتِهِۦ وَأَخِيهِ ﴿١٢﴾

12 And his consort, and his brother,

وَفَصِيلَتِهِ ٱلَّتِي تُـٔۡوِيهِ ﴿١٣﴾

13 And his kinsmen who sheltered him,

وَمَن فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ جَمِيعٗا ثُمَّ يُنجِيهِ ﴿١٤﴾

14 And whoso is in the earth all together — then might it deliver him.

كَلَّآ إِنَّهَا لَظَىٰ ﴿١٥﴾

15 No, indeed![1] It is a blazing fire,

نَزَّاعَةٗ لِّلشَّوَىٰ ﴿١٦﴾

16 Removing the scalp,

تَدۡعُواْ مَنۡ أَدۡبَرَ وَتَوَلَّىٰ ﴿١٧﴾

17 Calling him who turned and went away

18 And gathered and hoarded.

إِنَّ ٱلۡإِنسَٰنَ خُلِقَ هَلُوعًا ﴿١٩﴾

19 Man was created anxious

إِذَا مَسَّهُ ٱلشَّرُّ جَزُوعٗا ﴿٢٠﴾

20 — When evil touches him, impatient,[1]

وَإِذَا مَسَّهُ ٱلۡخَيۡرُ مَنُوعًا ﴿٢١﴾

21 And when good touches him, withholding —

إِلَّا ٱلۡمُصَلِّينَ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 Save the performers of duty:[1]

ٱلَّذِينَ هُمۡ عَلَىٰ صَلَاتِهِمۡ دَآئِمُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 Those who are constant in their duty,[1]

وَٱلَّذِينَ فِيٓ أَمۡوَٰلِهِمۡ حَقّٞ مَّعۡلُومٞ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 And those in whose wealth is a due[1] known[2]

لِّلسَّآئِلِ وَٱلۡمَحۡرُومِ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 For the petitioner[1] and the one deprived,

وَٱلَّذِينَ يُصَدِّقُونَ بِيَوۡمِ ٱلدِّينِ ﴿٢٦﴾

26 And are those who confirm the Day of Judgment,[1]

وَٱلَّذِينَ هُم مِّنۡ عَذَابِ رَبِّهِم مُّشۡفِقُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 And are those who, of the punishment of their Lord, are in dread,

إِنَّ عَذَابَ رَبِّهِمۡ غَيۡرُ مَأۡمُونٖ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 (The punishment of their Lord is not that from which there is safety)

وَٱلَّذِينَ هُمۡ لِفُرُوجِهِمۡ حَٰفِظُونَ ﴿٢٩﴾

29 And are those who preserve their chastity[1]

إِلَّا عَلَىٰٓ أَزۡوَٰجِهِمۡ أَوۡ مَا مَلَكَتۡ أَيۡمَٰنُهُمۡ فَإِنَّهُمۡ غَيۡرُ مَلُومِينَ ﴿٣٠﴾

35 Those are in gardens, honoured.

36 ¶70.2 Then what ails those who ignore warning[1] that they, before thee, are straining forward

37 On the right, and on the left, in separate groups?[1]
38 Does every man among them hope to be made to enter a garden of bliss?

39 No, indeed![1] We have created them from what they know.
40 Then do I swear by the Lord of the Easts and the Wests that We are able

41 To exchange them for better than they; and We will not be outdone.[1]

42 So leave thou them to discourse vainly[1] and play until they meet their day which they are promised:

43 The day they will come forth from the graves in haste, as though towards an idol,[1] running,

44 Their eyes humbled,[1] humiliation covering them. That is the day which they are promised.

15 Have you not considered how God created seven heavens in harmony,[1]

16 And made the moon therein a light[1] and made the sun a torch?

17 And God caused you to grow as a growth from the earth.

18 Then He will return you into it, and bring you forth again.[1]

20 ¶73.2 Thy Lord knows that thou standest nearly two-thirds of the night, or a half of it, or a third of it, as does[1] a number of those with thee. And God determines the night and the day. He knew that you would not calculate it, and has turned towards you: — so recite what is made easy[2] of the Qur'an.[3] He knows that there will be some sick among you, and others travelling in the earth in search of the bounty of God, and others fighting in the cause of God: — so recite what is made easy thereof, and uphold the duty,[4] and render the purity,[5] and lend to God a goodly loan.[6] And what good you send ahead for your souls — you will find it with God,[7] better and greater in reward. And ask forgiveness of God; God is forgiving and merciful.

1 O thou, one covering himself:

2 Arise thou and warn thou!

3 And magnify thou thy Lord,

4 And purify thou thy garments,

5 And forsake thou[1] defilement,

6 And show thou not favour seeking gain,

7 And, to thy Lord, be thou patient.

8 Then when the Trumpet is sounded:

9 That[1] — that day — will be a difficult day,[2]

10 For the false claimers of guidance[1] not easy.

11 Leave thou Me with him whom I created alone,

12 And appointed for him wealth extended,[1]

13 And sons present,

14 And spread[1] before him ease.[2]

15 Then hopes he that I should add more.

16 No, indeed![1] He was towards Our proofs[2] obstinate.

17 I will burden him with a steep ascent.

18 He considered and determined,

19 (Damned be[1] how he determined!

20 Then damned be[1] how he determined!)

21 Then looked,

22 Then frowned and scowled,

23 Then turned away and waxed proud,

24 And said: "This is only sorcery[1] handed down.[2]

25 "This is only the speech[1] of a mortal."

26 I will burn him in Saqar.[1]

27 And what will convey to thee what Saqar[1] is?

28 It spares not and leaves not,

29 Scorching mortal man.[1]

30 Over it[1] are nineteen;[2]

31 And We have made the Guardians of the Fire[1] only angels. And We made their[2] number[3] only as a means of denial[4] for those who ignore warning,[5] that those given[6] the Writ[7] might be certain,[8] and those who heed warning[9] might increase in faith, and those given[10] the Writ[11] and the believers[12] might not doubt,[13] and that those in whose hearts is disease and the false claimers of guidance[14] might say: "What means God by this similitude?"[15] Thus God sends astray whom He wills, and guides whom He wills; and there knows the forces of thy Lord only He. And this is only a reminder to mortal man.

32 ¶74.2 No, indeed![1] By the moon,

33 And the night when it retreats,

34 And the morning when it brightens!

35 (It[1] is one of the greatest

36 As a warning to mortal man,

37 To him who wills among you to advance or to tarry.)

38 Every soul is in pledge[1] for what it earned[2]

39 Save the companions of the right: —

40 In gardens, they will ask each other

41 About the lawbreakers:

42 "What brought you into Saqar?"[1]

43 They will say: "We were not among the performers of duty,[1]

44 "And we fed not the needy.

45 "And we discoursed vainly[1] with those who discourse vainly,

46 "And denied the Day of Judgment[1]

47 "Until the Certainty came to us."

48 Then no benefit to them is the intercession of intercessors.[1]

[2] 1 I swear by the Day of Resurrection!

2 And I swear by the self-reproaching soul!

3 Does man think that We will not assemble his bones?

4 Verily,[1] We are able to fashion his fingertips.

5 The truth is,[1] man intends to continue[2] unrestrained;[3]

6 He asks: "When is the Day of Resurrection?"

7 Then when the sight is dazzled,

8 And the moon is eclipsed,[1]

9 And sun and moon are joined,

10 Man will say: — that day — "Whither to flee?"

11 No, indeed![1] There is no sanctuary.

12 To thy Lord, that day, is the destination.[1]

23 ¶76.2 We have sent down upon thee the Qur'an[1] in a successive revelation,[2]

24 So be thou patient for the judgment of thy Lord, and obey thou not among them a sinner or an ingrate;

25 And remember thou the name of thy Lord morning and evening.
26 And part of the night, submit[1] thou to Him — and glorify[2] thou Him the long night.[3]

27 These love the immediate, and leave behind them a burdensome day.

28 We created them, and strengthened their form[1] and, when We will, We will change their likenesses completely.[2]

29 This is a reminder, so whoso wills may take to his Lord a path.

30 And you will not save that God wills; God is knowing and wise.

كَانَ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمًا ﴿٣٠﴾

يُدۡخِلُ مَن يَشَآءُ فِي رَحۡمَتِهِۦ وَٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ
أَعَدَّ لَهُمۡ عَذَابًا أَلِيمَۢا ﴿٣١﴾

31 He makes enter whom He wills into His mercy; and for the wrongdoers[1] has He prepared a painful punishment.

وَٱلۡمُرۡسَلَٰتِ عُرۡفًا ﴿١﴾

1 By those sent[1] in succession,[2]

فَٱلۡعَٰصِفَٰتِ عَصۡفًا ﴿٢﴾

2 And the tempestuous ones a-raging,

وَٱلنَّٰشِرَٰتِ نَشۡرًا ﴿٣﴾

3 And the scattering ones a-scattering,

فَٱلۡفَٰرِقَٰتِ فَرۡقًا ﴿٤﴾

4 And the dividing ones a-dividing,[1]

فَٱلۡمُلۡقِيَٰتِ ذِكۡرًا ﴿٥﴾

5 And those delivering[1] a reminder[2]

عُذۡرًا أَوۡ نُذۡرًا ﴿٦﴾

6 As justification or warning!

إِنَّمَا تُوعَدُونَ لَوَٰقِعٞ ﴿٧﴾

7 What you are promised — it will befall.

فَإِذَا ٱلنُّجُومُ طُمِسَتۡ ﴿٨﴾

8 Then when the stars are put out,

وَإِذَا ٱلسَّمَآءُ فُرِجَتۡ ﴿٩﴾

9 And when the heaven is cleft asunder,

وَإِذَا ٱلۡجِبَالُ نُسِفَتۡ ﴿١٠﴾

10 And when the mountains are scattered,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلرُّسُلُ أُقِّتَتۡ ﴿١١﴾

11 And when the messengers are brought to the time appointed--[1]

لِأَيِّ يَوۡمٍ أُجِّلَتۡ ﴿١٢﴾

12 "To what day will it be deferred?"

لِيَوۡمِ ٱلۡفَصۡلِ ﴿١٣﴾

13 "To the Day of Decision."

وَمَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا يَوۡمُ ٱلۡفَصۡلِ ﴿١٤﴾

14 And what will convey to thee what the Day of Decision is?

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿١٥﴾

15 Woe, that day, to the deniers![1]

أَلَمۡ نُهۡلِكِ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ ﴿١٦﴾

16 Did We not destroy the former peoples?

ثُمَّ نُتۡبِعُهُمُ ٱلۡأٓخِرِينَ ﴿١٧﴾

17 Then will We cause to follow[1] them those who come later.

كَذَٰلِكَ نَفۡعَلُ بِٱلۡمُجۡرِمِينَ ﴿١٨﴾

18 Thus do We with the lawbreakers.

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿١٩﴾

19 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

أَلَمۡ نَخۡلُقكُّم مِّن مَّآءٖ مَّهِينٖ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 Did We not create you from a despised water?[1]

فَجَعَلۡنَٰهُ فِي قَرَارٖ مَّكِينٍ ﴿٢١﴾

21 And We placed it in a fixed lodging secure

إِلَىٰ قَدَرٖ مَّعۡلُومٖ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 For a known measure.

فَقَدَرۡنَا فَنِعۡمَ ٱلۡقَٰدِرُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 So We determined; and how excellent are those who determine!

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

أَلَمۡ نَجۡعَلِ ٱلۡأَرۡضَ كِفَاتًا ﴿٢٥﴾

25 Have We not made the earth a container

أَحۡيَآءٗ وَأَمۡوَٰتٗا ﴿٢٦﴾

26 Of the living and the dead?

وَجَعَلۡنَا فِيهَا رَوَٰسِيَ شَٰمِخَٰتٖ
وَأَسۡقَيۡنَٰكُم مَّآءٗ فُرَاتٗا ﴿٢٧﴾

27 And We made therein high, firm mountains, and gave you to drink sweet water.

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿٢٨﴾

28 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

ٱنطَلِقُوٓاْ إِلَىٰ مَا كُنتُم بِهِۦ تُكَذِّبُونَ

29 "Depart to what you denied!

ٱنطَلِقُوٓاْ إِلَىٰ ظِلّٖ ذِي ثَلَٰثِ شُعَبٖ ﴿٣٠﴾

30 "Depart to the threefold shadow,[1]

32 It throws sparks like logs,[1]

كَأَنَّهُۥ جِمَٰلَتٞ صُفۡرٞ ﴿٣٣﴾

33 As if giant fiery ropes.[1]

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿٣٤﴾

34 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

هَٰذَا يَوۡمُ لَا يَنطِقُونَ ﴿٣٥﴾

35 This is the day they will not speak

وَلَا يُؤۡذَنُ لَهُمۡ فَيَعۡتَذِرُونَ ﴿٣٦﴾

36 Nor be given leave, then put forth excuses.

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿٣٧﴾

37 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

هَٰذَا يَوۡمُ ٱلۡفَصۡلِ جَمَعۡنَٰكُمۡ وَٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ

38 "This is the Day of Decision! We have gathered you and the former peoples!"

٣٨

فَإِن كَانَ لَكُمۡ كَيۡدٞ فَكِيدُونِ ٣٩

39 So if you have a plan, then plan against Me.

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ٤٠

40 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

إِنَّ ٱلۡمُتَّقِينَ فِي ظِلَٰلٖ وَعُيُونٖ ٤١

41 ¶77.2 Those of prudent fear[1] will be among shades and springs,

وَفَوَٰكِهَ مِمَّا يَشۡتَهُونَ ٤٢

42 And such fruits as they desire:

كُلُواْ وَٱشۡرَبُواْ هَنِيٓـَٔۢا بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَ

43 "Eat and drink with satisfaction for what you did!"

٤٣

إِنَّا كَذَٰلِكَ نَجۡزِي ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ٤٤

44 Thus reward We the doers of good.

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ٤٥

45 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

كُلُواْ وَتَمَتَّعُواْ قَلِيلًا إِنَّكُم مُّجۡرِمُونَ

46 Eat and enjoy yourselves a little — you are lawbreakers.

٤٦

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ٤٧

47 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمُ ٱرۡكَعُواْ لَا يَرۡكَعُونَ ٤٨

48 And when it is said to them: "Be lowly,"[1] they are not lowly.[2]

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ٤٩

49 Woe, that day, to the deniers!

فَبِأَيِّ حَدِيثِۭ بَعۡدَهُۥ يُؤۡمِنُونَ ٥٠

50 Then in what narration[1] after it[2] will they believe?[3]

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

1 About what are they asking one another?

عَنِ ٱلنَّبَإِ ٱلۡعَظِيمِ ٢

2 About the tremendous report[1]

ٱلَّذِي هُمۡ فِيهِ مُخۡتَلِفُونَ ٣

3 About which they differ.[1]

كَلَّا سَيَعۡلَمُونَ ٤

4 No, indeed![1] They will come to know!

ثُمَّ كَلَّا سَيَعۡلَمُونَ ٥

5 Then no, indeed![1] They will come to know!

أَلَمۡ نَجۡعَلِ ٱلۡأَرۡضَ مِهَٰدٗا ٦

6 Have We not made the earth a resting-place,[1]

وَٱلۡجِبَالَ أَوۡتَادٗا ٧

7 And the mountains as stakes?[1]

وَخَلَقۡنَٰكُمۡ أَزۡوَٰجٗا ٨

8 And We created you in pairs,[1]

وَجَعَلۡنَا نَوۡمَكُمۡ سُبَاتٗا ٩

9 And We made your sleep rest,

وَجَعَلۡنَا ٱلَّيۡلَ لِبَاسٗا ١٠

10 And We made the night a garment,

وَجَعَلۡنَا ٱلنَّهَارَ مَعَاشٗا ١١

11 And We made the day a living,[1]

وَبَنَيۡنَا فَوۡقَكُمۡ سَبۡعٗا شِدَادٗا ١٢

12 And We built above you seven strong ones,[1]

وَجَعَلۡنَا سِرَاجٗا وَهَّاجٗا ١٣

13 And We made a blazing torch,

وَأَنزَلۡنَا مِنَ ٱلۡمُعۡصِرَٰتِ مَآءٗ ثَجَّاجٗا

14 And sent down, from the rain clouds, pouring water,

١٤

لِّنُخۡرِجَ بِهِۦ حَبّٗا وَنَبَاتٗا ١٥

15 That We might bring forth thereby grain and plants,

وَجَنَّٰتٍ أَلۡفَافًا ١٦

16 And densely growing gardens.[1]

إِنَّ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡفَصۡلِ كَانَ مِيقَٰتًا ١٧

17 The Day of Decision is an appointed time: —

يَوۡمَ يُنفَخُ فِي ٱلصُّورِ فَتَأۡتُونَ أَفۡوَاجٗا

18 The day the Trumpet is blown, and you come in crowds,

١٨

وَفُتِحَتِ ٱلسَّمَآءُ فَكَانَتۡ أَبۡوَٰبٗا ١٩

19 And the heaven is opened and becomes gates,

وَسُيِّرَتِ ٱلۡجِبَالُ فَكَانَتۡ سَرَابًا ٢٠

20 And the mountains are set in motion and become a mirage:

إِنَّ جَهَنَّمَ كَانَتۡ مِرۡصَادٗا ٢١

21 Gehenna will be lying in wait,

لِّلطَّٰغِينَ مَـَٔابٗا ٢٢

22 For those transgressing all bounds,[1] a journey's end.[2]

لَّٰبِثِينَ فِيهَآ أَحۡقَابٗا ٢٣

23 They will tarry therein long ages.

لَّا يَذُوقُونَ فِيهَا بَرۡدٗا وَلَا شَرَابًا ٢٤

24 They will taste therein neither coolness nor drink

إِلَّا حَمِيمٗا وَغَسَّاقٗا ٢٥

25 Save scalding water and purulence,[1]

جَزَآءٗ وِفَاقًا ٢٦

26 As meet reward.

إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا۟ لَا يَرْجُونَ حِسَابًا ﴿٢٧﴾

27 They expected not a reckoning,

وَكَذَّبُوا۟ بِـَٔايَـٰتِنَا كِذَّابًا ﴿٢٨﴾

28 And they denied Our proofs[1] completely,[2]

وَكُلَّ شَىْءٍ أَحْصَيْنَـٰهُ كِتَـٰبًا ﴿٢٩﴾

29 But everything have We counted in a writ.[1]

فَذُوقُوا۟ فَلَن نَّزِيدَكُمْ إِلَّا عَذَابًا ﴿٣٠﴾

30 "So taste! And We will increase you not save in punishment!"

إِنَّ لِلْمُتَّقِينَ مَفَازًا ﴿٣١﴾

31 ¶78.2 For those of prudent fear[1] is a place of safety:

حَدَآئِقَ وَأَعْنَـٰبًا ﴿٣٢﴾

32 Gardens and grapevines,

وَكَوَاعِبَ أَتْرَابًا ﴿٣٣﴾

33 And well-matched[1] maidens with swelling breasts,[2]

وَكَأْسًا دِهَاقًا ﴿٣٤﴾

34 And a cup overflowing.

لَّا يَسْمَعُونَ فِيهَا لَغْوًا وَلَا كِذَّٰبًا ﴿٣٥﴾

35 They hear therein neither vain speech nor denial,[1]

جَزَآءً مِّن رَّبِّكَ عَطَآءً حِسَابًا ﴿٣٦﴾

36 As reward from thy Lord — a gift, a reckoning —

رَّبِّ ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا ٱلرَّحْمَـٰنِ لَا يَمْلِكُونَ مِنْهُ خِطَابًا ﴿٣٧﴾

37 Lord of the Heavens and the Earth and what is between them,[1] the Almighty.[2] They have from Him no power to speak

يَوْمَ يَقُومُ ٱلرُّوحُ وَٱلْمَلَـٰٓئِكَةُ صَفًّا لَّا يَتَكَلَّمُونَ إِلَّا مَنْ أَذِنَ لَهُ ٱلرَّحْمَـٰنُ وَقَالَ صَوَابًا ﴿٣٨﴾

38 The day the Spirit and the angels stand in ranks; they speak not save he whom the Almighty[1] grants leave, and he will say what is right.

ذَٰلِكَ ٱلْيَوْمُ ٱلْحَقُّ فَمَن شَآءَ ٱتَّخَذَ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِۦ مَـَٔابًا ﴿٣٩﴾

39 That is the True[1] Day, so let him who wills take his Lord as a journey's end.[2]

إِنَّآ أَنذَرْنَـٰكُمْ عَذَابًا قَرِيبًا يَوْمَ يَنظُرُ ٱلْمَرْءُ مَا قَدَّمَتْ يَدَاهُ وَيَقُولُ ٱلْكَافِرُ يَـٰلَيْتَنِى كُنتُ تُرَٰبًۢا ﴿٤٠﴾

40 We have warned you of a near punishment: the day a man will look on what his hands sent ahead, and the false claimer of guidance[1] will say: "Would that I were dust!"

2 And those who draw forth by extracting![1]

وَٱلسَّـٰبِحَـٰتِ سَبْحًا ﴿٣﴾

3 By those ever-swimming,[1]

فَٱلسَّـٰبِقَـٰتِ سَبْقًا ﴿٤﴾

4 And the foremost vanguard,[1]

فَٱلْمُدَبِّرَٰتِ أَمْرًا ﴿٥﴾

5 And the arrangers of a matter!

يَوْمَ تَرْجُفُ ٱلرَّاجِفَةُ ﴿٦﴾

6 On the day the convulsion convulses[1]

تَتْبَعُهَا ٱلرَّادِفَةُ ﴿٧﴾

7 There will follow it[1] the second.[2]

قُلُوبٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ وَاجِفَةٌ ﴿٨﴾

8 Hearts, that day, will tremble,

أَبْصَـٰرُهَا خَـٰشِعَةٌ ﴿٩﴾

9 Their eyes humbled.[1]

يَقُولُونَ أَءِنَّا لَمَرْدُودُونَ فِى ٱلْحَافِرَةِ ﴿١٠﴾

10 (They say: "Are we to be returned to our former state,[1]

أَءِذَا كُنَّا عِظَـٰمًا نَّخِرَةً ﴿١١﴾

11 "Even when we are decayed bones?"

قَالُوا۟ تِلْكَ إِذًا كَرَّةٌ خَاسِرَةٌ ﴿١٢﴾

12 They say: "That, then, would be a losing return!")

فَإِنَّمَا هِىَ زَجْرَةٌ وَٰحِدَةٌ ﴿١٣﴾

13 And there will be but one cry[1]

فَإِذَا هُم بِٱلسَّاهِرَةِ ﴿١٤﴾

14 And then will they be awakened.[1]

هَلْ أَتَىٰكَ حَدِيثُ مُوسَىٰٓ ﴿١٥﴾

15 Has there come to thee the account[1] of Moses?

إِذْ نَادَىٰهُ رَبُّهُۥ بِٱلْوَادِ ٱلْمُقَدَّسِ طُوًى ﴿١٦﴾

16 When his Lord called him in the sacred valley of Ṭuwa:[1]

ٱذْهَبْ إِلَىٰ فِرْعَوْنَ إِنَّهُۥ طَغَىٰ ﴿١٧﴾

17 "Go thou to Pharaoh;[1] he has transgressed.

فَقُلْ هَل لَّكَ إِلَىٰٓ أَن تَزَكَّىٰ ﴿١٨﴾

18 "And say thou: 'Wouldst thou purify thyself,

وَأَهْدِيَكَ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ فَتَخْشَىٰ ﴿١٩﴾

19 "'And that I guide thee to thy Lord, so thou shalt fear?'"

فَأَرَىٰهُ ٱلْـَٔايَةَ ٱلْكُبْرَىٰ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 And he showed him the greatest proof,[1]

فَكَذَّبَ وَعَصَىٰ ﴿٢١﴾

21 But he denied and opposed.

ثُمَّ أَدۡبَرَ يَسۡعَىٰ ٢٢

22 Then turned he away in haste,

فَحَشَرَ فَنَادَىٰ ٢٣

23 And gathered and called,

فَقَالَ أَنَا۠ رَبُّكُمُ ٱلۡأَعۡلَىٰ ٢٤

24 And said: "I am your most high Lord."[1]

فَأَخَذَهُ ٱللَّهُ نَكَالَ ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ وَٱلۡأُولَىٰٓ ٢٥

25 So God seized him in exemplary punishment of the latter and the former.[1]

إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَعِبۡرَةٗ لِّمَن يَخۡشَىٰٓ ٢٦

26 In that is a lesson for him who fears.

ءَأَنتُمۡ أَشَدُّ خَلۡقًا أَمِ ٱلسَّمَآءُ بَنَىٰهَا ٢٧

27 ¶79.2 Are you harder in creation, or the sky? He built it;[1]

رَفَعَ سَمۡكَهَا فَسَوَّىٰهَا ٢٨

28 He raised the ceiling[1] thereof, and fashioned[2] it;

وَأَغۡطَشَ لَيۡلَهَا وَأَخۡرَجَ ضُحَىٰهَا ٢٩

29 And He made dark its night, and brought forth its morning.[1]

وَٱلۡأَرۡضَ بَعۡدَ ذَٰلِكَ دَحَىٰهَآ ٣٠

30 And the earth, after that, He spread it out;[1]

أَخۡرَجَ مِنۡهَا مَآءَهَا وَمَرۡعَىٰهَا ٣١

31 He brought forth therefrom its water and its pasture;

وَٱلۡجِبَالَ أَرۡسَىٰهَا ٣٢

32 And the mountains He set firmly

مَتَٰعٗا لَّكُمۡ وَلِأَنۡعَٰمِكُمۡ ٣٣

33 As enjoyment for you and for your cattle.

فَإِذَا جَآءَتِ ٱلطَّآمَّةُ ٱلۡكُبۡرَىٰ ٣٤

34 Then, when the Greatest Calamity comes:

يَوۡمَ يَتَذَكَّرُ ٱلۡإِنسَٰنُ مَا سَعَىٰ ٣٥

35 The day man will remember for what he strove,

وَبُرِّزَتِ ٱلۡجَحِيمُ لِمَن يَرَىٰ ٣٦

36 And Hell will be made manifest[1] to him who sees: —

فَأَمَّا مَن طَغَىٰ ٣٧

37 Then as for him who transgressed,

وَءَاثَرَ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةَ ٱلدُّنۡيَا ٣٨

38 And preferred the life of this world:

فَإِنَّ ٱلۡجَحِيمَ هِيَ ٱلۡمَأۡوَىٰ ٣٩

39 Hell will be the shelter.

وَأَمَّا مَنۡ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهِۦ وَنَهَى ٱلنَّفۡسَ عَنِ ٱلۡهَوَىٰ ٤٠

40 And as for him who feared the station[1] of his Lord[2] and restrained his soul from vain desire:

فَإِنَّ ٱلۡجَنَّةَ هِيَ ٱلۡمَأۡوَىٰ ٤١

41 The Garden will be the shelter.

يَسۡـَٔلُونَكَ عَنِ ٱلسَّاعَةِ أَيَّانَ مُرۡسَىٰهَا ٤٢

42 They ask thee about the Hour: "When is its arrival?"[1]

فِيمَ أَنتَ مِن ذِكۡرَىٰهَآ ٤٣

43 What is any reminder thereof to thee?[1]

إِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ مُنتَهَىٰهَآ ٤٤

44 To thy Lord is the finality thereof.

إِنَّمَآ أَنتَ مُنذِرُ مَن يَخۡشَىٰهَا ٤٥

45 Thou art but the warner of him who fears it.

كَأَنَّهُمۡ يَوۡمَ يَرَوۡنَهَا لَمۡ يَلۡبَثُوٓاْ إِلَّا عَشِيَّةً أَوۡ ضُحَىٰهَا ٤٦

46 It will be, the day they see it, as though[1] they had not tarried save a day's end[2] or a morning[3] thereof.

فَلْيَنظُرِ ٱلْإِنسَـٰنُ إِلَىٰ طَعَامِهِۦٓ ﴿٢٤﴾
24 So let man look at his food: —

أَنَّا صَبَبْنَا ٱلْمَآءَ صَبًّا ﴿٢٥﴾
25 That We poured water in showers;[1]

ثُمَّ شَقَقْنَا ٱلْأَرْضَ شَقًّا ﴿٢٦﴾
26 Then We split the earth in cracks,[1]

فَأَنۢبَتْنَا فِيهَا حَبًّا ﴿٢٧﴾
27 And We caused to grow therein grain,

وَعِنَبًا وَقَضْبًا ﴿٢٨﴾
28 And grapes, and herbage,

وَزَيْتُونًا وَنَخْلًا ﴿٢٩﴾
29 And olives, and date-palms,

وَحَدَآئِقَ غُلْبًا ﴿٣٠﴾
30 And gardens dense with foliage,

وَفَـٰكِهَةً وَأَبًّا ﴿٣١﴾
31 And fruits, and grass,

مَّتَـٰعًا لَّكُمْ وَلِأَنْعَـٰمِكُمْ ﴿٣٢﴾
32 As enjoyment for you and your cattle.

فَإِذَا جَآءَتِ ٱلصَّآخَّةُ ﴿٣٣﴾
33 Then when there comes the Blast:[1]

يَوْمَ يَفِرُّ ٱلْمَرْءُ مِنْ أَخِيهِ ﴿٣٤﴾
34 The day a man will flee from his brother,

وَأُمِّهِۦ وَأَبِيهِ ﴿٣٥﴾
35 And his mother, and his father,

وَصَـٰحِبَتِهِۦ وَبَنِيهِ ﴿٣٦﴾
36 And his consort, and his sons,

لِكُلِّ ٱمْرِئٍ مِّنْهُمْ يَوْمَئِذٍ شَأْنٌ يُغْنِيهِ ﴿٣٧﴾
37 Every man of them, that day, will have an involvement to suffice him.

وُجُوهٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ مُّسْفِرَةٌ ﴿٣٨﴾
38 Faces, that day, will be bright,

ضَاحِكَةٌ مُّسْتَبْشِرَةٌ ﴿٣٩﴾
39 Laughing, rejoicing at glad tidings.

وَوُجُوهٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ عَلَيْهَا غَبَرَةٌ ﴿٤٠﴾
40 And faces, that day, upon them will be dust,

تَرْهَقُهَا قَتَرَةٌ ﴿٤١﴾
41 Blackness[1] will cover them;

أُوْلَـٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلْكَفَرَةُ ٱلْفَجَرَةُ ﴿٤٢﴾
42 It is they who are the deniers, the immoral.

بِسْمِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلرَّحْمَـٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

إِذَا ٱلشَّمْسُ كُوِّرَتْ ﴿١﴾
[2] 1 When the sun is wrapped up,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلنُّجُومُ ٱنكَدَرَتْ ﴿٢﴾
2 And when the stars fall,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلْجِبَالُ سُيِّرَتْ ﴿٣﴾
3 And when the mountains are set in motion,

وَإِذَا ٱلْعِشَارُ عُطِّلَتْ ﴿٤﴾
4 And when the full-term she-camels[1] are neglected,

وَإِذَا ٱلْوُحُوشُ حُشِرَتْ ﴿٥﴾
5 And when the wild beasts are gathered,

وَإِذَا ٱلْبِحَارُ سُجِّرَتْ ﴿٦﴾
6 And when the seas are made to overflow,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلنُّفُوسُ زُوِّجَتْ ﴿٧﴾
7 And when the souls are coupled,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلْمَوْءُۥدَةُ سُئِلَتْ ﴿٨﴾
8 And when the infant girl buried alive[1] is asked

بِأَىِّ ذَنۢبٍ قُتِلَتْ ﴿٩﴾
9 For what transgression[1] she was killed,

وَإِذَا ٱلصُّحُفُ نُشِرَتْ ﴿١٠﴾
10 And when the pages are spread,

وَإِذَا ٱلسَّمَآءُ كُشِطَتْ ﴿١١﴾
11 And when the sky is pulled away,

وَإِذَا ٱلْجَحِيمُ سُعِّرَتْ ﴿١٢﴾
12 And when Hell is set ablaze,

وَإِذَا ٱلْجَنَّةُ أُزْلِفَتْ ﴿١٣﴾
13 And when the Garden is brought near: —

عَلِمَتْ نَفْسٌ مَّآ أَحْضَرَتْ ﴿١٤﴾
14 A soul will know what it has brought.

فَلَآ أُقۡسِمُ بِٱلۡخُنَّسِ ١٥

15 Then do I swear by those retreating:

ٱلۡجَوَارِ ٱلۡكُنَّسِ ١٦

16 The ships[1] withdrawing from view![2]

وَٱلَّيۡلِ إِذَا عَسۡعَسَ ١٧

17 And the night when it darkens![1]

وَٱلصُّبۡحِ إِذَا تَنَفَّسَ ١٨

18 And the dawn when it breathes![1]

إِنَّهُۥ لَقَوۡلُ رَسُولٖ كَرِيمٖ ١٩

19 It is the word[1] of a noble messenger,[2]

ذِي قُوَّةٍ عِندَ ذِي ٱلۡعَرۡشِ مَكِينٖ ٢٠

20 Possessor of power, with the Lord of the Throne secure,

مُّطَاعٖ ثَمَّ أَمِينٖ ٢١

21 Obeyed there, and trustworthy.

وَمَا صَاحِبُكُم بِمَجۡنُونٖ ٢٢

22 And your companion is not possessed;

وَلَقَدۡ رَءَاهُ بِٱلۡأُفُقِ ٱلۡمُبِينِ ٢٣

23 And he saw him[1] on the clear horizon;[2]

وَمَا هُوَ عَلَى ٱلۡغَيۡبِ بِضَنِينٖ ٢٤

24 And he is not niggardly of the Unseen.

وَمَا هُوَ بِقَوۡلِ شَيۡطَٰنٖ رَّجِيمٖ ٢٥

25 And it is not the word[1] of an accursed[2] satan[3]

فَأَيۡنَ تَذۡهَبُونَ ٢٦

26 — So whither are you going? —

إِنۡ هُوَ إِلَّا ذِكۡرٞ لِّلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٢٧

27 It is only a reminder[1] to all mankind,

لِمَن شَآءَ مِنكُمۡ أَن يَسۡتَقِيمَ ٢٨

28 For whom among you wills to take a straight path.

وَمَا تَشَآءُونَ إِلَّآ أَن يَشَآءَ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٢٩

29 And you will not save that God wills, the Lord of All Creation.

۞ إِذَا ٱلسَّمَآءُ ٱنفَطَرَتۡ ١

1 When the sky splits open,

وَإِذَا ٱلۡكَوَاكِبُ ٱنتَثَرَتۡ ٢

2 And when the stars are scattered,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلۡبِحَارُ فُجِّرَتۡ ٣

3 And when the seas are made to gush forth,

وَإِذَا ٱلۡقُبُورُ بُعۡثِرَتۡ ٤

4 And when the graves are overturned,

عَلِمَتۡ نَفۡسٞ مَّا قَدَّمَتۡ وَأَخَّرَتۡ ٥

5 A soul will know what it has sent ahead and held back.[1]

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلۡإِنسَٰنُ مَا غَرَّكَ بِرَبِّكَ ٱلۡكَرِيمِ ٦

6 O man: what deluded thee concerning thy Lord, the Noble,[1]

ٱلَّذِي خَلَقَكَ فَسَوَّىٰكَ فَعَدَلَكَ ٧

7 Who created thee and fashioned thee and proportioned thee in balance,[1]

فِيٓ أَيِّ صُورَةٖ مَّا شَآءَ رَكَّبَكَ ٨

8 In what form He willed assembling thee?

كَلَّا بَلۡ تُكَذِّبُونَ بِٱلدِّينِ ٩

9 No, indeed![1] The truth is,[2] you deny the Judgment.[3]

وَإِنَّ عَلَيۡكُمۡ لَحَٰفِظِينَ ١٠

10 And there are over you custodians,

كِرَامٗا كَٰتِبِينَ ١١

11 Noble and writing.

يَعۡلَمُونَ مَا تَفۡعَلُونَ ١٢

12 They know what you do.

إِنَّ ٱلۡأَبۡرَارَ لَفِي نَعِيمٖ ١٣

13 The virtuous will be in bliss,

وَإِنَّ ٱلۡفُجَّارَ لَفِي جَحِيمٖ ١٤

14 And the licentious will be in Hell.

يَصۡلَوۡنَهَا يَوۡمَ ٱلدِّينِ ١٥

15 They will burn therein on the Day of Judgment,[1]

وَمَا هُمۡ عَنۡهَا بِغَآئِبِينَ ١٦

16 And they will not therefrom be absent.

وَمَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا يَوۡمُ ٱلدِّينِ ١٧

17 And what will convey to thee what the Day of Judgment[1] is?

ثُمَّ مَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا يَوۡمُ ٱلدِّينِ ١٨

18 Then what will convey to thee what the Day of Judgment[1] is![2] —

يَوۡمَ لَا تَمۡلِكُ نَفۡسٞ لِّنَفۡسٖ شَيۡـٔٗاۖ وَٱلۡأَمۡرُ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلَّهِ ١٩

19 The day no soul will possess power for another[1] soul in anything, and the command, that day, belongs to God.

بِسۡمِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

وَيۡلٞ لِّلۡمُطَفِّفِينَ ١

1 Woe to the unfair traders:[1] —

ٱلَّذِينَ إِذَا ٱكۡتَالُواْ عَلَى ٱلنَّاسِ يَسۡتَوۡفُونَ ٢

2 Those who, when they take measure from men, take in full,

وَإِذَا كَالُوهُمۡ أَو وَّزَنُوهُمۡ يُخۡسِرُونَ ٣

3 But when they give them by measure or give them by weight, cause loss.

أَلَا يَظُنُّ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَنَّهُم مَّبۡعُوثُونَ ٤

4 Do those not think that they will be raised

لِيَوۡمٍ عَظِيمٖ ٥

يَوۡمَ يَقُومُ ٱلنَّاسُ لِرَبِّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٦

كَلَّآ إِنَّ كِتَٰبَ ٱلۡفُجَّارِ لَفِي سِجِّينٖ ٧

وَمَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا سِجِّينٞ ٨

كِتَٰبٞ مَّرۡقُومٞ ٩

وَيۡلٞ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لِّلۡمُكَذِّبِينَ ١٠

ٱلَّذِينَ يُكَذِّبُونَ بِيَوۡمِ ٱلدِّينِ ١١

وَمَا يُكَذِّبُ بِهِۦٓ إِلَّا كُلُّ مُعۡتَدٍ أَثِيمٍ ١٢

إِذَا تُتۡلَىٰ عَلَيۡهِ ءَايَٰتُنَا قَالَ أَسَٰطِيرُ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ ١٣

كَلَّا بَلۡ رَانَ عَلَىٰ قُلُوبِهِم مَّا كَانُواْ يَكۡسِبُونَ ١٤

كَلَّآ إِنَّهُمۡ عَن رَّبِّهِمۡ يَوۡمَئِذٖ لَّمَحۡجُوبُونَ ١٥

ثُمَّ إِنَّهُمۡ لَصَالُواْ ٱلۡجَحِيمِ ١٦

ثُمَّ يُقَالُ هَٰذَا ٱلَّذِي كُنتُم بِهِۦ تُكَذِّبُونَ ١٧

كَلَّآ إِنَّ كِتَٰبَ ٱلۡأَبۡرَارِ لَفِي عِلِّيِّينَ ١٨

وَمَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا عِلِّيُّونَ ١٩

كِتَٰبٞ مَّرۡقُومٞ ٢٠

يَشۡهَدُهُ ٱلۡمُقَرَّبُونَ ٢١

5 To a tremendous day: —

6 A day men will stand before the Lord of All Creation?

7 No, indeed![1] The writ[2] of the licentious is in Sijjīn.

8 And what will convey to thee what Sijjīn[1] is?

9 A writ[1] inscribed!

10 Woe, that day, to the deniers,[1]

11 Those who deny the Day of Judgment![1]

12 And none denies it save every sinful transgressor.

13 When Our proofs[1] are recited to him, he says: “Legends of the former peoples.”

14 No, indeed![1] The truth is,[2] what they earned conquered[3] their hearts.

15 No, indeed![1] From their Lord, that day, will they be veiled;

16 Then will they burn in Hell;

17 Then will it be said: “This is that which you denied.”

18 No, indeed![1] The writ[2] of the virtuous is in ʻIlliyyūn.

19 And what will convey to thee what ʻIlliyyūn[1] is?

20 A writ[1] inscribed

21 To which bear witness those brought near![1]

إِنَّ ٱلۡأَبۡرَارَ لَفِي نَعِيمٍ ٢٢

عَلَى ٱلۡأَرَآئِكِ يَنظُرُونَ ٢٣

تَعۡرِفُ فِي وُجُوهِهِمۡ نَضۡرَةَ ٱلنَّعِيمِ ٢٤

يُسۡقَوۡنَ مِن رَّحِيقٖ مَّخۡتُومٍ ٢٥

خِتَٰمُهُۥ مِسۡكٞۚ وَفِي ذَٰلِكَ فَلۡيَتَنَافَسِ ٱلۡمُتَنَٰفِسُونَ ٢٦

وَمِزَاجُهُۥ مِن تَسۡنِيمٍ ٢٧

عَيۡنٗا يَشۡرَبُ بِهَا ٱلۡمُقَرَّبُونَ ٢٨

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ أَجۡرَمُواْ كَانُواْ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ يَضۡحَكُونَ ٢٩

وَإِذَا مَرُّواْ بِهِمۡ يَتَغَامَزُونَ ٣٠

وَإِذَا ٱنقَلَبُوٓاْ إِلَىٰٓ أَهۡلِهِمُ ٱنقَلَبُواْ فَكِهِينَ ٣١

وَإِذَا رَأَوۡهُمۡ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ لَضَآلُّونَ ٣٢

وَمَآ أُرۡسِلُواْ عَلَيۡهِمۡ حَٰفِظِينَ ٣٣

فَٱلۡيَوۡمَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ مِنَ ٱلۡكُفَّارِ يَضۡحَكُونَ ٣٤

عَلَى ٱلۡأَرَآئِكِ يَنظُرُونَ ٣٥

هَلۡ ثُوِّبَ ٱلۡكُفَّارُ مَا كَانُواْ يَفۡعَلُونَ ٣٦

بِسۡمِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

22 The virtuous will be in bliss,

23 Upon couches looking on.

24 Thou wilt recognise in their faces the radiance of bliss.

25 They will be given to drink of a wine sealed,

26 Whose seal is musk — and for that let aspire those who aspire[1] —

27 And its mixture of Tasnīm:[1]

28 A spring whereat drink those brought near.[1]

29 Those who were lawbreakers laughed at those who heeded warning,[1]

30 And when they passed by them, they winked at one another.

31 And when they returned to their people, they returned delighting.

32 And when they saw them, they said: “These have gone astray.”

33 But they were not sent as custodians over them.

34 And this day those who heed warning[1] laugh at the atheists,[2]

35 Upon couches looking on.

36 Are not the atheists[1] requited for what they did?

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

إِذَا ٱلسَّمَآءُ ٱنشَقَّتْ ﴿١﴾

1 When the sky is split asunder

وَأَذِنَتْ لِرَبِّهَا وَحُقَّتْ ﴿٢﴾

2 And hearkens to its Lord, as it must,[1]

وَإِذَا ٱلْأَرْضُ مُدَّتْ ﴿٣﴾

3 And when the earth is spread out

وَأَلْقَتْ مَا فِيهَا وَتَخَلَّتْ ﴿٤﴾

4 And casts forth all that is in it and is empty,

وَأَذِنَتْ لِرَبِّهَا وَحُقَّتْ ﴿٥﴾

5 And hearkens to its Lord, as it must--[1]

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلْإِنسَٰنُ إِنَّكَ كَادِحٌ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ كَدْحًا فَمُلَٰقِيهِ ﴿٦﴾

6 O man: thou art toiling towards thy Lord with labour, and wilt meet Him!

فَأَمَّا مَنْ أُوتِىَ كِتَٰبَهُۥ بِيَمِينِهِۦ ﴿٧﴾

7 Then as for him who is given his writ[1] in his right hand:

فَسَوْفَ يُحَاسَبُ حِسَابًا يَسِيرًا ﴿٨﴾

8 He will be called to account with an easy reckoning,

وَيَنقَلِبُ إِلَىٰٓ أَهْلِهِۦ مَسْرُورًا ﴿٩﴾

9 And he will return to his people in happiness.

وَأَمَّا مَنْ أُوتِىَ كِتَٰبَهُۥ وَرَآءَ ظَهْرِهِۦ ﴿١٠﴾

10 And as for him who is given his writ[1] behind his back:

فَسَوْفَ يَدْعُوا۟ ثُبُورًا ﴿١١﴾

11 He will call for destruction,

وَيَصْلَىٰ سَعِيرًا ﴿١٢﴾

12 And burn in an inferno.

إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ فِىٓ أَهْلِهِۦ مَسْرُورًا ﴿١٣﴾

13 He was among his people in happiness;

إِنَّهُۥ ظَنَّ أَن لَّن يَحُورَ ﴿١٤﴾

14 He thought he would never return.[1]

بَلَىٰٓ إِنَّ رَبَّهُۥ كَانَ بِهِۦ بَصِيرًا ﴿١٥﴾

15 Verily,[1] his Lord saw him.

فَلَآ أُقْسِمُ بِٱلشَّفَقِ ﴿١٦﴾

16 Then do I swear by the twilight glow!

وَٱلَّيْلِ وَمَا وَسَقَ ﴿١٧﴾

17 And by the night and what it envelops![1]

وَٱلْقَمَرِ إِذَا ٱتَّسَقَ ﴿١٨﴾

18 And by the moon when it is full![1]

لَتَرْكَبُنَّ طَبَقًا عَن طَبَقٍ ﴿١٩﴾

19 You will embark upon stage after stage.[1]

فَمَا لَهُمْ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 Then what ails them that they do not believe,[1]

وَإِذَا قُرِئَ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْقُرْءَانُ لَا يَسْجُدُونَ

21 And when the Qur'an[1] is recited to them, do not submit?[2]

﴿٢١﴾

بَلِ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ يُكَذِّبُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 The truth is,[1] those who ignore warning[2] deny,

وَٱللَّهُ أَعْلَمُ بِمَا يُوعُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 And God best knows what they hoard.[1]

فَبَشِّرْهُم بِعَذَابٍ أَلِيمٍ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 So give thou them tidings[1] of a painful punishment,

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ لَهُمْ أَجْرٌ غَيْرُ مَمْنُونٍ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 Save those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds — they have a reward unending.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

بِسْمِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلرَّحْمَٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ

85

وَٱلسَّمَآءِ ذَاتِ ٱلْبُرُوجِ ﴿١﴾

1 By the sky full of constellations![1]

وَٱلْيَوْمِ ٱلْمَوْعُودِ ﴿٢﴾

2 And by the Promised Day!

وَشَاهِدٍ وَمَشْهُودٍ ﴿٣﴾

3 And by the witness and the witnessed!

قُتِلَ أَصْحَٰبُ ٱلْأُخْدُودِ ﴿٤﴾

4 Damned be[1] the companions of the trench,[2]

ٱلنَّارِ ذَاتِ ٱلْوَقُودِ ﴿٥﴾

5 Of the fuel-filled fire,

إِذْ هُمْ عَلَيْهَا قُعُودٌ ﴿٦﴾

6 When they sit over it

وَهُمْ عَلَىٰ مَا يَفْعَلُونَ بِٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ شُهُودٌ ﴿٧﴾

7 And are, of what they do with the believers,[1] witnesses.

وَمَا نَقَمُوا۟ مِنْهُمْ إِلَّآ أَن يُؤْمِنُوا۟ بِٱللَّهِ ٱلْعَزِيزِ ٱلْحَمِيدِ ﴿٨﴾

8 And they resent them only that they believe in[1] God, the Exalted in Might, the Praiseworthy,

ٱلَّذِى لَهُۥ مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ شَهِيدٌ ﴿٩﴾

9 To whom belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth; and God is witness over all things.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ فَتَنُوا۟ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ وَٱلْمُؤْمِنَٰتِ ثُمَّ لَمْ يَتُوبُوا۟ فَلَهُمْ عَذَابُ جَهَنَّمَ وَلَهُمْ عَذَابُ ٱلْحَرِيقِ ﴿١٠﴾

10 Those who subject the believing men[1] and the believing women[2] to means of denial,[3] then repent not: they have the punishment of Gehenna — and they have the punishment of the consuming fire.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ لَهُمۡ
جَنَّٰتٞ تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُۚ ذَٰلِكَ
ٱلۡفَوۡزُ ٱلۡكَبِيرُ ١١

11 Those who heed warning[1] and do righteous deeds: they have gardens beneath which rivers flow; that is the Great Achievement.

إِنَّ بَطۡشَ رَبِّكَ لَشَدِيدٌ ١٢

12 The might of thy Lord is strong.

إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ يُبۡدِئُ وَيُعِيدُ ١٣

13 He is it who originates and repeats.

وَهُوَ ٱلۡغَفُورُ ٱلۡوَدُودُ ١٤

14 And He is the Forgiving, the Loving,

ذُو ٱلۡعَرۡشِ ٱلۡمَجِيدُ ١٥

15 Owner of the Throne, the Glorious,

فَعَّالٞ لِّمَا يُرِيدُ ١٦

16 Doer of what He intends.

هَلۡ أَتَىٰكَ حَدِيثُ ٱلۡجُنُودِ ١٧

17 Has there come to thee the account[1] of the forces

فِرۡعَوۡنَ وَثَمُودَ ١٨

18 Of Pharaoh,[1] and of Thamūd?

بَلِ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ فِي تَكۡذِيبٖ ١٩

19 The truth is,[1] those who ignore warning[2] are in denial,

وَٱللَّهُ مِن وَرَآئِهِم مُّحِيطُۢ ٢٠

20 But God is behind them,[1] encompassing.

بَلۡ هُوَ قُرۡءَانٞ مَّجِيدٞ ٢١

21 The truth is,[1] it is a glorious recitation[2]

فِي لَوۡحٖ مَّحۡفُوظِۭ ٢٢

22 In a protected tablet.

In the name of God, the Almighty,[1] the Merciful.

86[2]

وَٱلسَّمَآءِ وَٱلطَّارِقِ ١

1 By the sky and the night-comer![1]

وَمَآ أَدۡرَىٰكَ مَا ٱلطَّارِقُ ٢

2 And what will convey to thee what the night-comer is?[1]

ٱلنَّجۡمُ ٱلثَّاقِبُ ٣

3 The piercing star!

إِن كُلُّ نَفۡسٖ لَّمَّا عَلَيۡهَا حَافِظٞ ٤

4 There is no soul but has over it a custodian.

فَلۡيَنظُرِ ٱلۡإِنسَٰنُ مِمَّ خُلِقَ ٥

5 So let man look from what he was created:

خُلِقَ مِن مَّآءٖ دَافِقٖ ٦

6 He was created from a gushing water,

يَخۡرُجُ مِنۢ بَيۡنِ ٱلصُّلۡبِ وَٱلتَّرَآئِبِ ٧

7 Issuing forth from between the loins and the breast-bones.[1]

إِنَّهُۥ عَلَىٰ رَجۡعِهِۦ لَقَادِرٞ ٨

8 He is able to return him.

يَوۡمَ تُبۡلَى ٱلسَّرَآئِرُ ٩

9 The day the secrets are tried,

فَمَا لَهُۥ مِن قُوَّةٖ وَلَا نَاصِرٖ ١٠

10 Then will he have neither power nor helper.

وَٱلسَّمَآءِ ذَاتِ ٱلرَّجۡعِ ١١

11 By the sky full of returning![1]

وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ ذَاتِ ٱلصَّدۡعِ ١٢

12 And by the earth full of cracks!

إِنَّهُۥ لَقَوۡلٞ فَصۡلٞ ١٣

13 It is a decisive word,

وَمَا هُوَ بِٱلۡهَزۡلِ ١٤

14 And it is not in jest.

إِنَّهُمۡ يَكِيدُونَ كَيۡدٗا ١٥

15 They plan a plan —

وَأَكِيدُ كَيۡدٗا ١٦

16 And I plan a plan.

فَمَهِّلِ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ أَمۡهِلۡهُمۡ رُوَيۡدَۢا ١٧

17 So grant thou respite[1] to the false claimers of guidance;[2] grant thou them respite awhile.

87[2]

سَبِّحِ ٱسۡمَ رَبِّكَ ٱلۡأَعۡلَى ١

1 Glorify[1] thou the name of thy Lord, the Most High,

ٱلَّذِي خَلَقَ فَسَوَّىٰ ٢

2 Who created and fashioned,

وَٱلَّذِي قَدَّرَ فَهَدَىٰ ٣

3 And who determined and guided,

وَٱلَّذِيٓ أَخۡرَجَ ٱلۡمَرۡعَىٰ ٤

4 And who brought forth the pasture

فَجَعَلَهُۥ غُثَآءً أَحۡوَىٰ ٥

5 Then made it blackening decaying herbage[1]

سَنُقۡرِئُكَ فَلَا تَنسَىٰٓ ٦

6 (We will make thee recite, and thou wilt not forget.[1])

إِلَّا مَا شَآءَ ٱللَّهُۚ إِنَّهُۥ يَعۡلَمُ ٱلۡجَهۡرَ وَمَا
يَخۡفَىٰ ٧

7 Save that God should will;[1] He knows the apparent and the hidden.

وَنُيَسِّرُكَ لِلۡيُسۡرَىٰ ٨

8 And We will ease thee towards ease.

فَذَكِّرۡ إِن نَّفَعَتِ ٱلذِّكۡرَىٰ ٩

9 So remind thou; if the reminder should benefit,

سَيَذَّكَّرُ مَن يَخۡشَىٰ ١٠

10 He will take heed who fears.

وَيَتَجَنَّبُهَا ٱلْأَشْقَى ﴿١١﴾

11 But the most wretched will avoid it,

ٱلَّذِى يَصْلَى ٱلنَّارَ ٱلْكُبْرَىٰ ﴿١٢﴾

12 Who will burn in the Great Fire,

ثُمَّ لَا يَمُوتُ فِيهَا وَلَا يَحْيَىٰ ﴿١٣﴾

13 Then will he neither die therein nor live.

قَدْ أَفْلَحَ مَن تَزَكَّىٰ ﴿١٤﴾

14 He is successful who has purified himself,

وَذَكَرَ ٱسْمَ رَبِّهِۦ فَصَلَّىٰ ﴿١٥﴾

15 And remembers the name of his Lord and performs the duty.[1]

بَلْ تُؤْثِرُونَ ٱلْحَيَوٰةَ ٱلدُّنْيَا ﴿١٦﴾

16 The truth is,[1] you prefer the life of this world

وَٱلْءَاخِرَةُ خَيْرٌ وَأَبْقَىٰٓ ﴿١٧﴾

17 When the Hereafter is better and more enduring.

إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَفِى ٱلصُّحُفِ ٱلْأُولَىٰ ﴿١٨﴾

18 This is in the former scriptures,

صُحُفِ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ وَمُوسَىٰ ﴿١٩﴾

88[2]

هَلْ أَتَىٰكَ حَدِيثُ ٱلْغَٰشِيَةِ ﴿١﴾

1 Has there come to thee the narrative[1] of the Enveloping?

وُجُوهٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ خَٰشِعَةٌ ﴿٢﴾

2 Faces, that day, will be humbled:[1]

عَامِلَةٌ نَّاصِبَةٌ ﴿٣﴾

3 Toiling, exhausted,

تَصْلَىٰ نَارًا حَامِيَةً ﴿٤﴾

4 Burning in a scorching Fire,

تُسْقَىٰ مِنْ عَيْنٍ ءَانِيَةٍ ﴿٥﴾

5 Watered from a boiling spring.

لَّيْسَ لَهُمْ طَعَامٌ إِلَّا مِن ضَرِيعٍ ﴿٦﴾

6 They have no food save of poisonous thorns:[1]

لَّا يُسْمِنُ وَلَا يُغْنِى مِن جُوعٍ ﴿٧﴾

7 Neither sustaining, nor availing against hunger.

وُجُوهٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ نَّاعِمَةٌ ﴿٨﴾

8 Faces, that day, will be joyous:

لِّسَعْيِهَا رَاضِيَةٌ ﴿٩﴾

9 With their striving well-pleased,

فِى جَنَّةٍ عَالِيَةٍ ﴿١٠﴾

10 In a high garden.

لَّا تَسْمَعُ فِيهَا لَٰغِيَةً ﴿١١﴾

11 They hear therein no vain speech;

فِيهَا عَيْنٌ جَارِيَةٌ ﴿١٢﴾

12 Therein — a flowing spring;

فِيهَا سُرُرٌ مَّرْفُوعَةٌ ﴿١٣﴾

13 Therein — couches[1] raised,

وَأَكْوَابٌ مَّوْضُوعَةٌ ﴿١٤﴾

14 And cups set,

وَنَمَارِقُ مَصْفُوفَةٌ ﴿١٥﴾

15 And cushions arrayed,

وَزَرَابِىُّ مَبْثُوثَةٌ ﴿١٦﴾

16 And carpets outspread.

أَفَلَا يَنظُرُونَ إِلَى ٱلْإِبِلِ كَيْفَ خُلِقَتْ ﴿١٧﴾

17 Will they then not[1] look at the camels — how they were created!

وَإِلَى ٱلسَّمَآءِ كَيْفَ رُفِعَتْ ﴿١٨﴾

18 And at the sky — how it was raised!

وَإِلَى ٱلْجِبَالِ كَيْفَ نُصِبَتْ ﴿١٩﴾

19 And at the mountains — how they were erected!

وَإِلَى ٱلْأَرْضِ كَيْفَ سُطِحَتْ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 And at the earth — how it was spread out!

فَذَكِّرْ إِنَّمَآ أَنتَ مُذَكِّرٌ ﴿٢١﴾

21 So remind thou; thou art but one reminding,

لَّسْتَ عَلَيْهِم بِمُصَيْطِرٍ ﴿٢٢﴾

22 Thou art not over them an overseer.

إِلَّا مَن تَوَلَّىٰ وَكَفَرَ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 But whoso turns away and denies,

فَيُعَذِّبُهُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْعَذَابَ ٱلْأَكْبَرَ ﴿٢٤﴾

24 God will punish him with the greatest punishment.

إِنَّ إِلَيْنَآ إِيَابَهُمْ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 To Us is their return;

ثُمَّ إِنَّ عَلَيْنَا حِسَابَهُم ﴿٢٦﴾

26 Then upon Us is their reckoning.

89[2]

وَٱلْفَجْرِ ﴿١﴾

1 By the dawn,[1]

وَلَيَالٍ عَشْرٍ ﴿٢﴾

2 And ten nights,[1]

وَٱلشَّفْعِ وَٱلْوَتْرِ ﴿٣﴾

3 And the even and the odd,

وَٱلَّيْلِ إِذَا يَسْرِ ﴿٤﴾

4 And the night when he[1] departs![2]

هَلْ فِى ذَٰلِكَ قَسَمٌ لِّذِى حِجْرٍ ﴿٥﴾

5 Is there not in that an oath for one of intelligence?[1]

أَلَمْ تَرَ كَيْفَ فَعَلَ رَبُّكَ بِعَادٍ ﴿٦﴾

6 Hast thou not considered[1] how thy Lord did with ʿĀd,

إِرَمَ ذَاتِ ٱلْعِمَادِ ﴿٧﴾

7 Iram of the pillars,

ٱلَّتِى لَمْ يُخْلَقْ مِثْلُهَا فِى ٱلْبِلَـٰدِ ﴿٨﴾

8 The like of which had never been created in the land,

وَثَمُودَ ٱلَّذِينَ جَابُوا۟ ٱلصَّخْرَ بِٱلْوَادِ ﴿٩﴾

9 And Thamūd who hollowed the rocks in the valley,

وَفِرْعَوْنَ ذِى ٱلْأَوْتَادِ ﴿١٠﴾

10 And Pharaoh,[1] the Lord of Stakes

ٱلَّذِينَ طَغَوْا۟ فِى ٱلْبِلَـٰدِ ﴿١١﴾

11 Who transgressed all bounds in the lands,

فَأَكْثَرُوا۟ فِيهَا ٱلْفَسَادَ ﴿١٢﴾

12 And increased corruption therein?

فَصَبَّ عَلَيْهِمْ رَبُّكَ سَوْطَ عَذَابٍ ﴿١٣﴾

13 So thy Lord poured upon them a scourge of punishment.

إِنَّ رَبَّكَ لَبِٱلْمِرْصَادِ ﴿١٤﴾

14 Thy Lord is ever watchful.[1]

فَأَمَّا ٱلْإِنسَـٰنُ إِذَا مَا ٱبْتَلَىٰهُ رَبُّهُۥ
فَأَكْرَمَهُۥ وَنَعَّمَهُۥ فَيَقُولُ رَبِّىٓ أَكْرَمَنِ

15 And as for man, when his Lord tries him, and honours him, and favours him, he says: "My Lord has honoured me."

﴿١٥﴾

وَأَمَّآ إِذَا مَا ٱبْتَلَىٰهُ فَقَدَرَ عَلَيْهِ رِزْقَهُۥ
فَيَقُولُ رَبِّىٓ أَهَـٰنَنِ ﴿١٦﴾

16 But when He tries him, and straitens his provision, he says: "My Lord has humiliated me."

كَلَّا بَل لَّا تُكْرِمُونَ ٱلْيَتِيمَ ﴿١٧﴾

17 No, indeed![1] The truth is,[2] you honour not the fatherless,[3]

وَلَا تَحَـٰٓضُّونَ عَلَىٰ طَعَامِ ٱلْمِسْكِينِ

18 Nor encourage one another to feed the needy,

﴿١٨﴾

وَتَأْكُلُونَ ٱلتُّرَاثَ أَكْلًا لَّمًّا ﴿١٩﴾

19 But consume the inheritance with greed,[1]

وَتُحِبُّونَ ٱلْمَالَ حُبًّا جَمًّا ﴿٢٠﴾

20 And love wealth with much love.

كَلَّآ إِذَا دُكَّتِ ٱلْأَرْضُ دَكًّا دَكًّا ﴿٢١﴾

21 No, indeed![1] When the earth is ground to powder,[2]

وَجَآءَ رَبُّكَ وَٱلْمَلَكُ صَفًّا صَفًّا ﴿٢٢﴾

22 And thy Lord comes — and the angels, rank upon rank —

وَجِاْىٓءَ يَوْمَئِذٍۭ بِجَهَنَّمَ يَوْمَئِذٍ يَتَذَكَّرُ
ٱلْإِنسَـٰنُ وَأَنَّىٰ لَهُ ٱلذِّكْرَىٰ ﴿٢٣﴾

23 And Gehenna, that day, is brought: that day will man take heed; but how will the reminder be for him?

يَقُولُ يَـٰلَيْتَنِى قَدَّمْتُ لِحَيَاتِى ﴿٢٤﴾

24 He will say: "Would that I had sent ahead for my life!"

فَيَوْمَئِذٍ لَّا يُعَذِّبُ عَذَابَهُۥٓ أَحَدٌ ﴿٢٥﴾

25 And — that day — none will punish as His punishment,

وَلَا يُوثِقُ وَثَاقَهُۥٓ أَحَدٌ ﴿٢٦﴾

26 And none will bind as His binding.

يَـٰٓأَيَّتُهَا ٱلنَّفْسُ ٱلْمُطْمَئِنَّةُ ﴿٢٧﴾

27 "O thou soul at peace:

ٱرْجِعِىٓ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكِ رَاضِيَةً مَّرْضِيَّةً ﴿٢٨﴾

28 "Return thou to thy Lord — well-pleased and well-pleasing,

فَٱدْخُلِى فِى عِبَـٰدِى ﴿٢٩﴾

29 "And enter thou among My servants.

وَٱدْخُلِى جَنَّتِى ﴿٣٠﴾

30 "And enter thou My garden."

۞ لَآ أُقْسِمُ بِهَـٰذَا ٱلْبَلَدِ ﴿١﴾

1 I swear by this land![1]

3 And by the begetter and what he begot!

لَقَدْ خَلَقْنَا ٱلْإِنسَـٰنَ فِى كَبَدٍ ﴿٤﴾

4 We have created man into adversity.[1]

أَيَحْسَبُ أَن لَّن يَقْدِرَ عَلَيْهِ أَحَدٌ ﴿٥﴾

5 Thinks he that none has power over him?

يَقُولُ أَهْلَكْتُ مَالًا لُّبَدًا ﴿٦﴾

6 He says: "I have spent[1] abundant wealth!"

أَيَحْسَبُ أَن لَّمْ يَرَهُۥٓ أَحَدٌ ﴿٧﴾

7 Thinks he that none has seen him?

أَلَمْ نَجْعَل لَّهُۥ عَيْنَيْنِ ﴿٨﴾

8 Have We not made for him two eyes,

وَلِسَانًا وَشَفَتَيْنِ ﴿٩﴾

9 And a tongue, and two lips,

وَهَدَيْنَـٰهُ ٱلنَّجْدَيْنِ ﴿١٠﴾

10 And guided him on the two highways?[1]

فَلَا ٱقْتَحَمَ ٱلْعَقَبَةَ ﴿١١﴾

11 But he has not attempted the steep path.

وَمَآ أَدْرَىٰكَ مَا ٱلْعَقَبَةُ ﴿١٢﴾

12 And what will convey to thee what the steep path is?

فَكُّ رَقَبَةٍ ﴿١٣﴾

13 The freeing of a slave,

أَوْ إِطْعَـٰمٌ فِى يَوْمٍ ذِى مَسْغَبَةٍ ﴿١٤﴾

14 Or feeding in a day of starvation

يَتِيمًا ذَا مَقْرَبَةٍ ﴿١٥﴾

15 A fatherless[1] relation

أَوْ مِسْكِينًا ذَا مَتْرَبَةٍ ﴿١٦﴾

16 Or one needy in misery,

ثُمَّ كَانَ مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَتَوَاصَوْا۟ بِٱلصَّبْرِ وَتَوَاصَوْا۟ بِٱلْمَرْحَمَةِ ﴿١٧﴾

17 Then being among those who heed warning,[1] and counsel one another to patience, and counsel one another to compassion.[2]

أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ أَصْحَٰبُ ٱلْمَيْمَنَةِ ﴿١٨﴾

18 Those are the companions of the right.[1]

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا هُمْ أَصْحَٰبُ ٱلْمَشْـَٔمَةِ ﴿١٩﴾

19 But those who deny Our proofs[1] — they are the companions of the left.[2]

عَلَيْهِمْ نَارٌ مُّؤْصَدَةٌۢ ﴿٢٠﴾

20 Upon them will a Fire be closed in.

[2] 1 By the sun and its morning brightness!

7 And by a soul and Him that[1] fashioned it,

7 We will ease him towards ease.

8 And as for him who is miserly, and self-sufficient,

9 And denies the best:[1]

10 We will ease him towards hardship,

11 And his wealth will not avail him when he falls.[1]

12 Upon Us is the guidance,

ٱلَّذِى يُؤۡتِى مَالَهُۥ يَتَزَكَّىٰ ﴿١٨﴾

18 Who gives his wealth to purify himself,

19 And not that any have a favour to be rewarded,[1]

إِلَّا ٱبۡتِغَآءَ وَجۡهِ رَبِّهِ ٱلۡأَعۡلَىٰ ﴿٢٠﴾

5 Taught man what he knew not.

10 A servant when he performs the duty?[1]

11 Hast thou considered[1] if he is upon guidance,

12 Or enjoins prudent fear?[1]

13 Hast thou considered[1] if he denies and turns away?[2]

14 Knows he not that God sees?

15 No, indeed![1] If he cease not, We will drag him by the forelock,

16 The lying, offending[1] forelock.

17 Then let him call his council.

18 We will call the guards of Hell.[1]

19 No, indeed![1] Obey thou not him, but submit[2] thou, and draw thou near.

NOTES & COMMENTARY

1 1:0[1] The first chapter of the Qur'an is by convention called al fātiḥah or The Opening. Whatever else al fātiḥah may be, its primary function is that of a contract between lord and vassal. Interestingly, its contents and structure mirror to a noticeable extent suzerainty treaties used by the Hittites — whose kingdom at one point buttressed the city of Petra, where Dan Gibson (Quranic Geography, 2011) and others place al masjid al ḥarām (see Notepad XVI). The articles of the contract are tersely stated, with rights and responsibilities clearly listed on both sides. By treating the Qur'an as a complete document — and given that al fātiḥah represents a contract — it was natural to look in what follows al fātiḥah for what is common to all contracts: clarification of the key terms used in the broader document. And this is what one finds. See Notepad IX.i.

1:1[1] Arabic: raḥmān — generally translated most merciful and synonyms thereof which is understandable given modern usage of the word, and the fact that raḥmān shares the r-ḥ-m root with raḥīm which undoubtedly encompasses such senses. However, there are three arguments against such a Qur'anic value for raḥmān. Firstly, there are certain Qur'anic instances where context is at direct odds with the subject of mercy. Secondly, raḥmān appears alongside raḥīm in the bismillah so were the Traditionalist right in his assessment of raḥmān, we must admit to a tautologous and therefore superfluous opening statement, which would be odd since the text in general is characterised by exactitude and economy of words. Thirdly, there is historical evidence of usage of raḥmān among Nabataean Arabs in the sense of almighty (in a eulogy chiselled in rock describing a king who had just defeated and laid waste his enemies). That raḥmān was used in this sense among the Nabataeans lends additional supports to the broader thesis that Muḥammad was a Nabataean Arab — perhaps from Petra, but certainly with access to it as a place of pilgrimage (see Notepad XVI). However, in the present work, raḥmān is rendered almighty on the basis of pan-textual analysis (comparison of all instances and their contexts). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See 36:23 and Notepad I.

1:2[1] Arabic: al ʿālamīn. This word denotes the worlds in the broadest of senses, as in: all places that can or do exist, as well as the inhabitants thereof. Most translations use the worlds, but its consistent use across all cases jars in some collocations and contexts. The verses at 26:23-24 definitively confirm the Qur'anic sense of the collocation rabb al ʿālamīn to be the Lord of All Creation (or analogues) and that is the value used for rabb al ʿālamīn here in all cases. Pan-textual analysis of the remaining instances (2:47, 2:122, 3:33, 3:42, etc.) shows al ʿālamīn to reference humankind only, and those instances are rendered all mankind throughout. This fully mitigates the awkwardness other approaches create.

1:3[1] Arabic: raḥmān. Typically rendered most merciful. See 36:23 and note thereto, note to 1:1, and Notepad I.

1:4[1] Arabic: dīn. See Notepad V. For Day of Judgment see 82:17-19.

1:5[1] Tenses are less exact in Arabic than in English. While the Arabic equivalent of the present tense is used here, the future tense is, I believe, both implied and natural in English in a context in which terms are agreed.

1:5[2] This verse is of critical importance to the man who takes the Qur'an seriously since it represents his part of the contract he makes with God.

1:6[1] Cf. 6:151-153.

1:7[1] Such people are those who either disobey or otherwise reject the truth after it comes to them (see 2:61, 3:112, 4:93, 7:71, 8:16, 16:106, 20:81, 42:16, 48:6, 58:14).

1:7[2] Arabic: al ḍālūn. See note to 3:90.

2 2:0[1] Arabic: raḥmān. Typically rendered most merciful. See 36:23 and note thereto, note to 1:1, and Notepad I.

2:0[2] The second chapter of the Qur'an is by convention called al baqarah or The Heifer.

2:1[1] Various single and combined letters precede a number of chapters. In the present work, where such letters precede a chapter, they are presented at the top of each page for that chapter both in Arabic and in English transliteration. In Arabic, these letters are known as al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭaʿāt which means the disjoined or the disconnected letters. In English, they tend to be called the mysterious letters, since the default Traditionalist Islamic position is that their meaning may be understood by God alone. Traditionalist Islam has, however, in its 1,400-year history, furnished a number of theories as to their meaning, none of which is convincing, and some of which are highly contrived, insulting to the intelligence, or cases of meandering subjective mysticism. Rashad Khalifa and his principal adherent Edip Yuksel claim an understanding of their meaning on the basis of a broader system of Khalifa's devising predicated on the number 19. Leaving aside consideration of the relative merits of that system, the fact is that it requires the manipulation of the components of al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭaʿāt to claim to work at all. In the first (e-book) edition of this work (2016) I stated frankly that I did not know what these letters mean. Having tried and failed to decipher them on more than one occasion, I had made peace with the fact that I would publish my life's work without an answer to this age-old question. However, as I was approaching the end of the process of correcting the text prior to the first 'rough' hard-copy release, I was privileged to gain the beginnings of a cohesive understanding of their meaning in response to prayer. I included those findings at that stage in my process in that initial hard copy release of my work in 2017. Since that time, I have — thanks to those individuals who backed me on the basis of that first release of The Qur'an: A Complete Revelation — been funded through the equally mammoth task of finalising this work prior to what I hope to be its final edition (2022). I am delighted to be able to include within the present edition of my work a full and comprehensive exposition of the meanings of these symbols. Their demonstration is comprehensive, cohesive, and entirely consistent with the text, and — when understood — deeply impressive. However, it is not something one can summarise in a few words. The meaning of al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭaʿāt defeated the best minds the Islamic world has produced over the course of fourteen centuries; it is natural that it would require intelligence and concentration to follow their explanation. However, these factors being present, a full understanding of al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭaʿāt may be gained in a few hours by the diligent student; and once gained, that student's engagement with — and appreciation of — the Qur'an will be greatly enhanced. In the notes below, I furnish the value for each instance of al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭaʿāt, along with a reference to this note and to Article MLQ where the interested reader may acquaint himself with their comprehensive exposition.

alif lām mīm:

1:1-7 (al fātiḥah).

2:2[1] Arabic: ḏẖālika. This demonstrative pronoun is commonly rendered at this juncture by Traditionalist translators as this

(i.e. indicating what follows). The non-sectarian A. J. Arberry distinguishes himself among mainstream translators in that he correctly renders dẖālika that (i.e. indicating what precedes). In the present work the order of the Qur'an is taken to be as fixed and deliberate as that of its contents; thus dẖālika points back at and references that which precedes; namely, the letters alif lām mīm and — via them — al fātiḥah (see note below).

2:2[2] Qur'anic definition: al kitābu lā rayba fī hi. The Traditionalist has a parsing problem at 2:2. He is not clear whether the sense is: This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of Allah (Saheeh International) or This is the Book; in it is guidance sure, without doubt, to those who fear Allah (Yusuf Ali). He resolves his problem by declaring both readings valid and adding two sets of three dots to the Qur'anic text to indicate alternate readings. The most basic application of pan-textual analysis shows that the same collocation as found at 2:2 is found also at 10:37 and 32:2 where it can only be parsed in the first way; and in accordance with the methodology here, that must be the correct parsing at 2:2 also. To consider 2:2 free of Traditionalist encumbrances then, we should recall that dẖālika indicates what directly precedes (see note above). The question is then: what directly precedes dẖālika here? What directly precedes dẖālika here is the first instance of al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭa'āt, which in English transliteration is alif lām mīm. For the statement here at 2:2 to be meaningful, alif lām mīm must in some way signify values equal to al fātiḥah. And here our journey into understanding al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭa'āt begins (for the full analysis of al ḥurūf al muqaṭṭa'āt see Article MLQ.) We saw above that verses 1:1-7 comprise a suzerainty (or lord-vassal) treaty defining obligations and rights between parties. Familiarity with the broader text reveals that the Qur'an itself serves two purposes: to confirm what is within its scope, and to give a detailed exposition of al kitābu lā rayba fī hi (see 10:37). Thus al fātiḥah comprises the quintessence of which the remaining Qur'an is an exposition or working-out. In Arabic kitāb refers to something written. That sense includes contract and synonyms thereof, and given what we have understood of al fātiḥah, the collocation under discussion is rendered here and throughout: the Writ about which there is no doubt. See also 10:37, 32:2 and Notepad IX.i.

2:2[3] Qur'anic definition: al muttaqūn. The continuation at 2:3 shows the fuller meaning of al muttaqūn to encompass those who act on the basis of something they have not yet seen. The concept of taqwā is often translated as consciousness (of God) or piety. I agree with that rendering insofar as it carries the connotation of circumspection and precautionary, preparatory — or anticipatory — awareness; yet it is missing two key components: the fact that such fear is warranted (one's duty is a real and pre-existing obligation; see 7:172), and action based thereon (here: deeds in keeping with one's obligations, and spending of that which God has provided) which acts comprise evidence of piety. I render the verb to be in prudent fear; the participle those of prudent fear; and the noun prudent fear throughout since this rendering achieves something of the two requirements just stated, as well as the initial sense of fear or consciousness. The possession and exercise of taqwā is at the core of meaningful human experience (2:21), and something peculiar to humans who, alone in all Creation so far as we know, are capable of conceptual anticipation, and planning and action on the basis thereof. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:3[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

2:3[2] Arabic: al ṣalāt. As anyone with a background in the religion called Islam will appreciate, al ṣalāt figures conspicuously in the Traditionalist's presentation of the Qur'an, since the value he ascribes to it represents a central plank of the dogma he promotes — a dogma contrived elsewhere and then ascribed by him to the Qur'an. The Traditionalist's narrative asserts that the broader collocation here (a frequent motif in the Qur'an) is an imperative to adhere to a formal prayer regime, the number of which and the form of which are together a creative product of the Traditionalist's preferred, non-Qur'anic sources. Article SZC in the present work summarises the divergent ways that the Traditionalist treats ṣalāt; how he is forced, here and there, to replace his preferred value in translations with other (completely unrelated) meanings where it is not possible to impress his required value upon the context since the result would be too bizarre, even for him. He practices this inconstancy with regard to the Qur'an because his value for al ṣalāt is a pre-requisite for any analysis he conducts; it is, as we say, an assumed conclusion which is conceived outside of the Qur'an and then imported into it. Since his value for al ṣalāt cannot be shown to arise organically in the text, it must be forced to fit in order to achieve his purpose: for his religion to appear intrinsic to the Qur'an. While attentive readers with knowledge of Arabic feel an awkward tension at certain places where the term is found, those who have been thoroughly schooled in the Traditionalist's assumed conclusions assume he can prove his assertions. I do not make that assumption. On a pan-textual basis ṣalāt is shown generically to denote duty. Its core sense is the duty both to serve and to seek help from God alone as per the Writ at 1:1-7 of which the statement at 1:5 comprises our part — commitment to which also satisfies the pre-existing obligation every man has to acknowledge God's authority (see 7:172). But every man has innumerable duties in his various capacities in life. God himself has duties. Of course, ṣalāt may also indicate worship since worship is also a duty binding upon a believing man. But just because worship is a duty does not mean that all duty is worship just as, while all oranges are fruits, all fruits are not oranges. This simple point of logic has evaded the Traditionalist and resulted in a shambles, and the Islamic world is that shambles writ large, as countless millions of people are encouraged — under the auspices of the Traditionalist's priesthood — to be lax in the myriad duties which result in honest, productive, God-fearing families and societies, in favour of paying a time tax in (typically) meaningless rituals. The result is the systematic thwarting of potential and frustration of initiative, and finds broader expression in the corruption, ineptitude, intellectual torpidity, wasted lives, and inferior culture which characterise the Muslim world today and led to its collapse. I render ṣalāt as duty throughout. Instances of ṣalāt and its plural ṣalawāt appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Article SZC.

2:4[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

2:4[2] I.e. in that of which the Qur'an treats which confirms (and also corrects) what remains of previous scriptures. See note to 2:66.

2:4[3] Arabic: yaqina. Generally translated as to be certain and synonyms, such values are acceptable but require clarification. There exists an unfortunate disconnect between Arabic and English here. In short, yaqina means two related things: to verify or confirm on the one hand and to be certain or sure on the other — depending on whether or not the idea is perfective. The two aspects are obviously related: having verified, one is then certain. However, in the English of today such a relationship is not obvious. If to believe is fraught with difficulty in English (meaning today anything between to accept blindly and to be gullible on the one hand through to give purely intellectual assent to on the other) then to be certain to some extent is an expansion or intensification of what to believe has come to mean. But yaqina is an evidence-based conviction; it is not a hope or a feeling — even an intense hope or feeling. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:5[1] Cf. 2:5, 3:104, 7:8, 7:157, 9:88, 23:102, 24:51, 30:38, 31:5, 59:9, 64:16.

2:6[1] Qur'anic definition: alladẖīna kafarū. Typically rendered those who disbelieve and equivalents. The text immediately following provides the value for the discrete compound alladẖīna kafarū. Those for whom […]it is the same[…] whether thou hast warned them or thou hast not warned them are, by definition, indifferent to — or ignore — warning. The definition applies only to alladẖīna kafarū. According to the methodology used here since other compounds such as alladẖīna kafarū + bi are not mentioned, they are not governed by this definition. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.i.

2:6[2] Qur'anic usage: lā yu'minūn. The implicit value for this term is found in what follows at 2:7. That value may be summarised as they are lost in darkness, though I defer to the standard understanding in my translation. Note that the definition applies to the discrete compound lā yu'minūn only. According to the methodology used here, since other compounds such as lā yu'minūn + bi are not mentioned they are not governed by this definition. Qur'anic usage throughout identifies belief as the acceptance of proof when presented (and keeping faith with the implications of what is believed); those who do not believe reject proof even when it is compelling. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad II.ii. Cf. 36:10.

¶2.2 2:8[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

2:8[2] See note to (al) mu'minūn at 8:2.

2:9[1] Arabic: alladẖīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:12[1] Arabic: alā. This word performs a range of functions depending on the mechanics of the sentence, but here it is operating as an intensifying interjection introducing a new sentence or thought which clarifies what went before. All instances in which alā performs this function are rendered in truth — which is a standard means of conveying its sense, although consistently applied in this work. This interjection is found at 2:12, 2:13, 2:214, 6:31, 6:62, 7:54, 7:131, 9:99, 10:55, 10:55, 10:62, 10:66, 11:5, 11:8, 11:18, 11:60, 11:68, 13:28, 16:25, 16:59, 24:64, 37:151, 41:54, 41:54, 42:5, 42:18, 42:45, 42:53, 58:18, 58:19, 58:22. The places where alā is found together provide a meta-narrative which a study of all instances reveals. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:13[1] Arabic: alā. See note to 2:12.

2:14[1] Arabic: alladẖīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:14[2] Or adversaries (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:19[1] I.e. this is a second likeness, the first being at 2:17.

2:19[2] Lit.: darknesses.

2:19[3] Qur'anic definition: al kāfirūn. Typically rendered the unbelievers, the rejecters, or the infidels. Verses 2:8-20 focus upon a single term — al kāfirūn — and, according to my analysis, define it. To claim al kāfirūn as the unbelievers, the rejecters, or the infidels as per the Traditionalist's contention may be right in a highly specialised sense, but that sense is now long lost. The Qur'anic definition restores and revives the term fully. Of the terms defined in the first pages of al baqarah it is al kāfirūn which is treated most comprehensively; perhaps because it is precisely this category of person which is most pernicious and destructive. Verses 2:8-20, then, comprehensively fix the correct definition of al kāfirūn which may be summarised (based on the Qur'anic treatment) as follows:

- they claim to believe in God when they are not among those who truly believe
- they try to deceive both God and those who do believe
- they are themselves deceived
- they are diseased in heart
- they create corruption in the land while failing to see that they do so
- they have contempt for the faith of the generality of mankind
- they claim to believe and side with those who believe in God but, in fact, side with the sẖayṭāns; (that sẖayṭān treats of an adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC
- they are in possession of guidance yet reject it in favour of error
- they are blinded in darkness (due to the failure of the 'light' of their own making)
- the full power and majesty of true light puts them in fear of death
- their continued existence is by the grace of God alone

The Traditionalist's value of the unbelievers, the rejecters, or the infidels here, again, is not spectacularly wrong, but it is still wrong — and sufficiently wrong to matter. What the Traditionalist means by al kāfirūn — and what he wants the reader to infer — is one who rejects the religion of Islam. That religion is not native to the Qur'an and God did not oblige men to follow the religion today known as Islam since the Qur'an's own use of the word islām and conceits applied to the term subsequently are irreconcilable. Rather, God obliges men to follow guidance if they receive it (2:38). The entire point about al kāfirūn is that they are possessed of guidance; however, they are distinct from those who ignore warning in that al kāfirūn claim to believe and claim to be guided. One of the Traditionalist's mistakes regarding this category of men is that he identifies al kāfirūn as an external group of deniers and rejecters. This is incorrect; this category of men is an internal group, an insidious force within. A point consistently missed but revealed by following the Qur'anic definition is that al kāfirūn see themselves as righteous. They speak the language of religion and faith. But they refuse to follow guidance. Something close in English would be self-righteous; however, English is now degraded and this word has lost its primary meaning of one wise in his own conceits over the guidance of God and now means merely opinionated and moralistic, which sense is not equal to what is meant here. In the popular Christianised sense, Pharisees is close to what we are looking for. The word hypocrites also bears consideration, but is not fully correct. Generally, however, a hypocrite is just a toady: he pretends to believe what he does not; but he may or may not consider himself righteous. As defined by the Qur'an, al kāfirūn are a very particular type of hypocrite: people who both reject guidance and consider themselves virtuous. In short: al kāfirūn believe themselves followers of guidance, while actually following something else. All things considered, those who reject guidance while claiming virtue acceptably summarises the core concept; in the present edition I render more tersely as the false claimers of guidance throughout where the word occurs as a discrete unit (taking no object), which is how it is found here. As the reader proceeds, he will see this definition of (al) kāfirūn make resounding sense in contexts where the Traditionalist's assumed value falls flat. See Notepad II.

2:20[1] Lit.: stand.

2:21[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:22[1] Arabic: firāsh (pl. furush, afrisha) — couch; cushion, pillow; blanket, cover, spread; mattress; bed. The core and unifying sense of this word is of something accommodating which is spread out. Qur'anic imagery concerning the surface of the earth consistently references a flat expanse. This conception stands in direct contradiction to popular philosophies which contend that the waters of the oceans are convex and held against the surface of a sphere by dint of a theoretical force nowhere demonstrated by empirical experiment. Water has never been shown to lie at rest in any position other than flat. Railways, roads, canals, aircraft flight paths — i.e. those things men do in the real world — make no allowance for anything other than a flat surface. Opposed to what can be seen, measured and tested, we have claims which have much money, political will, and philosophical bias behind them, and which are promoted as fact to children before they have formed the ability to think, and which then receive much reinforcement from film and other media. Such assertions include Newton's famous thought experiment (i.e. interesting idea unproven in reality), Einstein's mathematical compositions (which are unproven hypotheses promoted today as fact) and NASA's grandiose claims (and questionable — sometimes laughable — CGI output). The best an intelligent individual can do in such circumstances is investigate and reflect upon such evidence as is around him, relying upon his own experience and reason.

2:22[2] Arabic: binā'. Under modern pressures many translators evade the plain sense of this word by employing words such as canopy — words which allow wiggle-room to help the broader sense to be bludgeoned into line with modern cosmological iconography. The plain and unadulterated sense of this word is building, structure, edifice. While the underlying verb does have in addition to the plain sense of to build the connotation of to raise, it implies something hard and made out of something solid. The noun binā' is the Arabic for masonry also. The word canopy in English has nothing in common with these concrete senses, and its use by translators is dishonest.

2:22[3] I.e. you know this to be the case (cf. 2:22, 2:42, 2:75, 2:146, 2:188, 3:71, 3:75, 3:78, 3:135, 8:27, 43:86, 58:14).

2:23[1] Arabic: sūrah. This word indicates eminence or degree or step or exalted rank. Moreover, such degrees or steps exist only within an integrated system. However, the word sūrah has become synonymous with Qur'anic chapter by dint of usage, and is typically used today in that sense exclusively. I do not believe that to be the primary sense. My understanding, based on the totality of instances in the Qur'an (see 2:23, 9:64, 9:86, 9:124, 9:127, 10:38, 11:13, 24:1, 47:20, 47:20), is that the meaning of sūrah is akin to order or teaching or political doctrine, and that the challenge the Qur'an makes 'to bring a sūrah the like thereof' relates to broad, integrated philosophical systems. Man strives on the basis of his own inclinations to create social and political systems — from democracy to 'Islam' to communism and libertarianism; the Qur'an's claim is that anything created by men will be inferior to that which God sent down. I leave the word untranslated throughout. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:23[2] Arabic: min dūni — in place of, besides, to the exclusion of, outside of, excluding, in preference to, other than, not. The use of besides can be problematic in English in some contexts due to its connotation of in addition to (e.g. besides reading, I listen to music) whereas what is meant across Qur'anic usage is something entirely different to or separate from. I am forced to render min dūni variously across the text by dint of what the English language will allow. However, in all cases the sense is that of exclusivity. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:23[3] See grammar note to 2:91.

2:24[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:24[2] Stones are mentioned, in my opinion, since they represent the last refuge of vanity. Memory fades and metal corrodes; man hopes that he will live on through his buildings and his monuments.

2:24[3] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii. This is one of the many places where the Traditionalist's preferred values for al kāfirūn (such as the unbelievers or infidels) make no sense. It is also interesting to note that Rabbinic Judaism has it that Mūsā received both the Torah and — to put it in Qur'anic parlance — 'the like thereof' (what Rabbinic Jews call the oral Torah — on which basis, at least in part, they ignore what they have of the Torah). In the case of the Qur'anic revelation, it is the Traditionalist who — while claiming to follow the Qur'an — most conspicuously follows something entirely different, something which he takes to be 'the like thereof', citing grounds which are themselves at odds with the Qur'an. By virtue of the fact that he has indeed attempted — and failed — to produce 'a sūrah the like thereof', the Traditionalist invites comparisons with those described at 2:23-24.

2:25[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:25[2] Arabic: mutashābih. Lit.: similar, resembling, by way of analogy or comparison; semblance. Muhammad Asad's comment on this point is interesting: [...]Various interpretations, some of them of an esoteric and highly speculative nature, have been given to this passage. For the manner in which I have translated it, I am indebted to Muhammad 'Abduh (in Manar I,232 f.), who interprets the phrase, "It is this that in days of yore was granted to us as our sustenance" as meaning: "It is this that we have been promised during our life on earth as a requital for faith and righteous deeds." In other words, man's actions and attitudes in this world will be mirrored in their "fruits", or consequences, in the life to come - as has been expressed elsewhere in the Qur'an in the verses, "And he who shall have done an atom's weight of good, shall behold it; and he who shall have done an atom's weight of evil, shall behold it" (99:7-8). As regards the reference to "spouses" in the next sentence, it is to be noted that the term zawj (of which azwaj is the plural) signifies either of the two components of a couple - that is, the male as well as the female.

2:26[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:26[2] Arabic: al ḥaqq. See Notepad XVII (al ḥaqq i.).

2:26[3] Arabic: alladhīna kafarū. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.i.

2:26[4] Qur'anic definition: fāsiqūn. Commonly translated as ungodly, evil-doers, etc., verse 2:27 contains what I take to be a fuller Qur'anic definition of this term. Among common translations, Saheeh International comes close with a value here of defiantly disobedient. However, I think a better value is perfidious and I follow this convention across this translation, allowing for variations of grammatical function. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad XI.vii.

2:27[1] There exists an ambiguity: does the pledge itself belong to God, or is it one which references God? Upon reviewing all instances of this phrase (2:27, 3:77, 6:152, 13:20, 13:25, 16:91, 16:95, 33:15) it is clear that what is meant is a covenant which God gives to — and is taken up by — man. I take this to reference al fātiḥah, the covenant which God gives to and takes from men. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:27[2] I.e. after they have confirmed their commitment to the agreement.

2:29[1] Arabic: sawwā also denotes making equal, creating or putting things on the same level.

2:29[2] It is my opinion that in addition to the plain sense, this may reference one of the following: 1. seven dimensions or levels including those of the atom, aether, light and spirit, which are themselves integrated and occupy the same physical space; 2. physical or metaphysical realms above this plane; 3. laws which inform the processes of life, such as the seven hermetical principles.

2:30[1] Arabic root: s-b-ḥ. The form II of this root is generally translated extol or glory — both of which are correct. However, this is not simply a mouthing of empty sentiments but an engaged consideration and expression of the majesty and wonder of that Being who created the heavens and the earth and everything within them, the function of which is to render to God that which is his due. See 87:1-5. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:34[2] Arabic: sajada. See Notepad IV.

2:34[3] Arabic: illā. Generally rendered save (as in except or excepting) and equivalents, I have translated in this context to leave open the question of whether Iblīs was an angel. See Article SJC.

2:34[4] A being who corresponds in his rebellious and proud state with the shayṭān. That shayṭān treats of an adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:34[5] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii. Contrary to the Traditionalist's understanding (which requires that al kāfirūn be rendered the rejecters or the disbelievers), nowhere does Iblīs reject God or disbelieve in God. Iblīs has face-to-face discussions with God (see 7:16, 15:39). That Iblīs spurns guidance while claiming virtue (which is the definition of al kāfirūn reached on the basis of 2:8-20 and the one referenced in shorter form in this translation) is in perfect keeping both with the current context and all contexts which treat of Iblīs.

2:35[1] Grammar: dual. What is clear from the Arabic but lost without labouring the point in English is that Ādam and his wife fell together. There is no sense in the Qur'an that Ādam was a victim of his wife's guile. Rather, the Qur'an states that it was Ādam who hearkened to the guile of the shayṭān (20:120). That shayṭān treats of an adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:38[1] Or when. Arabic: immā. At this place this word is generally rendered by translators when, or represented by other words which imply certainty of result. If that is the sense here, it is an anomaly since in all remaining instances in the text (7:115, 7:115, 9:106, 9:106, 10:46, 17:23, 17:28, 18:86, 18:86, 19:26, 19:75, 19:75, 20:65, 20:65, 23:93, 40:77, 41:36, 43:41, 47:4, 47:4, 76:3, 76:3) it tends not to carry that sense — as other translators generally demonstrate.

2:39[1] Arabic: alladhīna kafarū. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.i.

2:39[2] Arabic: āyāt. See Notepad VIII.

¶2.5

2:40[1] The person of Israel is typically identified with the Jacob of the Hebrew scriptures. While the Qur'an does not refute this, it also provides no explicit statement to that effect. See Notepad XV.

2:40[2] Lit.: My covenant.

2:40[3] Grammar: the verb is in the jussive mood which indicates an element of command; of contingency of the second clause upon the first. This nuance is routinely provided by translators by means of that or and or equivalents.

2:40[4] Lit.: your covenant.

2:41[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

2:41[2] Arabic: āyāt. See Notepad VIII.

2:42[3] I.e. if you know this to be the case (cf. 2:22, 2:42, 2:75, 2:146, 2:188, 3:71, 3:75, 3:78, 3:135, 8:27, 43:86, 58:14).

2:43[1] Arabic: aqīmū al ṣalāt. See note to 2:3; also Article SZC where discussion of the application of this term to the children of Israel is included.

2:43[2] Arabic: ātū al zakāt. Claimed by the Traditionalist as the imperative to pay an obligatory alms tax, all details pursuant to which are — by his own admission — not in the Qur'an, but which are presented by him as one of the principal tenets of the religion he promotes. Leaving aside the fact that the concept of an obligatory alms tax is nonsensical (since taxes are taken under compulsion whereas alms are given freely), one is expected to accept the Traditionalist's claim that al zakāt means a set tax on believers, and mentally ascribe that sense to the word where it occurs in a book in which not only is that assertion nowhere confirmed, there is no case in which the context unambiguously indicates such a meaning. Moreover, where the recipient of the Qur'an is asked about what one should give, no amount is fixed, and the clear implication is that giving is voluntary (2:215, 2:219). Certainly, the Qur'an exhorts believers to give charity (called ṣaḍaqah in the text), and to give of everything that God has provided, but such giving is voluntary. It is true that the Qur'an treats of amounts to be given in the case of war spoils. It also states that there is a due to be given on crops, but it neither fixes any amount nor employs al zakāt in that context (6:141). If one had never read any of the non-Qur'anic literature that has attached itself to the Qur'an subsequent to its revelation, it is impossible that one would arrive at the notion of a fixed-percentage annual payment on existing wealth for al zakāt, or that one could reach the precise value for it that the Traditionalist ascribes to it. Article SZC shows that the imperative ātū al zakāt is a generic term which comprises a number of forms of obligations, none of which coincides with the Traditionalist's assertions. The present collocation is found in this work as render the purity and zakāt as purity throughout. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:45[2] Qur'anic definition: al khāshiʿūn. Verse 2:46 furnishes the full Qur'anic definition of this term. I render this term throughout as per its dictionary definition (humble) but it is helpful to be aware of the Qur'anic distinction. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

¶2.6 2:47[1] At 2:49 there begins a series of thumbnail-sketch histories of the children of Israel each of which is introduced by the Arabic conjunction wa idh (found at 2:49, 2:50, 2:51, 2:54, 2:55, 2:58, 2:60, 2:61, 2:63, 2:67, 2:72, 2:83, 2:84, 2:93). Each instance refers back to this statement at 2:47. To be clear: from the Qur'anic evidence, God did not prefer the children of Israel 'above all mankind' for all time — although there will be those who will cite this verse outside of the broader context in support of that claim. The summaries which follow recount very specific times and ways in which God favoured the children of Israel, and how — as a rule — they spurned that favour. The Qur'anic position is the precise opposite of that claimed by racial supremacists: that there is no favouritism or special consideration with God on the Day of Judgment. All instances are identified throughout and reference this verse.

2:48[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:48[2] Muhammad Asad (himself a racial Jew) comments here: [...]an obvious allusion to the Christian doctrine of vicarious redemption as well as to the Jewish idea that "the chosen people" - as the Jews considered themselves - would be exempt from punishment on the Day of Judgment. Both these ideas are categorically refuted in the Qur'an.

2:49[1] I.e. And (remember My favour wherewith I favoured you) when[...]. Arabic: wa idh. This refers back to 2:47.

2:49[2] Arabic: firʿawn. This word is rendered as a proper name under the Arabia Felix thesis and as a title of royalty (i.e. Pharaoh) under the Egypt-Palestine thesis. However, beyond either thesis, there is strong internal support for treating firʿawn as a proper name and not a title; firstly, house (āl) is only found with proper names, never with titles (2:49, 2:50, 2:248, 2:248, 3:11, 3:33, 3:33, 4:54, 7:130, 7:141, 8:52, 8:54, 8:54, 12:6, 14:6, 15:59, 15:61, 19:6, 27:56, 28:8, 28:45, 34:13, 40:28, 40:45, 40:46, 54:34, 54:41); secondly, Firʿawn nowhere takes a definite article (cf. al ʿazīz or al malik). Were we not primed to think of Firʿawn as a particular type of king, one would not assume it from the Qur'an's presentation of the word. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad XVI.

2:50[1] I.e. And (remember My favour wherewith I favoured you) when[...]. Arabic: wa idh. This refers back to 2:47.

2:50[2] Arabic: firʿawn. See note to 2:49. This and similar statements make clear that the house — that is, the tribal family — of Firʿawn was drowned along with Firʿawn himself. This scenario ill fits the dominant Egypt-Palestine thesis. A ruler personally pursuing an enemy accompanied by his kin better fits a small tribal scenario. See Notepad XVI.

2:51[1] I.e. And (remember My favour wherewith I favoured you) when[...]. Arabic: wa idh. This refers back to 2:47.

2:51[2] Arabic: mūsā. Typically identified with the Moses of the Hebrew scriptures. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. See Notepad XV.

2:53[2] Arabic: al kitāb. See Notepad IX.ii.

2:53[3] Arabic: furqān. The root of this word conveys senses of separation, division, distinction, criterion and the like, particularly in determining true from false, right from wrong, good from bad. Lane (p. 2440) states 'Anything that makes a separation, or distinction, between truth and falsity[...] Proof, evidence, or demonstration'. This word is typically translated by means of criterion and cognates. I accept that meaning. However, as used in the Qur'an, furqān appears also to denote the division between the people of God and the world at large (as a result of the former accepting the imperatives given by God); between those who believe and those who reject. I render furqān as Division throughout in hope of conveying something of both the senses of criterion and separation. It is found at 2:53, 2:185, 3:4, 8:29, 8:41, 21:48, 25:1. The Traditionalist claims this word as a title of the Qur'an at 25:1. That view does not survive consideration of all contexts. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:54[1] I.e. And (remember My favour wherewith I favoured you) when[...]. Arabic: wa idh. This refers back to 2:47.

2:54[2] I have rendered literally. Arguments are made in favour of: Kill some among you (here: the guilty); cf. 2:54, 2:85, 4:29, 4:66.

2:61[2] Arabic: fūm. Understood variously as garlic, wheat, corn, or bread. See Lane, p. 2518. (I use corn in the English sense, not in the American sense of maize.)

2:61[3] Or (a) miṣr. Under the Egypt-Palestine thesis miṣr denotes Egypt (which word is now the name of that country in Arabic). Under the Arabia Felix thesis miṣr is a common noun denoting a trading station or citadel. By way of a window into the problems attending this word, the reader may be interested to know that here A. J. Arberry translates it Egypt, N. J. Dawood translates it some city and Saheeh International renders it [any] settlement. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad XVI.

2:62[4] Various groups have claimed to be the Sabaeans of the Qur'an historically, and have sought or received benefits from Muslim rulers as a consequence. Lane (p. 1650) associates the root from which Sabaeans is formed with those who apostatise, and with those who take another religion. This word is found at: 2:62, 5:69, 22:17.

2:63[1] I.e. And (remember My favour wherewith I favoured you) when[...]. Arabic: wa idh. This refers back to 2:47.

2:63[2] Arabic: ṭūr — fertile mount or mountain; a mountain that produces trees; Lane (p. 1942) is quite clear on this point. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:63[3] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:66[1] Lit.: between its hands. I understand this to mean here: what was at its time. This expression is typically translated variously across the text. I have elected here to follow the standard understandings in my translation and to confine my clarifications to the notes. Across all instances (2:66, 2:97, 2:255, 3:3, 3:50, 5:46, 5:46, 5:48, 6:92, 7:57, 10:37, 12:111, 19:64, 20:110, 21:28, 22:76, 34:12, 34:9, 34:31, 34:46, 35:31, 36:45, 46:30, 49:1, 57:12, 58:12, 58:13, 61:6, 66:8) it indicates one core sense: something between a range or span, subject to or within a (set) remit either of time, power, access, or attention. Holding to this core meaning, where it treats of time I understand it to mean of (or at) its (his) time; where it treats of power I understand it to mean under or in his (the) authority; where it treats of access I understand it to mean within its (his) grasp; where it treats of attention or relevance I understand it to mean within its scope. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. The exceptions — if one can call them that since they prove the rule — are 7:17, 13:11, 36:9, 41:14, 41:42, 46:21, 72:27. There the convention is not bayna yad- as here but min bayni yad-. In these cases the meaning is physical or temporal and means before. I include part of Muhammad Asad's comment regarding this expression for interest: Most of the commentators are of the opinion that ma bayna yadayhi - lit., "that which is between its hands" - denotes[...] "the revelations which came before it", i.e., before the Qur'an. This interpretation is not, however, entirely convincing. Although there is not the least doubt that[...] the pronominal ma refers to earlier revelations, and particularly the Bible (as is evident from the parallel use of the above expression in other Qur'anic passages), the idiomatic phrase ma bayna yadayhi does not, in itself, mean "that which came before it" - i.e., in time - but, rather[...] "that which lies open before it". [...]Now this, taken together (a) with the fact - frequently stressed in the Qur'an and since established by objective scholarship - that in the course of the millennia the Bible has been subjected to considerable and often arbitrary alteration, and (b) with the fact that many of the laws enunciated in the Qur'an differ from the laws of the Bible, brings us forcibly to the conclusion that the "confirmation" of the latter by the Qur'an can refer only to the basic truths still discernible in the Bible, and not to its time-bound legislation or to its present text - in other words, a confirmation of whatever was extant of its basic teachings at the time of the revelation of the Qur'an: and it is this that the phrase ma bayna yadayhi expresses in this context as well as in 5:46 and 5:48 or in 61:6 (where it refers to Jesus' confirming the truth of "whatever there still remained [i.e., in his lifetime] of the Torah").

2:68[1] Arabic: bayyana. See note to 2:69.

2:69[1] Arabic: bayyana. This form II verb can mean to clarify, to explain or to make plain. There is considerable overlap between these senses; however, given a comparison of all instances, to make plain fits the preponderance of cases, and in the interests of consistency that reading has been enforced where, as here, the verb is in the active voice. All such instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

¶2.9 2:72[1] I.e. And (remember My favour wherewith I favoured you) when[...]. Arabic: wa idh. This refers back to 2:47.

2:73[1] I.e. Strike it [the neck of a heifer] in some of them [cases of a killed soul]. Many interpretations of this verse exist, some highly subjective and fanciful. On the basis of my own investigations this statement connects most convincingly with Deut. 21:1-9 wherein is found the Mosaic law in a case of unresolved murder. The procedure given there is for the elders of the town nearest the location of the discovered corpse to strike off the head of a heifer at the site, state what facts are known — namely that they are not guilty — and wash their hands. The mention of the use of reason at the end of 2:73 corresponds both to the use thereof by the elders at Deut. 21:1-9 and to the fact that God gives 'life to the dead' and 'demonstrates his proofs' to us thereby; just as cases of murder may be established and resolved by the application of evidence and reason, so the fact of our own death and life thereafter is established by the same means. While I do not accept Muhammad Asad's view of this verse — and while I reject any reliance on ḥadīth out of hand — he contributes an intelligent point and makes it well, and I include it for the broader perspective of the interested student: The phrase idribuhu bi-baʿḍiha can be literally translated as "strike him [or "it"] with something of her [or "it"]" - and this possibility has given rise to the fanciful assertion by many commentators that the children of Israel were commanded to strike the corpse of the murdered man with some of the flesh of the sacrificed cow, whereupon he was miraculously restored to life and pointed out his murderer! Neither the Qur'an, nor any saying of the Prophet, nor even the Bible offers the slightest warrant for this highly imaginative explanation, which must, therefore, be rejected - quite apart from the fact that the pronoun hu in idribuhu has a masculine gender, while the noun nafs (here translated as "human being") is feminine in gender: from which it follows that the imperative idribuhu cannot possibly refer to nafs. On the other hand, the verb daraba (lit., "he struck") is very often used in a figurative or metonymic sense, as, for instance, in the expression daraba fi'l-ard ("he journeyed on earth"), or daraba 'sh-shay' bi'sh-shay' ("he mixed one thing with another thing"), or daraba mathal ("he coined a similitude" or "propounded a parable" or "gave an illustration"), or 'ala darb wahid ("similarly applied" or "in the same manner"), or duribat 'alayhim adh-dhillah ("humiliation was imposed on them" or "applied to them"), and so forth. Taking all this into account, I am of the opinion that the imperative idribuhu occurring in the above Qur'anic passage must be translated as "apply it" or "this" (referring, in this context, to the principle of communal responsibility). As for the feminine pronoun ha in ba'diha ("some of it"), it must necessarily relate to the nearest preceding feminine noun - that is, to the nafs that has been murdered, or the act of murder itself about which (fiha) the community disagreed. Thus, the phrase idribuhu bi-ba'diha may be suitably rendered as "apply this [principle] to some of those [cases of unresolved murder]": for it is obvious that the principle of communal responsibility for murder by a person or persons unknown can be applied only to some and not to all such cases.

2:79[3] This statement indicates some among the genuine children of Israel in the first instance, but by extension applies to later Jews, Christians and Muslims also. Those we call Jews invented other sources — some of them vile in the extreme — which they attribute to God, and compromised the integrity of the scriptures to which they lay claim centuries ago. Their creed today finds its orientation in the justification of a narrow (historically questionable) racial-supremacy cult, and hypocrisy and moral double standard — often no standard — made virtue. The Christians today have a patchwork religion comprised of some genuine words of ʿĪsā interwoven with the cosmology of Roman sun-worshipping pagans, the later theology of the originator of their religion (St. Paul), and (frequently) a form of demonic spirit-possession (often, I believe, actuated by means of the so-called Sinner's Prayer — a concept found nowhere in the Christian Bible) and one frequently mistaken by the recipient for the Holy Spirit. The Muslims have preserved their book at least. However, Muslim organisations are controlled at the top by the same people who control other religions, and what the laity follows in fact is writings no less garbled or corrupt than those of the Christians and the present-day Jews. It is also true — and certainly accepted here — that righteous men and women exist in many such groups, the guidance of God being neither limited to any group nor precluded from it.

2:80[1] I.e. limited.

2:81[1] Arabic: balā. This word occurs 22 times. Comparison and consideration of the complete set reveals that in each case it occurs in a context which treats of direct contact with God either on the Day of Judgment, prior to our earthly life, or through the intervention or offices of his angels, or of questions, information or witness relating to such an eventuality: 2:81, 2:112, 2:260, 3:76, 3:125, 6:30, 7:172, 16:28, 16:38, 34:3, 36:81, 39:59, 39:71, 40:50, 43:80, 46:33, 46:34, 57:14, 64:7, 67:9, 75:4, 84:15. It is my contention that this set forms a pan-textual reference list which can be drawn together to facilitate understanding of the subject range just noted. 2:87[2] Typically identified with that Jesus crucified under Pilate in the Christian extension of the Egypt-Palestine thesis; seen as a separate figure, the founder of the sect of the Christians, and predating by a number of centuries (though latterly conflated with) the central figure of modern Christology under certain aspects of the ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis, and as the son of Maryam, daughter of ʿImrān, sister of Mūsā within strands of thought associated with that thesis and with the Arabia Felix thesis. At the very least, one cannot but notice that the first reference to ʿĪsā in the text comes directly after mention of Mūsā. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.

2:87[3] Typically identified with the Mary of the dominant Christian extension of the Egypt-Palestine thesis; emerges as an entirely different figure who lived centuries prior under the ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis, and as the sister of Mūsā under aspects of the Arabia Felix thesis. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII and Notepad XV.

2:87[4] Arabic: farīq. We can know that the two types of 'faction' mentioned here do not reference messengers on two counts. Firstly, the Qur'an refers routinely to segments among the recipients of former scriptures in terms of faction (see 2:75, 2:85, 2:100, 2:101, 2:146, 3:23, 3:78, 3:100, 5:70, 33:26). Thus, wherever the word faction is used in their regard, it means a segment of their own population. In the case of both 2:87 and 5:70 the formulation is very specific: the reference in both cases directly prior to that of faction is of 'a messenger' — i.e. in the singular. Thus, in these two cases also faction must refer to the portions of the population which followed an individual messenger. Where killing of a plurality of men sent to such people is mentioned (see 2:61, 2:91, 3:21, 3:112, 3:181, 4:155) the word used in all cases is prophets (Arabic: anbiyā'). The office of prophet and that of messenger are distinct in the Qur'an, although combined on occasion in a single man. It is recommended that one carefully consider and compare the wording of 4:155 ('prophets') and 4:157 ('Messenger'). Cf. 58:21 and note thereto. I am indebted to Said Mirza for this point.

2:88[1] Arabic: bal. This particle defies uniform rendering into English by virtue of the range of functions it performs. Lane (p. 3039) has an excellent entry where he describes bal as primarily a particle of digression[...] it denotes emendation wherever it occurs in the case of negation or of affirmation. His comments go into some depth and explore the functions this particle performs in various contexts, and I refer the interested reader to those. I have been guided by Lane in terms of his analysis but not his usage in all cases. He was writing for a different time, and English has evolved since. However, by following Lane's explanation of the particle's function we can present a vehicle in the modern language for it. The primary function of bal is to interrupt narrative by means of negation or confirmation and then to digress (i.e. clarify along a new tack). The problem many translators have is that they use nay — which performs only some portion of the total requirement. By clinging to it they put themselves in a position where they are trying, as it were, to play tennis with no forehand and from the baseline only. What is required is a set phrase which does what Lane states, namely: denotes emendation wherever it occurs in the case of negation or of affirmation. The use of nay manages only the case of negation, and not always very well. What is needed is something equal to: be that as it may, the fact of the matter is[...]. Such a phrase performs the offices which Lane describes and can function equally in cases of negation or affirmation. The shortest route I know of in modern English to achieve this value is: the truth is,[...] which means 1. without doubt; certainly and 2. in reality. This, then, is the default and commonest rendering of bal here. However, there exist also, as Lane explains, several discrete applications of this particle. I evaluate and render these on a case-by-case basis in the light of Lane's broader comments as: nay, yet, but, or rather depending on the case. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:89[1] Arabic: kitāb. See Notepad IX.iii.

2:89[4] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii.

2:90[1] Qur'anic usage: baghy. While baghy is typically rendered outrage, infringement, wrong, injustice — and is used in those senses in Arabic today — the Qur'anic context indicates adherence to group taking precedence over duty to truth, which is the defining characteristic of sectarian zealotry. It is my contention that modern usage grew out of this core sense. See Notepad XII. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:91[4] See note to (al) mu'minūn at 8:2. Grammar: I use the archaic subjunctive mood because it conveys exactly the correct nuance. Shakespeare writes in Romeo and Juliet "Draw, if you be men". In such usage, the fact of those addressed seeming men is not in question; what is in question is their living up to what one expects of men (i.e. to show that they are men in fact). Qur'anic usage is the same, and it is worth the risk of burdening the reader with archaic usage to ensure that access to the underlying notion of praxis remains (i.e. the application of faith in deeds rather than mere verbal assent). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:96[2] See note to Arabic root: sh-r-k at 6:78 and Notepad VI. See also 2:102. As a side note, while the Hebrew scriptures support uncompromising monotheism, as one 'advances' in the religion we call Judaism and enters the esoteric and the Kabbalah, doctrine degrades into polytheism.

2:102[1] This is what many among those today called Jews (i.e. those who claim descendancy from the Hebrews) follow. This is the source of the Mystery School religions from which some strains of Kabbalah and Freemasonry descend. Such practices — despite what the initiates into them are told — are denials of God; while they may confer this-worldly advancement upon those who sell themselves for them, they end in damnation.

2:102[5] Or adversaries (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:102[6] Arabic: siḥr — sorcery. We tend to think of sorcery as something which defies the laws of so-called Nature; something fantastical, unnatural, and unhinged (often in a dark way) from what is real. While I do not wish to reject these connotations across the board, it is of note that sorcery features prominently among the accusations levelled against messengers by those who reject revelation (see examples at 10:2, 11:7, 28:48, 37:15, 38:4, 43:30, 46:7). While the import in those cases may be thought of as something closer to delusional or irrational in modern English, we should bear in mind the following: Mūsā and Hārūn are accused of sorcery by Fir'awn — whose very rule is characterised by sorcery. For Fir'awn — and those tyrants for whom Fir'awn is the archetype — sorcery is the means by which power is maintained. And for such men, sorcery is the collective term for the manipulation of the masses via the dark arts. In our day, those arts result in myths created and installed in the mind of the population via education, media, entertainment, controlled science, controlled religion, and are supported by other means such as planned debt, ignorance, solipsism and sickness, as well as the wholesale drugging of society. Together, these deliver the levers of control into the hands of the dark state. When Fir'awn accuses Mūsā and Hārūn of sorcery, he is interpreting what he sees as a power-play by them against his regime via the prism of his understanding and experience of the mechanics of power, and naturally sees them as a threat to that power. Thus, he regards them as usurpers who wish to supplant his sorcery with their own. He fails to understand that while his methods are based on deception, trickery, and manipulation, Mūsā and Hārūn are bringing real proofs from God (see 10:77).

2:102[7] Read both as two kings and as two angels (the difference in the diacritic marking is minimal). I previously opted for the former reading since it says what was sent down upon and not what was sent down by or with, but I have changed that view on discovery of the fact that, when read as the latter, the number of words in the Qur'an for satan / satans and number of words for angel / angels is equal at eighty-eight. However, I have no other information on this.

2:102[8] Arabic: bābil. Taken to be ancient Babylon, not the Babylon of the later Neo-Babylonian period. Sumer was one of the first systems we today recognise as a civilisation. It appeared, apparently from nowhere, with finances, taxation, religion, administration, and writing — that is, an entire control mechanism — in place. That matrix of centralised control was the forerunner of today's version.

2:102[9] Grammar: dual.

2:102[10] Grammar: dual.

2:102[11] Qur'anic usage: fitnah. This word has a range of dictionary definitions: trial; temptation; charm, seduction; sedition. Where a word has developed a range of senses, invariably those senses have emerged from a single core concept. The Traditionalist translator tends simply to pick whatever best suits the purposes of trying to create a connection between his religion and the contents of the Qur'an. Such an approach is unsatisfactory and, frankly, dishonest. Our task should be to uncover what the Qur'an means by the term and then to apply it consistently. With this in mind, at 2:102 we have the first instance in the text of fitnah. The usage indicates an obvious relationship between temptation and trial on the one hand and denial of faith on the other. The broader context of the local narrative confirms this. Earlier in the verse we are told Sulaymān '[...]denied not; but the satans denied'. At the end of the verse we find that such persons have individually sold their souls with cognisance of the consequences of their actions. The total context thus treats of denial of God (a damnable offence which sends one to Hell). To return to Hārūt and Mārūt: learning from them represents a means of denial (of God). If we accept this as the root sense, it is easy to see that the other senses (testing, trial; temptation; charm, seduction; sedition) relate to this core and — I infer — have grown out of it. I render in accordance with the root sense identified here of means of denial in all instances of the noun, and where the transitive verb occurs as to subject to means of denial. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse other than 5:49, 17:73, 51:13 which are rendered according to the requirements of their respective particular combinations of verb and preposition. That shayṭān treats of an adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:102[12] When a man sells his soul he must understand that he bears personal responsibility for the contract; the shayṭān needs a man's permission to proceed — and that is what is occurring here. The aspirant must himself insist upon being given the knowledge he seeks from the hierophant so that the shayṭān can — as he will — legitimately disown and condemn him on the Day of Judgment. That shayṭān treats of an adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:102[13] Grammar: dual.

2:102[14] I.e. knowledge of sorcery.

2:103[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:103[2] Whatever those who make up the Satanic 'elite' think they gain through their evil allegiances, the fact is that they lose what is better: recompense from God; and they have eternity in Hell, no matter what deceits they have been sold regarding their state following death. God is not mocked, and the Judgment is for all.

¶2.13

2:104[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:104[2] Arabic: rā'ina. This form III verb (here with the first person plural object pronoun meaning us) occurs just twice in the text — here and at 4:46. With a human object the verb can mean to observe, heed, respect, or to defer to (someone). The unifying sense is that of paying attention to and overseeing. The verbal noun is found at 28:23 denoting shepherds (i.e. men whose task it is to oversee and attend to their charges); cf. 23:8, 70:32.

2:104[3] Those who come to the Messenger — and today, to what he received and put his seal of approval to: the Qur'an — are to approach with the right attitude. We are to learn of God sincerely and take responsibility for embracing the Qur'an's principles and acting upon them. Those who refuse end badly as the remainder of the verse makes clear. See also 4:46.

2:106[1] Arabic: āya. See Notepad VIII. Proofs are found both in the created world and in revelation.

2:106[2] The only other instance of this verb is at 22:52.

2:107[1] Arabic: min dūni. See note to 2:23.

2:107[2] Translators break up this verse by means of a question mark in various places. I concur here with Hilali & Khan's placement.

2:108[1] Arabic: am. See note to 21:21.

2:108[2] I.e. if this is the claim: you think righteousness consists in seeking detailed answers from the Messenger; the corresponding answer follows at 2:109. Cf. the children of Israel's refusal to obey Mūsā on the basis of the claim that they needed more details after they had been given clear instructions (which episode gives its name to the present chapter). As is widely known, the Devil is in the details; that being the case, it should surprise no one that Talmudism is an ideology founded on details based in the 'wisdom' of the rabbis. The same is true of the primary foundational texts (i.e. ḥadīth) and standard legal process (fiqh) of Traditionalist Islam. The Qur'an, for its part, gives some principles and a very few laws, and simply requires that we apply our own reason and not claim the specifics we develop on that basis to be from God and set in stone.

2:109[1] Arabic: ahl kitāb. See Notepad IX.iv.

2:109[2] Arabic: kuffār. This in an emphatic noun based on the same root as the verb rendered here to deny and often translated infidels or unbelievers. What the Traditionalist understands by kuffār is: those who reject the cult he himself follows (or those aspects of the other Abrahamic religions he admits as valid). What is meant in the Qur'an is: those entrenched in rejection of God and who are in fundamental and complete denial of the Creator. The word in modern English which has all those connotations is atheists (which is free of the specialist and arbitrary connotation the Traditionalist ascribes to it) and I render accordingly throughout. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:109[3] Arabic: al ḥaqq. See Notepad XVII (al ḥaqq i.).

2:109[4] This is the response to the condition at 2:108. The point, in summary, being made here is this: 1. Only God guides (cf. 2:107). 2. If you want a high degree of specificity from God (2:108), then know that therein lies a danger of denial of God at the hands of many 'doctors of the Law', who want to return you to unbelief out of envy. The group called in the Arabic ahl kitāb is identified in the present work as any religious ruling class; at the time of the revelation it referred to those religious ruling classes connected with Judaic and Christian theologies only since no analogous group had yet coalesced and appended itself to the Qur'an. Today, the situation is different. The arguments forwarded by those called today Christians and Jews as the segment continues are made also — albeit in modified form — by their equivalents among those called Muslims. The point is, surely, that we are to be wary of such people and to rely upon primary revelation and God alone. We are not to war against the doctors of the Law as a class — we know there are some good men among them; rather, we are to 'forgive and forbear'. But I point out that, on the basis of my understanding of the Qur'an as a whole, that this does not mean we are to outsource our responsibility to learn and apply the Qur'an for ourselves to 'experts'. Rather, we are to rely on God alone, and to be wary of those who — experience shows — frequently arrogate to themselves or to specious sources that authority which belongs to God. In short, we are to do our due diligence and keep our wits about us.

2:112[1] Arabic: balā. See note to 2:81.

2:112[2] The Traditionalist typically interpolates his religion into the text at this point. Saheeh International has: Yes, [on the contrary], whoever submits his face [i.e., self] in Islām to Allāh[...], and Hilali & Khan have: Yes, but whoever submits his face (himself) to Allah (i.e. follows Allah's Religion of Islamic Monotheism)[...]. By way of contrast, non-sectarian A. J. Arberry renders close to the text, with: Nay, but whosoever submits his will to God[...]. Muhammad Asad, though essentially of the Traditionalist camp, has an interest in the Qur'anic text greater than its utility to promote a sectarian view, and renders here: Yea, indeed: everyone who surrenders his whole being unto God[...].

2:114[1] Arabic: masjid, masājid. See Notepad VII.i.

2:114[2] Arabic: wassa'ā fī kharābihā is an idiom meaning to strive to undermine (something). The point here — missed, perhaps predictably, by the Traditionalist given his love for particularising the general — is that masjid (of which masājid is the plural) has the literal meaning of place of submission or place of worship and, as used in the Qur'an, defies exclusive — or even general — identification with what he means by mosque. The Traditionalist compounds this initial error with its unavoidable corollary at this point: failure to grasp that the statement here serves as a counterpoint to what immediately precedes, which is that those who truly have 'nothing to stand upon' are those who undermine the places of worship of God (i.e. no matter what denomination they pertain to, or who worships within them). The religion the Traditionalist imposes upon the Qur'an is nowhere mentioned or indicated either here or anywhere else in the text; nor does the Qur'an propose that any religion (in the sense in which a religionist means the term) has a monopoly — or any superior claim — on God (a point implicit in the statement at 2:115). We are judged on the quality and extent of our faith and works, not sectarian affiliations.

2:118[6] Arabic: li qawmin. This is the first instance of this combination of preposition and noun in the text. The Arabic qawm means both people (generically) as well as crowd, but also tribe or nation. Clearly, there is some overlap between the senses. Certainly, the preponderance of instances of qawm across the text fall into the second category (cf. O my people, etc.). However, having reviewed all instances of li qawmin, the sense across that range is not that there exists a (single) people which bears the characteristics introduced by li qawmin, but rather that there exist people (in a collective sense, certainly, but comprising individuals) for whom what follows is true. Given the absence of an indefinite article in Arabic, a choice has to be made between for a people and for people in English, and something of the Arabic is lost no matter which side of the line one comes down on, but on balance the choice I have made seems the more correct one and I render li qawmin generally throughout as here. N. J. Dawood, for example, has clearly recognised the problem just summarised and attempted to resolve it by eliding (a) people altogether: But to those whose faith is firm we have[...].

2:120[2] Arabic: naṣārā. See Notepad XIII.ii.
2:120[3] Religious creeds tend often, when all other initiatives dry up, to coalesce around a notion of exceptionalism. Modern Christians are prolific and indefatigable in their claims for the prophet they call Jesus, and they assert a rigid form of exceptionalism on that basis. Modern Jews who claim the Hebrew scriptures do not proselytise other ethnic groups; yet almost all Jews (no matter what religious or political affiliation) demand that non-Jews accede to the core dogma of the Jewish religion which has it that Jews' abilities, sufferings, moral responsibility and destiny are exceptional. Those sects now called Islamic in their aggregate demonstrate most — if not all — the errors the Qur'an ascribes to earlier believers, whether it be abandoning revelation in favour of invented writing, or exaggerating the place of a prophet and looking for external saviours. There is no implication anywhere that such people will not be rewarded for their merits and good works, naturally.

2:122[1] See 2:47 where this formula occurs and the note thereto.
2:123[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:124[1] Arabic: wa idh. This instance of this conjunction clearly relates to and offsets that series of the same which precedes this point (found at 2:49, 2:50, 2:51, 2:54, 2:55, 2:58, 2:60, 2:61, 2:63, 2:67, 2:72, 2:83, 2:84, 2:93) which treats of disobedience on the part of the children of Israel.
2:124[2] Arabic: ibrāhim or ibrāhīm. Typically identified with the Abraham of the Hebrew scriptures. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. See Notepad XV.
2:124[3] Arabic: imām — leader; master; plumb line; standard, criterion; example, model.
2:124[4] Arabic: ẓālimūn. See note to 2:229.
2:125[1] Arabic: wa idh. See note to the beginning of 2:124.
2:125[2] Arabic: bayt — house, household. The Traditionalist has it that this is a reference to the box to which he bows in Mecca. I reject Mecca as a possible site of the pilgrimage referenced elsewhere in the Qur'an on the grounds of its inadmissibility historically, (and my book The God Protocol despatches the possibility of any city being both the place of origin of Muḥammad and the focus of a pilgrimage today on the basis of the Qur'an itself). I personally incline to the evidence in favour of Petra as the site of al masjid al ḥarām (see Notepad XVI). However, that original site — no matter where it once was — is now closed to those who hold to the Qur'an (see note to 9:28), so if a place of pilgrimage is what is referenced here, such can only be of historical interest today. We should also acknowledge the fact that the text at 2:125 simply says that God '[...]made the house a meeting place for mankind, and a place of security[...]' and that this statement is true when stripped of all sectarian investment.
2:125[3] Arabic: ittakhādha + min + object means to make something out of something. This construction is found at 3:140, 4:89, 4;89, 7:74, 16:67 and 16:68 and in each case has the meaning just stated. This construction does not occur in the Qur'an with any other sense.
2:125[4] Arabic: maqām. This word occurs at 2:125, 3:97, 5:107, 10:71, 14:14, 17:79, 19:73, 26:58, 27:39, 37:164, 44:26, 44:51, 55:46, 79:40 and means station (in the sense of location, which includes presence), and standing (in the sense of position or rank). Any deviation from these values for the sake of clarity in English is explained in the notes. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
2:125[5] Arabic: maqām ibrahīm. This collocation occurs twice: here and at 3:97. For the Traditionalist, it denotes a stone with two primitive footprints carved into its surface which functions as a piece of cultic theatre placed near his box at Mecca, a value I reject as an instance of obvious forgery and foolishness. See note to 9:28 and Notepad XVI.
2:125[6] Arabic: muṣallā. This is the only occurrence of this noun. The Traditionalist applies to this word the value of a place of prayer (and by prayer he means a ritual prayer found nowhere in the Qur'an). I am not prepared to accept this level of specificity in a case with no Qur'anic support. The facts we can support are these: muṣallā is a noun of place based on the ṣ-l-w root, a root which I connect with complete consistency with the concept of duty and generically with the obligation to serve God alone (as per 1:5). The Traditionalist, on the other hand, applies his assumptions to that root selectively to gain the results he needs. In this case, he regards muṣallā as a place of prayer at his box in Mecca. To me, the following two points seem reasonable precepts upon which to proceed: firstly, claims to certain, specialised knowledge of what muṣallā indicates should, given the absence of concrete data, be treated with caution; secondly, it is irresponsible and intellectually dishonest to promote or accept theology based on the specific interpretation of ambiguous or unproven statements (cf. 3:7). Of course, it may be that muṣallā does in fact denote a place in the sanctuary which Ibrāhim instituted; if it does, I cannot prove it Qur'anically — and nor can the Traditionalist. However, even if that still happens to be the case, I do know that the site of that sanctuary is not at Mecca; the evidence points to Petra, and that chapter of history is now closed, and was closed within the lifetime of the Messenger (see note to 9:28 and my book The God Protocol). That taken as given, the imperative at this verse indicates an object which it is both impossible to know with certainty and impossible to implement. Alternatively, if the house in the preceding clause simply means the house a man creates with his family as a monotheistic unit (which is undoubtedly what 2:125-141 treats of), then this is something we can adopt as a reasonable interpretation and apply to our lives. We can indeed aspire to the example of Ibrāhim in our marriages; to create families in which monotheism alone is practiced and promoted, even at the expense of our comfort in the broader society. It would be irresponsible to claim this as a central point of doctrine, and I do not do so. But since we know that the Traditionalist's cult is focused on an invalid location in any case (which makes null all and any claims he may make for this and related verses) it is not unreasonable to make enquiry of the Qur'an on a logical and contextual basis even in those places where the Traditionalist's claims are both highly specific and objectively false.

2:125[7] Arabic: ismā'īl. Typically identified with the Ishmael of the Hebrew scriptures. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. See Notepad XV.
2:125[8] Grammar: dual. The form II of the ṭ-h-r root occurs 9 times: 2:125, 3:42, 5:6, 5:41, 8:11, 9:103, 22:26, 33:33 and 74:4. The verse at 22:26 echoes that at 2:125. The remainder use this form of the ṭ-h-r root to denote cleansing people: hearts, bodies or clothes. Nowhere is it used with anything not directly connected to the human condition. The verse at 33:33 is particularly interesting in this regard as it mentions cleansing the people of the house. While these facts do not — taken in isolation — conclusively dispatch the Traditionalist's claims for this verse (namely, those of cleansing a temple of idols), they should be known by any serious student of the Qur'an.
2:125[9] Arabic: bayt — house, household. Again, this phrase may indeed relate to the cleansing of a particular physical house in which God was worshipped as the Traditionalist claims; I find this unlikely given the usage of the verb across the broader text, but I do not know and cannot prove a case one way or the other. And nor can the Traditionalist — at least not on the basis of Qur'anic facts. If his inclination happens to correspond with reality and what is meant here is, in fact, a physical house, the place which the verse references is now lost to us (since Petra is now a ruin, and 9:28 closes this chapter of history conclusively). However, the statement can also be understood in a way which does have Qur'anic support and which can serve as a lesson today if we take the house which Ibrāhim sought to purify to be that of his own family line (which is the point of the entire section at 2:125-141). Ibrāhīm is, by common consent, the great Patriarch and example of monotheistic belief. The job of his descendants was to be pure and take monotheism to the world. We can all act on that imperative.
2:125[10] Arabic: ṭawafa — to move about. This is the first instance of the ṭ-w-f root in the text. This root requires some attention since words built upon aspects of it comprise part of the Traditionalist's 'religious' vocabulary. I mean by 'religious' vocabulary that subset of the total Qur'anic lexicon to which the Traditionalist ascribes (usually inconsistently where such terms occur in multiple contexts) highly specialised definitions. He then trades on those highly specialised definitions to create in the minds of the ignorant, gullible, or inattentive the impression of correspondence between his religion (all details pursuant to which are taken from outside the Qur'an), and the Qur'anic text itself. Where a large number of contexts exist in the Qur'anic text (such as with ṣalāt, for example) his deceits are relatively easily exposed by inductive reasoning and methodical analysis. While words based on the ṭ-w-f root occur less frequently than those based on the root of ṣalāt, we still have something to work with and, as we shall see, on this occasion the Traditionalist's pre-existing requirements force him to open the hole which traps him. So what is the Traditionalist's pre-existing requirement? It is that he needs words based on this root — occasionally, but not consistently — to mean to perform circumambulation (by which term he means the execution of a solemn, religious rite comprising walking around more than one holy site, the details of which are nowhere in the Qur'an, but which he, the Traditionalist, says are important and claims to know). He must achieve this because he is committed to a broader event he calls ḥajj as one of the five pillars which comprise his religion (mention of said pillars is, likewise, nowhere found in the Qur'an), and his specialised value of circumambulation is claimed by him to be a component of that broader event. He must make this event and what he says are its components seem native to the Qur'anic text since he claims the Qur'an as the source document for his religion. Now that the Traditionalist's objective has been established, the reader can review what follows to form an opinion on how successful he has been in the case of the word under consideration. Words based on the ṭ-w-f root occur a total of 41 times in six forms. The forms which are of interest here are the form I verb (37:45, 43:71, 52:24, 55:44, 56:17, 68:19, 76:15, 76:19), the associated form I active participle (2:125, 7:201, 22:26, 68:19), and the form V verb (2:158, 22:29). The mundane (non-religious) meaning of the form I verb is to go about, walk about, travel about; with 'alā it means to circulate, make rounds, walk about ('alā among e.g. people). With bi it acquires other nuances such as to come to know; to familiarise oneself with. The form V verb is given similarly mundane senses by Wehr (p. 671) of to move about, rove, roam, wander, walk about. The form V occurs twice (2:158, 22:29), and both times in the context of what the Traditionalist calls ḥajj. Usually, a single context makes it easier to claim highly specific 'religious' values — here: to perform circumambulation — without challenge, but this instance causes the Traditionalist a problem, albeit one which is not apparent to the casual observer. While the verb and preposition are the same in each case — taṭawwafa (form V) plus bi — at 2:158 the object is dual, whereas at 22:29 the object is singular. Thus, no matter what one decides is the precise scenario in each case, given the Traditionalist's requirement of a highly specialised 'religious' sense in both cases, the net effect is a weakening of the power of his assertion, which is left potentially more vulnerable to ridicule than if he could point to a solidly uniform implementation for his value of religious circumambulation. However, his boat truly springs a leak at the point he extends his required meaning beyond the form V verb to include the form I participle at two places (2:125, 22:26). Doctrinally, he has no choice but to ascribe there the same specialist meaning he ascribes to the form V verb if he is to seem to achieve the outcome we identified above. This requirement necessitates admission of all instances of the form I verb (37:45, 43:71, 52:24, 55:44, 56:17, 68:19, 76:15, 76:19) and the two remaining instances of the form I participle (7:201, 68:19) to the dataset. Most people take no notice of such details, naturally. But once noticed they are deadly to the impression the Traditionalist is committed to achieving since detailed analysis of this broader dataset places his specialised definition at 2:125 and 22:26 in open conflict with a broader sampling of Qur'anic usage. In our own presentation of the text the mundane, non-specialised senses of all forms mentioned in this note fit naturally everywhere. And in those cases where the Traditionalist requires his specialised meaning, our mundane, non-specialised values comport fully with a scenario located at Petra where the visitor would be expected to walk about the numerous graves there to pay respects to his ancestors. While I think this is genuinely the meaning, I do not argue on that basis; partly because I do not need to (see note to 9:28), partly because I do not want my findings to be ascribed the force of doctrine by others, and partly because I do not think the precise details matter here (at least, they matter here no more than those of any other historical event the Qur'an mentions). I do, however, deny the Traditionalist the right to arrogate Qur'anic histories to his cult-building project and then to insist upon my compliance with his extraneous narratives on the basis of values one can prove he applies to Qur'anic terms on an entirely ad hoc basis. Also, the Traditionalist's assertions fail further when we consider Mecca as the place of pilgrimage on the basis of the Qur'anic text (see Notepad XVI). I do not contest this point with the Traditionalist in my translation, and confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances of the root covered by this note reference this verse.

2:125[13] Ibrāhim's obedience again contrasts with the recalcitrance of the children of Israel seen in preceding verses. Arabic: sajada. See Notepad IV.

2:126[1] Arabic: wa idh. See note to the beginning of 2:124.

2:126[2] The site at Petra operated as a sanctuary for millennia. Certain Christian denominations identify Petra as the place where Jews will seek refuge from the Antichrist.

2:127[1] Arabic: wa idh. See note to the beginning of 2:124.

2:127[2] The Traditionalist claims this verse to indicate the raising of physical foundations of a building; namely, that of a building in Mecca which he calls the kaʿba. I reject the possibility that he is factually correct out of hand given the impossibility of Mecca as the site of Ibrāhim's sanctuary (see Notepad XVI). However, some may decide that even though the Traditionalist is fixated upon the wrong location he is correct about the general sense of the verse so I will address the broader subject on the basis of etymology. This form of the root r-f-ʿ (which the Traditionalist takes here to mean to raise physically) occurs 22 times in the Qur'an (2:63, 2:93, 2:127, 2:253, 4:154, 4:158, 6:83, 6:165, 7:176, 12:76, 12:100, 13:2, 19:57, 24:36, 35:10, 43:32, 49:2, 55:7, 58:11, 79:28, 88:18, 94:4); leaving aside the verse here at 2:127 and that at 24:36 (both of which relate to bayt or its plural) nowhere does this verb form relate to the creation of physical structures by men. That is not to say that I claim that the Traditionalist's general thesis — location notwithstanding — is objectively wrong. I don't know. And, frankly, nor does he. My position is that to base core theological doctrine on ambiguous statements is not acceptable. What is acceptable in circumstances such as these is to look at the preponderance of Qur'anic evidence. And on that basis, I feel justified in asserting that the word here means to elevate and ascribing to qawāʿid its non-physical sense of precepts given a Qur'anic context which treats of Ibrāhim creating a family, a dynasty, a faith. I find it more reasonable given the preponderance of Qur'anic evidence that a man who had left his tribe (which represented his worldly status, support and protection) because he would not follow its cult of created idols would then begin a new tribe based on purely monotheistic precepts free of idolatry than I do that he would build a new idol in the desert and begin bowing down to that. I cannot prove objectively that my thesis is correct; I simply argue that it makes more sense, given the Qur'anic evidence, than popular and persistent alternate assertions. See note to qawāʿid which follows. In this edition, I give the point to the Traditionalist in my translation, and confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances of the root covered by this note reference this verse.

2:127[3] Arabic: qawāʿid. The Traditionalist has it that this word relates to a physical building and he interprets it as foundations in the sense of structural foundations. While I do not claim historical objectivity for my own understanding, I do know that the Traditionalist has none for his, at least as far as his narrative relates to the city of Mecca. What I argue is that the preponderance of Qur'anic evidence is against the Traditionalist's core claim at this point, no matter where located (see note to 9:28 and my book The God Protocol). This form of the q-ʿ-d root occurs three times in the Qur'an (2:127, 16:26 and 24:60). At 24:60 the word relates to women specifically and we can disregard it for the purposes of our discussion here. While the remaining verse at 16:26 does relate to the foundations of a building — a fact which might seem to lend support to the Traditionalist's view — it is an unassailable fact that 16:26 can only be interpreted (and is, in fact, translated by the Traditionalist himself) as a non-physical house. My argument, then, is: if qawāʿid unequivocally indicate the metaphorical foundations of a metaphorical house at 16:26, at 2:127 it makes more sense to assume an equivalent value for the word than it does to assign a contrary value to it on the basis of no hard internal evidence. The word qawāʿid legitimately means bases, groundwork, foundations and basic teachings (the latter found, for example, in the Arabic expression: qawāʿid ad-dīn). It is on the basis of these considerations that I understand qawāʿid here as precepts. In this edition, I give the point to the Traditionalist in my translation, and confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances of the root covered by this note reference this verse.

2:128[4] Arabic: manāsik. Occurring also at 2:200, 22:34 and 22:67, manāsik are taken by the Traditionalist to mean religious rites (the details of which he claims to know). Perhaps he really does. But if he does, he has no Qur'anic support for such claims; the fact is that the Qur'an leaves the case open. The injection of religious certitude drawn from other sources into matters which God left open has no validity in the methodology used here. Also of note is the fact that it says here manāsikanā (our rites). It does not say the rites for all time, or even your rites, but our rites (cf. 2:141). The only rite specifically given in the Qur'an is very simple and found at 22:34.

¶2.16 2:130[1] Any speculation on what constitutes the creed of Ibrāhim beyond what is found at the contexts in and surrounding 2:130, 2:135, 3:95, 4:125, 6:161,16:123 has no Qur'anic basis. At 2:131 we have the first instance: God told Ibrāhim to submit, and he did so; there is no mention of dogma, religion, priesthoods, specialist sects or anything of that kind. Whatever submit thou means, Ibrāhim knew enough to be able to act on that imperative.

2:131[1] This was the means by which Ibrāhim entered into submission to God. It is preceded by a clear statement at 2:130. One may benefit by comparing 2:129-130 with what the Traditionalist requires for entry into what he calls Islam.

2:132[4] Arabic: dīn. See Notepad V.

2:132[5] Predictably, the Traditionalist inserts his religion at this point; for example, Hilali & Khan render here: O my sons! Allah has chosen for you the (true) religion, then die not except in the Faith of Islam (as Muslims - Islamic Monotheism). See note to 2:131. See note to muslim at 2:128.

2:133[1] Arabic: am. See note to 21:21.

2:133[2] I.e. if this is the claim (that you were witnesses to this event or have definitive knowledge thereof).

2:133[3] This is in answer to the claim being addressed at the opening of this verse, i.e. this is what (in fact) happened when death was present with Yaʿqūb — the trappings of cultic religious specificity being conspicuous by their absence.

2:133[4] Arabic: isḥāq. Typically identified with the Isaac of the Hebrew scriptures. In this edition, as far as possible I render proper nouns in their accepted English formats, and confine additional interpretative comments to notes. See Notepad XV.

2:136[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

2:136[2] Arabic: al asbāṭ. This clause occurs at 2:136, 2:140, 3:84 and 4:163. While where this formula appears what follows it differs in each case, the leading statement and word order are stable: to Ibrāhim, and Ismāʿīl, and Isḥāq, and Yaʿqūb and al asbāṭ. The Arabic word asbāṭ has two possible meanings: grandsons or tribes. Traditionalist translations generally employ Tribes, but Saheeh International has attempted to embrace both senses with Descendants. I render Grandsons in all comparable cases, and I do so for the following reasons: 2:136 and 3:84 speak of what was sent down to or upon the categories listed, and we learn at 4:163 that al asbāṭ received waḥī (instruction or inspiration from God). We also know that among Ibrāhim's broader progeny there would be those who disregard God (2:124). Since we know that men who disregard God do not receive waḥī — and we know that there have been countless ungodly men among the 'Tribes' — it is not unreasonable to consider grandsons as the possible value. If we proceed on that basis, it is interesting to note that the formula always states Yaʿqūb and al asbāṭ. The principal figure, of course, is Ibrāhim. Yaʿqūb is himself a grandson of Ibrāhim via Isḥāq. However, (according to the Hebrew scriptures) Jacob had a twin brother Esau, and Abraham had other sons: Ishmael by Hagar and another six sons by Keturah: Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah. That all of Ibrāhim's grandsons — of whom Yaʿqūb was one, and which number included the sons of Ismāʿīl and Ibrāhim's other sons — received instruction from God is something I can accept as correct. That all members of the tribes descended from Yaʿqūb received instruction from God (and are de facto godly men) is something I know is not true. This point, incidentally, fits with the broader thesis that Ibrāhim's primary mission was to create a new line of men who would found families and tribes submitted to God alone. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. The word asbāṭ also occurs without the article at 7:160 and there clearly does denote tribes.

2:137[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

2:137[2] Translators — even fastidious ones such as A. J. Arberry — employ you rather than thee here. However, such distinctions are clear in Arabic, and Muhammad Asad renders correctly here using thee.

2:138[1] Instances where speech either trails off or is clipped through interruption are found at 2:138, 6:143, 6:144, 10:22, 12:94, 26:24, 26:26, 26:28, 43:9, 58:22, 77:11, 84:5. Here the fact of dispute (and, by implication, the presence of interruption) is found at 2:139.

2:138[2] This clearly indicates the Christians' baptism and the mikveh of the adherents of Judaism, both initiating rites involving water. However, the underlying nuances of the Arabic also reference the immersion of cloth during the process of dying fabric, so I have rendered it here as immersion since this encompasses both senses. The Qur'an does not decry the rites themselves; it directs the attention away from the details of religion and towards God — a point which sets up what follows.

2:140[1] Arabic: am. See note to 21:21. Unlike most translators, I treat this verse as a separate speech from what precedes.
2:140[2] Arabic: al asbāṭ. The grandsons of Ibrāhīm. See note to 2:136.
2:140[3] Understood here as those thought of today as Jews by faith, but not necessarily of Israelite descent. See Notepad XIII.i.
2:140[4] I.e. if that is your claim. The answer follows. Arabic: naṣārā. See Notepad XIII.ii.
2:140[5] I.e. who is more unjust than one who persists with something he knows to be untrue in his faith?

¶2.17 2:142[1] Arabic: qiblah. Whereas qiblah can mean focus or direction or general course (and such a reading fits the context), the Traditionalist inserts — and insists upon — a highly subjective, specialised and cultic value for qiblah, that of direction of prayer. This value is not sustained by Qur'anic usage and context; rather, it is antagonistic to both. For example, what directly follows talks of 'guidance' and a 'straight path' — both of which are general moral, not physical concepts; yet the Traditionalist claims qiblah to have a highly specific and physical connotation. Here and in the verses which follow, bowing is nowhere mentioned and the Traditionalist cannot even point to his value for ṣalāt. Rather, the context dismisses adherence to assumption and dogma (2:140) and emphasises the importance of individual responsibility over merits of group membership or precedent (2:141). In the only other context in which it occurs (10:87), qiblah can only sensibly mean focus, purpose, goal, course or direction, that to which one directs one's attention — which are acceptable values for the term — and is often rendered there along those lines by the Traditionalist. I stand by my principle of not allowing subjective, specialised values to supplant established common meanings, and render qiblah here accordingly as course here and as destination at 10:87. It is true historically that Muslims have built places of worship and that those places face a number of directions and that each instance of such a direction is today called a qiblah. These facts are not in question; the question is whether such a value can be ascribed to the Qur'an's use of this word — and on the basis of its contents and contexts, it cannot.
2:142[2] I.e. all things belong to God.
2:142[3] I.e. God is not limited by man's understanding of what constitutes religious rectitude.
2:143[1] I.e. by the fact that God guides whom he wills to a straight path.
2:143[2] According to the Qur'an, then, this is the purpose we are to fulfil: to pass on what the Messenger brought to mankind; religion (in terms of dogma and rite) is absent throughout.
2:143[3] Arabic: qiblah. See also 10:87.
2:143[4] I.e. whatever the Messenger formerly did and followed.
2:143[5] I.e. returns whence he came.
2:144[1] Lit.: in. A. J. Arberry renders thus: We have seen thee turning thy face about in the heaven[...]. The context, as I understand it, is of a man searching the heavens for his purpose: where to direct his focus, his energy? In my understanding, the answer is that the Messenger was to focus his proselytising campaign on the (then existing) centre of al masjid al ḥarām which was the place at which all the peoples of the region gathered on a regular basis (see note to 9:28). For the Traditionalist, it is a question of where to face when executing a prayer regime he cannot point to in the Qur'an, and which is not found in the present context.
2:144[2] Arabic: qiblah. See also 10:87.
2:144[3] Arabic: wajh. This denotes both the physical face and the personality; the true person; the intention.
2:144[4] Arabic: shaṭr. This word — and the root thereof — occurs only five times in the Qur'an: twice here at 2:144, once at 2:149, and twice more in a repetition of the same notion at 2:150. Clearly, that the same idea is repeated five times in such a small space indicates its importance. The question is: what does it mean? The Traditionalist, as we know, insists upon a requirement here to stand and bow in the direction of a building five times a day in a set of rituals he admits are found nowhere in the Qur'an. However, neither prayer nor rituals of any kind are mentioned in the segment. Much closer to the actual import, I would assert, is the following: we know from clear statements in the Qur'an that the Messenger and those with him were called upon to witness to the people of that time and place, to call them to God alone, and to warn them of the fate of the communities which had previously rejected the men God sent to warn them. The Arabs of the time met together regularly at al masjid al ḥarām. That al masjid al ḥarām should be made the focus of Muḥammad's mission is logical, since it was there that he could be most effective. The mission to al masjid al ḥarām was completed in the time of the Messenger (see 2:177 and 9:28 and related notes, as well as note below and my book The God Protocol).
2:144[5] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii. The place known as al masjid al ḥarām denotes a physical precinct to which Arab tribes performed a pilgrimage to worship, to visit and bury their dead, to trade, and to meet and to talk; that location was not at Mecca, but more likely at Petra in modern-day Jordan (see Notepad XVI). There is no further obligation connected with al masjid al ḥarām in any case since the Qur'an clearly indicates the end of its use (see 9:28 and related notes and my book The God Protocol). The focus upon that place was the obligation upon the Messenger for the duration of his mission. However, that mission is now closed (cf. 2:141); today, its narration simply represents one of the many historical lessons found within the Qur'an, the delivery and preservation of which comprised the Messenger's broader task.

2:144[8] I.e. the call to monotheism and repentance which was the principal task of the Messenger at al masjid al ḥarām — and is the obligation of all those given the Writ (cf. 3:187).

2:146[3] I.e. the call to monotheism and repentance which was the principal task of the Messenger at al masjid al ḥarām — and which is the obligation of all those given the Writ (cf. 3:187). This object pronoun is claimed here by the Traditionalist to reference the Messenger himself; to me, this is not borne out by the context.

2:146[4] Cf. 6:20.
2:146[5] Arabic: al ḥaqq. See Notepad XVII (al ḥaqq i.).
2:146[6] I.e. they know this to be the case (cf. 2:22, 2:42, 2:75, 2:146, 2:188, 3:71, 3:75, 3:78, 3:135, 8:27, 43:86, 58:14).
2:147[1] Arabic: al ḥaqq. See Notepad XVII (al ḥaqq i.).

¶2.18 2:149[1] Arabic: min ḥaythu. This adverbial convention occurs at 2:149, 2:150, 2:191, 2:199, 2:222, 7:19, 7:27, 7:182, 12:68, 16:26, 16:45, 39:25, 59:2, 65:3, 65:6, 68:44. Comparison of all instances reveals it to have two main functions: 1. from wheresover, from whence, whence (e.g. 2:149, 2:150, 2:191), 2. in what manner; in accordance with how; in what manner it be that (e.g. 2:222, 12:68, 65:5). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
2:149[2] Arabic: wajh. See 2:144.
2:149[3] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii.
2:149[4] I.e. the call to monotheism and repentance which was the principal task of the Messenger at al masjid al ḥarām — and which is the obligation of all those given the Writ (cf. 3:187).

2:150[2] Arabic: wajh. See 2:144.
2:150[3] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii.
2:150[4] Arabic: ḥujja - argument (as in justification or claim in a court or elsewhere). The focus on the inviolable place of worship (al masjid al ḥarām) was in order to warn and to exhort (or to use modern Christian parlance, to deliver one's soul to) those who were either ignorant of God or in rebellion against him. Once warned, people were identified on the basis of their response and – from that point onwards — culpable. See also my work The God Protocol.

2:151[1] Arabic: āyāt. See Notepad VIII.
2:151[2] Arabic: zakkā. See note to 2:129.
2:151[3] Arabic: al kitāb. See Notepad IX.ii.
2:151[4] See note to wisdom (ḥikma) at 33:34.
2:151[5] A messenger — by definition — is one who brings a message. In the case of Muḥammad, that message is the Qur'an. Whatever is said about Muḥammad by others and then ascribed to him does not form part of the message Muḥammad was given. It is hearsay, and is something he never saw or confirmed. I mention this at this point since much is claimed for the word wisdom here by the Traditionalist in order to inveigle the seeker into following something other than what Muḥammad was given. See note to wisdom (ḥikma) at 33:34.
2:152[1] This corresponds to the argument which begins in the previous verse, and the 'so' here carries the force of likewise or therefore or accordingly.
2:152[2] I.e. not only bear in mind, but bear witness to the message of God and keep his laws.

¶2.19 2:153[1] Arabic: allaḏhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.
2:153[2] Arabic: al ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. One notes that both al ṣabr (patience) and al ṣalāt are objects of the same verb in this verse. Whereas the Traditionalist insists upon a highly specific value for al ṣalāt he fully allows that the meaning of al ṣabr depends upon circumstances and context. In summary, he acknowledges al ṣabr here as a generic noun, but requires a high level of specificity in the case of al ṣalāt. Without such inconsistent and arbitrary treatment of the text, his cult falls apart. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC.
2:153[3] Arabic: al ṣābirūn. See note to 2:155.
2:154[1] Arabic: bal. See note to 2:88.
2:155[1] Qur'anic definition: al ṣābirūn. Typically rendered (and rendered here) the patient, the present context provides the fuller Qur'anic definition: those who, when calamity befalls them, say: We belong to God, and to him are we returning. This refers not only to what one says verbally, but to what one's actions and demeanour imply, as well as to one's philosophy and doctrine. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
2:157[1] Arabic: ṣalawāt — plural of ṣalāt; i.e. such duties as are incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. The Traditionalist abandons his value of ritual prayer for ṣalāt (pl. ṣalawāt) at this point in favour of blessings. The value I demonstrate in the broader work of duties for ṣalawāt requires no adjustment. The verse here simply tells us that God has committed himself to certain duties with respect to those who remain steadfast and faithful in the face of hardship. God's duties are his part of the initial covenant found in al fātiḥah and summarised at 1:6-7.
2:158[1] al ṣafā and al marwa occur only once each in the text which fact makes them vulnerable to specious interpretation. Here, somewhat predictably, the Traditionalist makes highly specialised claims for his religion (that the two words in question represent rock outcrops at al masjid al ḥarām, and that pilgrims historically walked between these two rock outcrops for some purely religious reason; and that one who accepts the Qur'an should do likewise; and that he, the Traditionalist, knows how this should be done). His claims are without foundation in the Qur'an and can in no way be verified on the basis of its text — a fact which the Traditionalist knows and utilises to gain leverage for his broader claims. I cannot definitely prove that he is wrong in his claims for al ṣafā and al marwa. It is impossible to prove a negative. Therefore, in the interests of intellectual integrity, I should allow that he might be right: perhaps al ṣafā and al marwa do indeed indicate two small rock outcrops — bereft of Qur'anic substantiation though the assertion is. I admit all manner of things I cannot disprove as abstract possibilities, and I have no reason not to extend the same allowance to the Traditionalist's claim here. I make no doctrinal claim for the thesis which follows — in the same way as I deny the Traditionalist the right to impose a theological construct upon me by his reading of this point. My case for the meaning of al ṣafā and al marwa is this: we should remember that the Qur'anic text we read today contains diacritic and other textual accoutrements which are interpretive in nature. This is not unusual for religious texts written in Semitic languages, which are deficient in certain markings in their simplest written forms. Hebrew texts have likewise passed through a process to clarify and standardise their readings. In the earliest Qur'anic text such items as short vowels, *hamza*s and *shadda*s were not marked, or were marked inconsistently. This means that in the original unadorned text the two words in question read -lṣfā and -lmrwh. These can acceptably be pointed as -lṣafā' and -lmurū'ah, which yields the values felicity and manly generosity respectively, which is what I incline towards, absent better information. These values make sense to me; the Traditionalist's assumptions, frankly, do not. I leave these two values untranslated. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol).
2:158[2] Arabic: sha'ā'ir allah — the tokens of God. The Traditionalist has it that 'the tokens of God' (2:158, 5:2, 22:32, 22:36) are something particular and vital to his religion. Here, he would have sha'ā'ir allah be two outcrops which he himself has identified, and for which he can provide no Qur'anic proof (see note above). Outside the present context, he is keen to assert sha'ā'ir allah as animals to be sacrificed as part of rites he himself acknowledges to be absent from the Qur'an (see notes to 22:30 and 22:32). A token is something which indicates the existence of something else. The plain meaning of 'the tokens of God' is those things which indicate the existence of God. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:158[3] Arabic: ḥajja al bayt. This is the only instance of the verb ḥajja and it occurs in the past tense. The Traditionalist claims, on the basis of no Qur'anic evidence, that ḥajja al bayt means, in effect, perform a set of pilgrimage rites (found nowhere in the Qur'an) at a religious centre (for which there is no genuine Qur'anic support) in Mecca — a city which, according to Dan Gibson (Quranic Geography, 2011), does not exist on any map until 900 CE. What the text actually says is to 'ḥajj' the house. I accept that the noun ḥajj denotes a pilgrimage in the Qur'an because it is an established historical fact that annual pilgrimages were a feature of life in the region (i.e. to Petra), and because the noun ḥajj is used in all cases in the Qur'an in support of that sense. However, what the reader without access to Arabic may not know is that the root ḥ-j-j denotes debate or argument and is commonly used in the Qur'an in those senses (form III verb: 2:76, 2:139, 2:258, 3:20, 3:61, 3:65, 3:66, 3:73, 6:80, 6:80, 42:16; form VI verb: 40:47; noun: 2:150, 4:165, 6:83, 6:149, 42:15, 42:16, 45:25). While I do not contend that pilgrimage (ḥajj) as a noun and argument or debate are synonymous, it is beyond question that there is a strong etymological connection between them in Arabic generally, and in the Qur'anic treatment of verbs and nouns based on the ḥ-j-j root specifically. This fact suggests that the pilgrimage was — at least in part — an occasion for debate among those who attended. Rather than attempt to prove that ḥajja al bayt means to debate the house (a point which I can argue, but cannot definitively prove) I have defaulted to the Traditionalist's own reading since one can safely concede the point to him to no effect given that al masjid al ḥarām — no matter where located — has long been closed to those who follow the Qur'an as a place of pilgrimage (see note to 9:28).

2:158[4] Arabic: 'amara. The form VIII of the verb 'amara occurs only once in the text. This makes its value difficult to identify on the basis of pan-textual usage. This instance of the verb is often given an acceptable, though arbitrarily-chosen value by the Traditionalist (to visit), a claim which is then developed and extended into a religious nomenclature for which he has no Qur'anic basis. However, Lane lists the meaning of this verb as to aim at or to purpose (p. 2154). But since I cannot form a strong case for this meaning given the paucity of instances in the text, I have erred on the side of caution and followed the Traditionalist's predilection. Again, since the locale is held to be al masjid al ḥarām it does not matter particularly what this instance of 'amara means since al masjid al ḥarām is closed as a place of pilgrimage to those who follow the Qur'an (see 9:28) and the verse is now of a historical or analogous value only.

2:158[5] Arabic: junāḥ. See Notepad XI.ii.

2:158[6] Arabic: taṭawwafa (form V). See note to 2:125.

2:158[7] Grammar: dual; i.e. (as I argue above) between felicity and manly generosity. This was the example of Ibrāhīm in his dealings with his father's household and people. He did not become shrill or violent. He retained humour and chivalry in his dealings as far as he could without compromising the principle of duty to God.

2:159[1] Cf. 2:143; 2:150-152. Our job is not to claim a religion found nowhere in the revelation of God. Rather, it is to bear witness to the veracity of the revelation of God and the few, simple laws held therein; it is to give both good news and warning to our societies (see my book The God Protocol for much more on this). The three so-called major monotheistic religions are themselves monuments to men's resolute, institutionalised refusal to implement God's imperative across the ages; rather, they have built buildings, created racial or factional cabals, and propagated doctrines based in sources other than the revelations the messengers themselves brought.

2:177[1] Unlike the ambiguous statements (cf. 2:144) which the Traditionalist bludgeons into conformity with his assumptions to achieve support for a religion nowhere found in the Qur'an, the opening statement at

2:177 is explicit and admits of no more than one interpretation. This should be sufficient evidence — at least for those who wish to be guided by what the Qur'an teaches — that the idea of facing a particular direction for the purposes of prayer is at odds with the teaching of the Qur'an.

Where it appears as the adverbial phrases bil ma'rūf or bi ma'rūf it is rendered throughout according to what is fitting. This reading is consonant with the Traditionalist's typical translation (although perhaps not with his application). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:182[1] Arabic: khāfa — to fear. The verb khāfa as used in the Qur'an frequently bears a connotation of to have reason to fear. The point is subtle in many cases. However, an important nuance is lost if one overlooks this aspect of the usage in all cases. All instances of this form I verb are found at 2:182, 2:229, 2:239, 3:175, 3:175, 4:3, 4:3, 4:9, 4:34, 4:35, 4:101, 4:128, 5:23, 5:28, 5:54, 5:94, 5:108, 6:15, 6:51, 6:80, 6:81, 6:81, 7:59, 8:26, 8:48, 8:58, 9:28, 10:15, 11:3, 11:26, 11:70, 11:84, 11:103, 12:13, 13:21, 14:14, 14:14, 16:50, 17:57, 19:5, 19:45, 20:21, 20:45, 20:46, 20:68, 20:77, 20:112, 24:37, 24:50, 26:12, 26:14, 26:21, 26:135, 27:10, 27:10, 28:7, 28:7, 28:25, 28:31, 28:33, 28:34, 29:33, 30:28, 38:22, 39:13, 40:26, 40:30, 40:32, 41:30, 46:21, 48:27, 50:45, 51:28, 51:37, 55:46, 59:16, 72:13, 74:53, 76:7, 76:10, 79:40, 91:15. A note referencing this verse is found where the nuance outlined above is significant.

2:183[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:183[2] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:184[1] In some cases the number is known, such as for certain types of penance; in others, a man is to decide for himself. The Traditionalist takes this as his cue to assert very specific numbers of days which originate outside the Qur'an.

2:184[2] I.e. the required days can be postponed until one is neither sick nor on a journey.

2:184[3] I.e. able to fast (but do not). The verb is 'ṭāqa and with a direct object as here means to be able to do (something) or to be able to bear (something). The import is clearly that the obligation to resort to a redemption for fasting is beholden only upon those who could fast but do not. It follows that those who are unable to fast (e.g. through immaturity, illness, pregnancy, or infirmity) are under no obligation to redeem the fast by means of charity.

2:185[1] Only if one takes ramaḍān to be a proper noun (which I do not) should shahr here take the definite article in English (for more, see notes below).

2:185[2] Arabic: shahr — moon, month.

2:185[3] Arabic: ramaḍān. The word ramaḍān means burning, vehemently hot, or vehemently heated (of the ground under a hot sun). It also denotes vehemence of action (lit.: of the falling) of the sun upon the stones and sand, etc.; the burning and intense heat of summer. The point being made, surely, is that the severity of heat in any month is not a reason to omit to fast (see further notes to this verse below). This is the only occurrence of this word (indeed, of this root) in the text, which makes it vulnerable to highly specialised claims by the Traditionalist in support of his religion.

2:185[4] Arabic: qur'ān — reading, recital, recitation, something which is read out.

2:185[5] Sc. which has now reached you. Arabic: furqān. In the Qur'an, furqān has a connotation of division between the people of God and the world at large; those who believe and those who reject. See note to 2:53.

2:185[6] Arabic: shahr — moon, month. Here, the Traditionalist both claims that the month referred to here is (also) ramaḍān as per the opening segment of the verse (although that is not what the text says), and that he knows when a month called ramaḍān occurs (although, ramaḍān means burning heat, and according to his system, the month today called ramaḍān falls right across the annual calendar).

2:185[7] The verb ṣāma takes it as a direct object. It is clearly a time phrase since if it denoted fasting from a thing a preposition would indicate that. However, nouns indicating time (day, hour, etc.) when they appear with no preposition indicate on or in (cf. on the day, in the hour). They do not indicate over the course of. Lane (p. 1759) feels he needs to overcome this point explicitly and states that ṣāma ashshuhra (which is the form here) actually means ṣāma fī ashshuhra. What he is trying to do is bring what the Qur'an says (let him fast in it) into line with Traditionalist dogma (let him fast during or over the course of it). It is a difficult concept for certain mentalities to grasp, but the requirement of fasting at 2:185 is the same as that of giving (see Article SZC), or of dowries, good works and other such things: you have to give something (here: fast each month), but how much you give is up to you.

2:185[8] The facts as found in the text are: 1. the Qur'an was sent down in a particular moon (one characterised as ramaḍān); 2. if we witness the month (i.e. any month) we are to fast in it (i.e. that month). The fact is that the text does not say fast during or on or in a month called ramaḍān.

2:185[9] Numbers of days for fasting are mentioned in the Qur'an, but none of them comport with the Traditionalist's requirement for his religion. The nearest mention of such numbers is at 2:196.

2:185[10] This is the same provision as that at 2:184.
2:186[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.
2:186[2] It is my opinion that the placement of this verse itself indicates that fasting is a way to draw closer to God.
2:187[1] Arabic: bāshara. The reader may be interested to know that the root of this verb is the same as that rendered throughout give (glad) tidings. There is in the Arabic an underlying sense of bringing pleasure and of joy in the verb here which my powers of English are not equal to rendering in my native language with a comparable range of associations.
2:187[2] I.e. the moment at which threads of different colours may be distinguished by the light of dawn.
2:187[3] I was of the opinion for some time that layl meant only dark night. However, at 79:29 we read that God made dark its night. From this, I infer that since night can be darkened, night must exist in states lighter than that of dark. On that basis, I take night to begin the moment the sun ceases to be visible above the horizon; but God knows best.
2:187[4] Cf. 2:197. One should appreciate that the Qur'anic culture is one where the mosque is the centre of the cultural, devotional and — to some considerable extent — economic life of the community. It is my opinion that this directive anticipates the time when mosques came to form an archipelago of safe places; the first port of call for a Muslim in an unfamiliar town and, often, a place where a traveller might both eat and sleep.
2:187[5] Arabic: 'akafa. — to be devoted (to), to remain (in or at). See note to 22:25.
2:187[6] Arabic: masjid, masājid. See Notepad VII.i.
2:187[7] Arabic: bayyana. See note to 2:69.
2:187[8] Arabic: āyāt. See Notepad VIII.
2:187[9] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:188[1] Lit.: and but means neither under the influence of the original negative imperative in the preceding clause.
2:188[2] The root sense here is to dangle, to drop, to lower. It is found at 12:19 also in the context of lowering (a bucket into a well). Perhaps to angle (for favour) is close to the sense here.
2:188[3] Arabic: ithm. See Notepad XI.i.
2:188[4] I.e. you know this to be the case (cf. 2:22, 2:42, 2:75, 2:146, 2:188, 3:71, 3:75, 3:78, 3:135, 8:27, 43:86, 58:14).

2:189[1] Arabic: hilāl (sg.) ahilla, ahālīl (pl.) — new moon; half-moon, crescent moon (Wehr, p. 1208). The emphasis is typically placed on the new moon here, but the word has a multiplicity of applications, which fact means that it is best rendered as does N. J. Dawood as phases of the moon.
2:189[2] Arabic: ḥajj. See note to 2:158, 9:28 and Notepad XVI. Since al masjid al ḥarām was closed in the time of the revelation a modern application is not possible and such portions of the Qur'an provide us today with historical background and moral and spiritual principles only.
2:189[3] This phrase is figurative and means: go about things in the right (i.e. open, above-board) way.
2:189[4] Sc. the verse at 2:177. This refrain serves as a shorthand reminder of — and artery route back to — the totality of the seminal verse at 2:177 which identifies what our core business is to be.
2:189[5] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:189[6] I.e. in the correct and proper way.
2:189[7] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:190[1] In terms of strategy, a defensive war is not only morally superior, it is typically the most efficient and effective.
2:191[1] I.e. those who have elected to fight you.
2:191[2] Arabic: min ḥaythu. See note to 2:149.
2:191[3] Arabic: fitnah. See note to 2:102.
2:191[4] I.e. damnation through denial of God is worse than killing and being killed.
2:191[5] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii. See note to 2:158, 9:28 and Notepad XVI. Since a modern application is not possible, such portions of the Qur'an provide us today with historical background and moral and spiritual principles only.
2:191[6] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii.
2:193[1] Arabic: fitnah. See note to 2:102.
2:193[2] Arabic: dīn. See Notepad V; i.e. your doctrine. Such war is sanctioned only when outsiders choose to impose their faith — or lack thereof — upon the believers. We have no business imposing our faith on them. We are to warn them, then leave them to God. But if they attack us, we are to defend ourselves.
2:193[3] Arabic: ẓālimūn. See note to 2:229.
2:194[1] Arabic: al shahr al ḥarām. A month wherein there is no killing (either between factions, or of land-based animals). That al shahr al ḥarām is a period defined by men by treaty is borne out by 9:1-5. The term occurs also at 2:217, 5:2, and 5:97. Nowhere in the Qur'an are particular months mentioned in this regard. The Traditionalist, on the other hand, claims to know exactly what these months are called and when they occur. If the claim is that here what is meant is an inviolable month with regard to the pilgrimage then, clearly, such months were known to those alive at the time of the revelation. These details are not found in the Qur'an because later generations have no need for them — the pilgrimage is now closed (see 9:28 and Notepad XVI). We have no need of such details in the same way as we have no need now to know precisely on what spot Mūsā met with Fir'awn and his sorcerers. Such events are histories the points of which are today general and moral, not specific and to be replicated — unless one insists upon binding himself to a religion nowhere found in the Qur'an. The point contained here which can be applied today is that peace treatises covering periods of time may be made; as well as some general principles governing their observance once made.
2:194[2] I.e. it exists for itself; it is a one-off.
2:194[3] I.e. deeds which contravene what is forbidden during an inviolable month.
2:194[4] I.e. during the inviolable month.
2:194[5] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:194[6] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:195[1] Lit.: and cast not your hands towards. This is an idiomatic construction meaning to give oneself up to or to give oneself over to.
2:196[1] Arabic: ḥajj. See note to 2:158, 9:28 and Notepad XVI. Since a modern application is not possible, such portions of the Qur'an provide us today with historical background and moral and spiritual principles only.
2:196[2] Arabic root: ʿ-m-r. This noun form occurs only twice (here and later in the same verse). The Traditionalist ascribes a highly specific, cultic value to the word (i.e. that of out-of-season ḥajj — the details of which he claims also to know). The Traditionalist's claim can demonstrate no purchase upon the text — a fact which he indirectly acknowledges by dint of his a priori acceptance of (and insistence upon) an entirely different literature. I have rendered in accordance with the word's non-sectarian and — in the words of Lane (p. 2207) — 'primary' signification (which, to be fair to the Traditionalist, is in basic alignment with his claims over the word — minus the dubious specificity he wishes to ascribe to it, and for us to accept at his hand). However, the final meaning is not of vital importance given the abandonment of al masjid al ḥarām in the lifetime of the Messenger (see note to 9:28 as well as my book The God Protocol) and the Traditionalist's incorrect identification of its location in any case (see Notepad XVI).

2:196[3] Cf. 2:273.
2:196[4] Or requirement. Arabic hadya — guidance, direction; way, road, course; manner mode, fashion. This word is based on the same root as — and in its unadorned textual state is visually identical to — the word translated throughout guidance. The h-d-y root occurs over 250 times in the Qur'an specifically denoting guidance. The Traditionalist claims that hadya (which occurs just 7 times in a total of 5 verses: 2:196, 2:196, 2:196, 5:2, 5:95, 5:97, 48:25) denotes a sacrificial animal to be killed as part of a religious ceremony. I do not accept this value on two grounds: firstly, because it is an instance of ascribing a specialised religious value to a word for the meaning of which there is no Qur'anic proof; secondly, because the value the Traditionalist ascribes to hadya starkly contrasts with the root meanings of that word. Whereas guidance throughout denotes guidance from God, I take hadya to denote guidance conceived of by man — and that being the case, requirement (in the sense of formal advice or directive) is a fitting value — and I do so for three reasons: firstly, because it accords with the standard, non-religious dictionary definitions; secondly, because it integrates with the broader semantics of the Arabic root as found in the Qur'an in all other cases; and, thirdly, because it fits all contexts. Where this word occurs in combination with maḥill in the formula 'until the requirement reaches its destination' (2:196, 48:25) the value is clearly a collocation denoting 'until what should happen occurs' (see note to 48:25). In this edition, I give the point to the Traditionalist in my translation, and confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
2:196[5] Historically, head-shaving has been associated with piety, initiation, pilgrimage, war, and death. The facts with supportable bases are that ḥajj took place at Petra (see Notepad XVI) where the Nabataean Arabs converged at least once yearly at the sanctuary and burial city there to meet kin, bury their dead, to worship God, to trade, and — one must assume given the etymological meaning of the ḥ-j-j root — to debate, perhaps on questions of ultimate truth. It is my best guess that what is meant here with regard to shaving the head is that a man was to wait until a given day or a particular station in the ḥajj before shaving his head or cutting his hair in order to give him the time to hear out all the arguments before making a decision, a decision which was marked by the shaving of the head; however, these are speculations. Such speculations have no greater theological significance to us now than do speculations regarding the Qur'anic histories of ʿĀd or Fir'awn. The ḥajj mentioned in the Qur'an passed into the pages of history around 1,400 years ago. The details and form of that tradition were known to the people for whom Petra represented a cultural, religious, and social centre. If the specific details of that institution were important for all people and all times they would have been included in the Qur'an. They are not included in the Qur'an, a point which the Traditionalist readily (even vociferously) acknowledges. What remains with regard to ḥajj — as with all other Qur'anic histories — are principal lessons only. Shaving occurs at one other place (48:27).
2:196[6] Arabic: hadya. See note to 2:196.
2:196[7] Or due time. Arabic: maḥill — place of alighting or stopping, time or place at which an obligation falls due. These are the mundane senses gleaned from Wehr (p. 233) and Lane (p. 625), although Lane goes on to cite the Traditionalist's highly specific value of place of sacrificial slaughter. This term occurs at three places: 2:196, 22:33, 48:25. All instances treat of a single context (the duty of ḥajj at the time of the Messenger) which fact makes claims for specialised terms difficult to refute on the basis of pan-textual comparison. As the reader will have noticed, the Traditionalist chooses to extend the application for this part of the Qur'anic narrative in a way he would never do for others (see note to 2:125 for his reasons). In this edition, I give the present point to the Traditionalist in my translation, and confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
2:196[8] Arabic root: ʿ-dh-y. See Notepad X.
2:196[9] Said by the Traditionalist to indicate something requiring the cutting of hair outside of known, prescribed contexts (i.e. those contexts which the Traditionalist himself claims to be binding upon believers but which are nowhere found in the Qur'an). One might as easily argue the opposite case: that it indicates something preventing the cutting of hair outside prescribed contexts. However, this is a point of no pressing moment for us now.
2:196[10] I.e. when you are not straitened (see note above).
2:196[11] For purposes of comparison beyond the assumed conclusions of Traditionalist interpretations, the non-sectarian Arabist A. J. Arberry renders ilā here as until (as also rendered here) […]then whosoever enjoys the Visitation until the Pilgrimage[…].
2:196[12] Arabic root: ʿ-m-r. See note to 2:196.
2:196[13] Arabic: ḥajj — pilgrimage, debate. See note to 2:158.
2:196[14] Arabic: hadya. See note to 2:196.
2:196[15] I.e. meaning that he cannot attend.
2:196[16] Arabic: ḥajj — pilgrimage, debate. See note to 2:158.
2:196[17] I.e. ten full days in total.
2:196[18] With Muhammad Asad, I take this to mean permanently present (i.e. habitually resident).
2:196[19] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii.
2:196[20] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

¶2.25

2:197[1] Arabic: ḥajj — pilgrimage, debate. See note to 2:158.
2:197[2] Arabic: ashhur — moons, months.
2:197[3] Arabic: maʿlūmāt — given, known; fixed, determined, appointed. Nowhere in the Qur'an does it say that these months are appointed by God. For the only other instance of maʿlūmāt see 22:28.
2:197[4] Arabic: ḥajj — pilgrimage, debate. See note to 2:158.
2:197[5] Arabic root: f-s-q. See note to 2:26 and Notepad XI.vii.
2:197[6] Arabic: ḥajj — pilgrimage, debate. See note to 2:158.
2:197[7] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:197[8] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:198[1] Arabic: junāḥ. See Notepad XI.ii.
2:198[2] Or expound upon. Arabic: 'afāḍa. This form IV verb occurs in 7 places (2:198, 2:199, 2:199, 7:50, 10:61, 24:14, 46:8).

The Traditionalist is forced to render this verb arbitrarily to achieve his predefined purposes. What we are looking for is a methodology. This verb has three basic meanings: to speak at length, to expound (either with no preposition, or with a proposition such as fī); to be (fully) engaged in or to abandon oneself to (which meanings take fī); to pour forth (a transitive verb taking an indirect object with ʿalā). Having reviewed all instances and found that the case at 24:14 admits of no other reading than to speak at length, to expound I take this as the baseline sense and render accordingly in all cases where that is admissible — namely, in those cases which do not take an indirect object with ʿalā. At 10:61 the particle is fī and the surrounding context requires to be (fully) engaged in or to abandon oneself to as the sense. Where the verb takes ʿalā, both the requirements of Arabic and the Qur'anic context dictate that the only possible meaning is to pour forth (in a transitive sense). In this particular case at 2:198, I have elected to render according to the Traditionalist's assertions — despite the fact that I reject them — and to confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:198[3] Or subjects known. Arabic: ʿarafāt. This word occurs once only but its root occurs in other forms and has core senses of to recognise, discover, find out, acknowledge as being true. Given the preponderance of words based on this root in the Arabic language, my opinion is that ʿarafāt is a simple plural noun based on a variant of ʿarfa (a question, questioning, respecting a subject of information, how to know it — Lane, p. 2067) and therefore ʿarafāt, as a plural noun, means known subjects, subjects known, or subjects which you know. The Traditionalist affixes a highly arbitrary religious value to this word, one which serves his consistent aim of imposing a series of rites (on which he is the sole expert) upon the contents of the Qur'an (namely, that ʿarafāt is the name of a mountain near Mecca). As per other similar cases and contexts, it is not a point of doctrine with me what the meaning of ʿarafāt is or was. The verse treats of a former people, a people for whom al masjid al ḥarām was of religious significance. I have elected here to render according to the Traditionalist's assertions — despite the fact that I reject them — and to confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol).

2:198[4] Or the inviolable sense. Arabic: mash̲ʿar. This word occurs once and means in Arabic, among other things: sensory urge, sense, feeling or perception. On that basis, then, al mash̲ʿar al ḥarām surely indicates one's inner conscience. The interested student may wish to review how this root is presented across all 40 instances in the text and that its dominant senses indicate perception and awareness: 2:9, 2:12, 2:154, 2:158, 2:198, 3:69, 5:2, 6:26, 6:109, 6:123, 7:95, 12:15, 12:107, 16:21, 16:26, 16:45, 16:80, 18:19, 21:5, 22:32, 22:36, 23:56, 26:113, 26:202, 26:224, 27:18, 27:50, 27:65, 28:9, 28:11, 29:53, 36:69, 37:36, 39:25, 39:55, 43:66, 49:2, 52:30, 53:49, 69:41. The Traditionalist affixes a highly arbitrary religious value to this word, one which serves his consistent aim of imposing a series of rites (on which he is the sole expert, naturally) upon the contents of the Qur'an, at the expense of its inherent message. As per other similar cases and contexts, it is not a point of doctrine with me what the meaning of al mash̲ʿar al ḥarām is or was. The verse treats of a former people, a people for whom al masjid al ḥarām was of religious significance. I have elected to render here according to the Traditionalist's assertions — despite the fact that I reject them — and to confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol).

2:198[5] Arabic: al ḍālūn. See note to 3:90.

2:199[1] I.e. after he has guided you.

2:199[2] Or expound. Arabic: ʿafāḍa. See note to 2:198.

2:199[3] Or in what manner. Arabic: min ḥayth̲u. See note to 2:149. I understand the import here to be: follow suit and observe protocol.

2:199[4] Or expounded. Arabic: ʿafāḍa. See note to 2:198.

2:200[1] This is taken by the Traditionalist to imply a need for his supplanting literature. However, see notes to 2:128 and 9:28, and my book The God Protocol.

2:200[2] Arabic: dh̲ikr — calling to mind, recalling, reminding; remembrance (of something past); history.

2:200[3] This statement lends strong support to the thesis that Petra was the place of the pilgrimage. Petra is proven to be a tribal burial site going back into antiquity; clearly, remembering the names and deeds of the forebears of each family and clan formed a part of the offices performed at this place. I am indebted to Brother Usman for this insight.

2:200[4] Arabic: dh̲ikr — calling to mind, recalling, reminding; remembrance (of something past); history.

2:202[1] Arabic: naṣīb — a portion. This denotes not only an amount but can also mean a share in profits or return on investment.

2:203[1] See notes to 2:158 and 9:28 and Notepad XVI. Since a modern application is not possible, such portions of the Qur'an provide us today with historical background and moral and spiritual principles only.

2:203[2] Arabic: ith̲m. See Notepad XI.i.

2:203[3] Arabic: ith̲m. See Notepad XI.i.

2:203[4] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:203[5] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:204[1] This verse and the two which follow are of one cloth with what precedes. This point becomes clear when we understand the etymological root of the word ḥajj as debate and accept that debate was at least part of the object of that pilgrimage which was binding upon the followers of the Prophet until the instruction given at 9:28 which led later to the destruction of al masjid al ḥarām (see note to 9:28 and Notepad XVI as well as my book The God Protocol). See also notes to 2:198 and 2:199.

2:205[1] I have followed Muhammad Asad in my translation here, and include his excellent comment in full: Lit., "he hastens about the earth [or "strives on earth"] to spread corruption therein and to destroy tilth and progeny". Most of the commentators see in this sentence an indication of a conscious intent on the part of the person thus described; but it is also possible that the particle li in li-yufsida (generally taken to mean "in order that he might spread corruption") plays in this context the role of what the grammarians call a lam al-dqibah, "the [letter] lam used to denote a consequence"- i.e., regardless of the existence or non-existence of a conscious intent. (By rendering the sentence the way I do it, both possibilities are left open.) As regards the expression harth (rendered by me as "tilth"), its primary significance is "gain" or "acquisition" through labour; and thus it often signifies "worldly goods" (see Lane II, 542), and especially the crops obtained by tilling land, as well as the tilled land itself. If harth is understood in this context as "tilth", it would apply, metaphorically, to human endeavours in general, and to social endeavours in particular. However, some commentators - basing their opinion on the Qur'anic sentence, "your wives are your tilth" (2:223)- maintain that harth stands here for "wives" (cf. Razi, and the philologist Al-Azhari, as quoted in Manar II, 248): in which case the "destruction of tilth and progeny" would be synonymous with an upsetting of family life and, consequently, of the entire social fabric. According to either of these two interpretations, the passage has the following meaning: As soon as the mental attitude described above is generally accepted and made the basis of social behaviour, it unavoidably results in widespread moral decay and, consequently, social disintegration.

2:206[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

2:206[2] I.e. his own sense of greatness. Arabic: ʿizza — power, prestige, honour, respect and fame.

2:206[3] Lit.: the sin. Arabic: ith̲m. See Notepad XI.i.

2:207[1] There is mention throughout of the servants. At times this convention is, by necessity, rendered his servants. The set is found at 2:207, 3:15, 3:20, 3:30, 3:182, 8:51, 22:10, 36:30, 40:31, 40:44, 40:48, 41:46, 50:11. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

2:208[1] Arabic: allad̲h̲īna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:208[2] Arabic: silm — peace or submission or surrender. The Traditionalist attempts to conflate this abstract noun with the religion his predecessors created. Any attempt to correlate later developments with this word is based in deceit. It is God who guides, not a religion nor the creators thereof (cf. 2:213).

2:208[3] Or adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

2:210[1] I.e. settled. Two parsings of the text are possible here, the one I have followed, which is how the non-sectarian A. J. Arberry renders here: What do they look for, but that God shall come to them in the cloud -- shadows, and the angels? The matter is determined[...] This may be compared with how Saheeh International renders the same portion: Do they await but that Allāh should come to them in covers of clouds and the angels [as well] and the matter is [then] decided? I have opted to parse as I do, firstly, because I found that the phrase rendered in my translation And the matter is concluded occurs (by general agreement) as a separate phrase also at 11:44 (interestingly, in a context treating of the Flood) and, secondly, because I do not find justification for Saheeh International's interpolations in the text.

2:210[2] Lit.: the matters.

¶2.26 2:211[1] Arabic: āya. See Notepad VIII.

2:211[2] I.e. for denial (cf. 14:28).

2:214[1] Arabic: am. See note to 21:21.

2:214[2] Arabic: math̲al. Rendered here by default as similitude; particular contexts require like or example in English.

2:214[3] I.e. if this is the claim.

2:214[4] Arabic: allad̲h̲īna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

2:214[5] This is the answer to the condition posited at the beginning of the verse. The argument is: if you expect anything other than what went before, then consider this: you are no different.

2:214[6] Arabic: alā. See note to 2:12.

2:215[1] See note to 4:2.

2:215[2] Lit.: son of the road. See note to 2:177. Sc. that is what you should spend.

2:216[1] I.e. when necessary.

2:216[2] Lit.: and.

¶2.27 2:217[1] Arabic: al sh̲ahr al ḥarām. See note to 2:194; i.e. at such time as fighting is forbidden (by convention or treaty).

2:217[2] Lit.: Fighting is during it.

2:217[3] Arabic: ṣadda + ʿan. See note to 8:47.

2:217[4] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii.

2:217[5] The Traditionalist tends to understand the text here in a way which Saheeh International makes explicit by means of interpolations: Say, "Fighting therein is great [sin], but averting [people] from the way of Allāh and disbelief in Him and [preventing access to] al-Masjid al-Ḥarām and the expulsion of its people therefrom are greater [evil] in the sight of Allāh.

2:217[6] Arabic: fitnah. See note to 2:102.

2:217[9] Arabic: dīn. See Notepad V.

2:217[10] Arabic: kāfir. Typically rendered an unbeliever. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii. Lit.: And dies and he is.

2:219[1] Arabic: ith̲m. See Notepad XI.i.

2:219[2] Arabic: ith̲m. See Notepad XI.i.

2:219[3] Arabic: al ʿafw — what is surplus or redundant. This word has connotations of freely given, i.e. that which is given without constraint, or not asked for. In a context where the same question has already been asked and answered (2:215), it is possible to discern a sense in which the second asking of the question itself is also surplus. See also 7:199 and note thereto.

2:219[4] Arabic: bayyana. See note to 2:69.

2:219[5] Arabic: āyāt. See Notepad VIII.

2:220[1] See note to 4:2.

2:220[2] I take the purport of this clause to be — at least in part — that it is a benefit to us that God did not lay upon us set amounts to spend; we are meant to use our own judgment.

2:223[2] While most translators close the speech marks at some point in the previous verse, the final clause of the present verse suggests to me that the direct speech ends here.
2:223[3] See note to (al) mu'minūn at 8:2.
2:224[1] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:225[1] I.e. for what you really meant.
2:226[1] Arabic: shahr — moon, month. My personal opinion is that in all cases where months are the measure of waiting it means a period beginning at the next new moon, the reason is that this method provides the most transparency for the community. See also note to 2:189.
2:226[2] I.e. if they change their minds, and go back to their women.
2:227[1] Arabic: ṭalāq. While translated as divorce, this does not fully convey the sense; the Qur'anic entry into and exit from married status is something for which Western culture has no exact parallel.
2:228[1] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.
2:228[2] Arabic: aḥaqq-. See Notepad XVII.

2:228[6] I.e. of rights.

2:229[11] I.e. the man has no claim over that which he has given the woman. However, the woman can choose to return what she likes to him if she wishes in order to facilitate an exit from the marriage.
2:229[12] Qur'anic usage: ẓālimūn. This is generally (and correctly) rendered by the Traditionalist as wrongdoers. However, the Qur'anic usage here adds a perspective which is easily lost today, namely: whoso transgresses the limits of God. I render ẓālimūn as wrongdoers throughout and reference each instance to this verse.
2:230[1] I.e. if he goes through with the divorce.
2:230[2] I.e. the second husband.

2:233[9] Arabic: junāḥ. See Notepad XI.ii.
2:233[10] Arabic: sallama. With the preposition ʿalā, this form II verb means to greet (24:27, 24:61, 33:56). At 4:65 followed by the repeating noun form object it means to submit. At 8:43 where it occurs without an object the sense is to preserve or to deliver. While I accept this last case as operative here also (that is, ensuring the safety — I assume — of the infant), the note is certainly present on which translators commonly place emphasis, namely that of payment (i.e. for the services of a wet nurse). It is hoped that the clause as rendered here admits both aspects.

2:236[3] Arabic: maʿrūf. See note to 2:178.
2:236[4] Arabic: ḥaqqan ʿalā. See Notepad XVII (ḥaqq- i.).
2:237[1] I.e. a dowry.
2:237[2] I.e. women may keep this as their right.
2:237[3] The woman has a right to half the dowry promised; the man may choose to make her a gift of the second half also; the woman may choose to release him from the half to which she is entitled.
2:237[4] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.
2:238[1] Arabic: ṣalawāt (plural of ṣalāt); i.e. such duties as are incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. Let us remember the surrounding context: God's rules for right dealings with women. Here, however, the Traditionalist would have the reader believe that 2:238-239 intersects this topic with a reminder to keep up his non-Qur'anic ritual (with special emphasis on one at mid-afternoon), and of maintaining that regime when out and about. This is only achieved by his typical means: shattering the context, inserting specious values for words, interpolation, and reliance upon the reader's textual ignorance and reluctance to challenge those he considers experts. Traditionalist translators Hilali & Khan, for example, have here: Guard strictly (five obligatory) As-Salawat (the prayers) especially the middle Salat (i.e. the best prayer - ʿAsr). And stand before Allah with obedience [and do not speak to others during the Salat (prayers)]. And if you fear (an enemy), perform Salat (pray) on foot or riding. And when you are in safety, offer the Salat (prayer) in the manner He has taught you, which you knew not (before). Even the most enthusiastic follower of the Traditionalist senses that such an imposition upon the text ruptures the narrative flow. But with the values we have established in this work, there is no rift in the text: we are to fear God and keep to a moderate course in our dealings with women; to apply the principles we are given the best we can; where we are lacking in knowledge and in an insecure situation, we are to do the best we can with what we know; when we are secure again, we are to verify and improve our knowledge. The notes following to 2:238-239 supply some additional information in support of the points made here.

2:238[2] Arabic: wusṭā. This word occurs once. The Traditionalist claims a specific and specious religious value for it (namely a middle prayer — one which he takes to be what he thinks of as the afternoon prayer, and claims to know the details of). The facts as found in the Qur'an are these: the w-s-ṭ root occurs 5 times (2:143, 2:238, 5:89, 68:28, 100:5) and in all cases it denotes a middle-point between extremes; the meaning of ṣalāt is established on a Qur'anic basis as duty (see note to 2:3 and Article SZC); and the Qur'anically established value for ṣalāt fits perfectly with a Qur'anically consistent value for the w-s-ṭ root in the context here.
2:238[3] Arabic: ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC.
2:238[4] Naturally, the Traditionalist wants to secure a value here which confirms his externally derived prayer regime. However, the construction here is qāma + li, and we can cross-reference its meaning by looking at the two places where the same construction occurs. In both cases (4:127 and 34:46) the sense is stand in support of, take the side of. This is the only reading which works over all three instances, an assertion which can be confirmed by comparing them and then trying to fit the Traditionalist's rendering at 2:238 (i.e. stand in prayer to) in the two remaining cases. Cf. also 5:8.
2:238[5] I.e. stand up for God by remaining in prudent fear of him and obeying what he has commanded.
2:239[1] I.e. have reason to fear. See note to 2:182. I take the meaning here to be: should you have reason to fear that you have erred in the matter of right dealings concerning marriage.
2:239[2] I.e. on the go; do the best you can at the time.
2:240[1] I.e. if they leave after provision has been made for them.

2:242[3] From 2:219 through to this point is cut from whole cloth — the best and right treatment of women and children — beginning with discouragement of the use of alcohol and gambling (two vices from which countless families have suffered, predominantly at the hands of fathers).

¶2.32 2:243[1] Arabic: alam tara. Lit.: dost thou not see? This formula occurs 31 times (2:243, 2:246, 2:258, 3:23, 4:44, 4:49, 4:51, 4:60, 4:77, 14:19, 14:24, 14:28, 19:83, 22:18, 22:63, 22:65, 24:41, 24:43, 25:45, 26:225, 31:29, 31:31, 35:27, 39:21, 40:69, 58:7, 58:8, 58:14, 59:11, 89:6, 105:1). Having identified the set, one needs criteria for distinguishing between those cases where it can be rendered literally and where not. Having considered the context for each of the components which make up the set, the criteria I use are: where the following word is ilā (as here) or kayfa (how), I render Hast thou not considered? In all other cases I render Dost thou not see? All instances reference this verse. See also note to 13:41.
2:243[2] Arabic: kharaja — to go forth, to go out. This is the same verb as used at 2:240, indicating a thematic and didactic connection between the two verses.
2:243[3] Lit.: and they thousands.
2:245[1] Comparison and consideration of all instances of this word (2:245, 5:12, 57:11, 57:18, 64:17, 73:20) make clear that what is meant is wealth spent on fighting in the cause of God.
2:246[1] Arabic: alam tara. See note to 2:243.

2:248[1] Arabic: āya. See Notepad VIII.
2:248[2] Arabic: tābūt (see Lane, p. 321). Said to mean ark, box. Muhammad Asad — who in turn agrees with Zamakhshari — says that identification here of tābūt with the Ark of the Covenant is derived from Talmudic legends, and that the actual reference is to the heart.
2:248[3] Arabic: hārūn. Typically identified with the Aaron of the Hebrew scriptures. See Notepad XV.
2:248[4] I.e. a heart to stand and fight in the cause of God, echoing the deeds of Mūsā and Hārūn. Such deeds marked the reign of Ṭālūt (typically identified with the Saul of the Hebrew scriptures), instances of which are given in summary in the following verses. See Notepad XV.

2:249[2] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv. Here: those who had obeyed the command not to drink water at the river.
2:249[3] Arabic: jālūt. Typically identified with the Goliath of the Hebrew scriptures. See Notepad XV.
2:249[4] Arabic: al ṣābirūn. See note to 2:155.
2:250[1] I.e. grant Thou us victory.
2:250[2] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii. One should remember that this term — at least as defined in the Qur'an and applied in this work — references a particular type of deluded hypocrite. That taken as given, this instance might refer to that part of the army the forces of Ṭālūt (typically identified with the Saul of the Hebrew scriptures) left at the river, and which those speaking here now identify as an enemy; thus, they have an enemy both before them and behind them. This clause repeats at the very end of the present chapter.

2:255[3] Grammar: dual.
2:256[1] Arabic: dīn. See Notepad V. While this important statement is generally softened by translators to imply that such should not be the case, the highly sectarian translators Hilali & Khan render here without that interpolation: There is no compulsion in religion.
2:256[2] Arabic: ṭāghūt. The root of this word is connected with excess, transgression and falsity. From the general contexts in which it is found I take ṭāghūt to indicate a false, oppressive order, and belief in the same. Modern society pretends to be secular; it is anything but that. It is run by highly religious Satanic orders, a fact which is visible to anyone with even moderate levels of discernment or investigative powers. Any object of attention and dedication, whether physical, mental, or spiritual, which denies the right of the Creator to be acknowledged and denies his laws is an idol. As Confucius famously noted: 'Signs and symbols rule the world, not rules and law'. Archetypal signs and symbols are understood by the ruling elite and, generally, worshipped unconsciously by those over whom they rule.
2:256[3] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.
2:257[1] Qur'anic definition: alladhīna āmanū. Typically rendered those who believe. The definition of alladhīna āmanū is derived by comparison with its antonym. We know from the Qur'anic definition at 2:6 that alladhīna kafarū means those who ignore warning (see note to 2:6 and Notepad II.i.). At 2:257 this known value is set in unambiguous contradistinction with alladhīna āmanū. The Qur'anic value for alladhīna āmanū, then, is those who heed warning. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad II.iv.

2:260[2] Various Traditionalist interpretations present Ibrāhim chopping up birds at this point; I am not convinced. Ibrāhim was to cause them to incline to him (i.e. to tame and train them). Such a context does not fit easily with the physical dismemberment which the Traditionalist discerns; but God knows best.

¶2.36 2:262[1] Arabic: ʿatbaʿa. While this is a form IV verb and as such is technically a transitive verb meaning to cause to follow, to subordinate, Lane (p. 239) notes that it also takes many form I meanings (i.e. generally, to follow). This verb is treated in both senses by Traditionalist translators and I have done likewise, on the basis of context. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse (2:262, 7:175, 10:90, 11:59, 11:60, 11:99, 15:18, 18:85, 18:89, 18:92, 20:78, 23:44, 26:60, 28:42, 37:10, 77:17).

2:282[9] The Qur'an does not concern itself with fads of sexual politics serving covert agendas; it concerns itself with reality. The fact is that women, in general, are less knowledgeable about business than are men. A second fact is that in different circumstances (those where a wife is accused of infidelity by her husband alone) a woman's sole witness prevails over that of a man. And in slightly different circumstances it would take four male witnesses to condemn her.

3:7[8] Or are alike (i.e. each other), or allegorical. Arabic: mutashābihat — ambiguous, resemblances, similarities, likenesses (e.g. something knowable only by means of comparison, context, deeper insight and investigation). This can apply to appeals to and descriptions of eternal verities, but also to concerns of this life; for example, the statement: Kill them wheresoever you find them (2:191). The verse is preceded by a clear call to fight only those who fight you and not to transgress bounds; to cite 2:191 without the surrounding context (something practiced both by some of those in favour of brand Islam and by some of those against it) is to twist this Qur'anic imperative into deceit and calumny. The Traditionalist's highly selective reading of other particular statements may also be cited in this regard. The most common instance of this is the refrain one hears ad nauseam from the Traditionalist: […]what the Messenger gives you, take it[…] (59:7). Here, he wrests part of a verse out of its context as a cover for opening the floodgates to what is the real basis of his religion: the ḥadīth. The logical, philosophical and factual errors in this one statement used thus are legion. In short, those who wish to wrest Qur'anic context- and comparison-dependent statements from their places will find that they are able to do so. We ourselves should be wary of doing likewise if we fear God and the Last Day. Those who are heedless in this regard will be held responsible. All one can do is advise such people against that course and, if they will not desist, leave them to it.

3:7[9] Arabic: fitnah. See note to 2:102.
3:7[10] Some parse this verse differently with the result that God alone is the one who knows the interpretation spoken about. I disagree on two counts. Firstly, I find it unlikely that God would give mankind a message it was never intended to understand; secondly, the Qur'an tells us to reason, and to consider it with care. On this basis, I conclude that what is given is susceptible to human reason and intelligence.

I take those given a portion of the Writ to denote those who have access to some part — or even all — of an authentic revelation, yet who — either by force of social conditioning, informational distractions, supplanting doctrines and sources, or for some other reason — manage only an imperfect or warped understanding of that revelation. This convention occurs at 3:23, 4:44, 4:51. Cf. 7:37.

3:28[6] This verse requires some attention since it features in arguments both for and against the doctrine of taqiyah, which word has come to be associated with a justification for dissimulation or outright falsehood. To begin: any mindset — 'religious' or otherwise — which wishes to find justification for lying will find it. To restrict ourselves to the realm of religion, one sees that in Christianity, Paul is much cited by those who wish to achieve such an end (e.g. Rom. 3.7, 1 Cor. 9.19-23, 2 Cor. 12.15-16), while observant Jews ask God to forgive them for the lies they will tell in the coming year in the Kol Nidre ceremony at Yom Kippur. To return to the Qur'anic text, I would make the following points: 1. The word taqiyah (تقيـة) is not found in the verse at 3:28 — or in any other verse of the Qur'an in the standard text — although it is an accepted variant reading of the standard word tuqāt (تقـاة), and the two are regarded by Lane (p. 310) as synonyms, where he provides values covering: what one should fear, or what one should preserve oneself from. 2. The context at 3:28 has a military and political application (treating of the taking of allies). 3. The two verses immediately following 3:28 make plain that the intention of the heart is not hidden from God, and issue sobering warnings in that regard. Now that we have established these points, I would add the following: in military and political matters — especially when dealing with a superior force — the ability to mask one's intentions is vital; the believer can — in fact, must — do so, as must any individual or state which wishes to survive. However, the belief and intention in the case of the believer must not be compromised. This is an entirely different case to that which is both practiced by some called Muslims — or that of which others accuse them — namely, cynical and outright deception for gain. Both camps should discuss 3:28 only in the context of 3:29-30. Traditionalist translators Hilali & Khan render here: except if you indeed fear a danger from them, while Saheeh International has: except when taking precaution against them in prudence. Non-sectarian translator A. J. Arberry has: unless you have a fear of them, while N. J. Dawood has: except in self-defence. For myself, I take the import to be that we should have taqwā (prudent fear) and not let our guard down when we are among al kāfirūn, understanding that they are an enemy to us. The value here of the false claimers of guidance for al kāfirūn makes the dissimulation from their side more obvious in translation than is the case in other presentations; to be fully frank and trusting with such people is not virtue, but recklessness.

3:30[1] Arabic: sū' (sg.), aswā' (pl.). See Notepad XI.v.
3:30[2] Lit.: between it and it — i.e. between the soul and what it did of evil.
3:30[3] See note to 2:207.

¶3.4

3:31[1] Cf. 3:20.
3:31[2] Arabic: dhunūb. See Notepad XI.iv.
3:32[1] This imperative has been much abused by the Traditionalist. The Qur'an is that message the Messenger brought. In any event, the messenger through whom the message came to Muḥammad was Jibrīl. I acknowledge Brother Hamza Abdul Malik for this last point.
3:32[2] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii.
3:33[1] Typically identified with the Noah of the Hebrew scriptures. See Notepad XV.
3:33[2] Arabic: 'imrān. Typically identified with the Amram of the Hebrew scriptures, father of Moses (though typically rendered Imran in English translations of the Qur'an); clearly, if this identification is correct, there is a striking disconnect between the timeline as presented by the dominant Egypt-Palestine thesis (or, rather, its Christian extension which places the Messiah at Jerusalem around 2,000 years ago) and the narrative here if Maryam and ʿĪsā are taken as the Mary and Jesus of the New Testament. Of interest is the fact that under the ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis Maryam, ʿĪsā and other personalities connected with them lived many centuries earlier, and the stories connected with the Christianity which developed in the 1st century CE are calques upon these original stories, later conflated with embellishments and other historical characters and transposed upon a different geography. See Notepad XVIII and Notepad XV.
3:34[1] Also possible as alike. See note to 9:67.
3:34[2] Muhammad Asad also renders here in the past tense and connects this phrase with what follows. He comments: My joining of this phrase with the following passage is in agreement with the interpretation advanced by Muhammad 'Abduh and Rashid Rida' (Manar III, 289). Cf. 3:121.
3:35[1] The adverb idh has within it a secondary implication, one which becomes apparent in the light of the fact that certain clauses in the chapter seem incomplete. They are not incomplete; rather, they reference the fact that God was (or is) hearing and knowing. This convention is found twice (3:34, 3:121) and is a defining characteristic of the chapter — a point which is confirmed by those statements which remind the Messenger that he was not present at such times or places. This mechanism (the use of idh in the manner described above) is observed in the notes accompanying this chapter.
3:36[1] Arabic: maryam. This note expands upon comments found at 3:33. Hebrew texts claim Amram as the father of Moses; and other sources claim 'Imrān as the Arabicised version of Amram. The children of Amram — according to Hebrew sources — were Moses, Aaron and Miriam (the latter name Anglicised in the Christian Bible as Mary). An accusation levelled at the Qur'an by its detractors is that it conflates or confuses historical personalities: Miriam (sister of Aaron and Moses) and Miriam or Maryam (i.e. Mary), mother of ʿĪsā (assumed to be materially the same person as the man known today as Jesus who lived in Palestine 2,000 years ago). The passage here and that at 19:28 where Maryam is called 'sister of Hārūn' are often presented in support of such assertions; such positions assume their conclusions and proceed on that basis. I refer the interested reader to Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII for summaries of theses which address these points.
3:36[2] Or adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.
3:37[1] Arabic: zakariyyā. In the Christological expansion on the Egypt-Palestine thesis, Zakariyyā (Zachariah) is the husband of Maryam's (Mary's) cousin; under the ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis the entire narrative predates the Christian era by a number of centuries. See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.
3:37[2] See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.
3:37[3] I.e. without a need to answer to anyone else on the part of the giver; without limit.
3:39[1] Arabic root: ṣ-l-w; i.e. to do such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. Generically, ṣallā means to perform (the or one's) duty. His duty (salāt) in the chamber (which in the context of a high priest implies a location in the Temple) was to carry out the rites given to Mūsā.
3:39[2] Arabic: yahyā. Typically identified with John of the Christian Bible under the Christian extension of the Egypt-Palestine thesis; emerges as a different person entirely under the ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad XV.
3:39[3] 'Īsā was the word from God (c.f. 3:45).
3:39[4] Lit.: and.

3:42[1] The use of idh here references 3:34 which emphasises God's knowledge of events. Cf. God was hearing and knowing[...].

III.

3:44[1] Qur'anic usage: waḥī and awḥā. We can understand some part of the meaning of the noun waḥī and verb awḥā by the usage here. Clearly, waḥī denotes the transference of knowledge from one realm — in this case the transcendent (the realm of God) — to this temporal, material realm. (The point is repeated at 11:49 and 12:102.) However, it can also denote the transference of human will or knowledge (19:11). Traditionalist translations focus on inspiration and revelation, but I think they are missing a part of the point — especially given the undeniable human application of the concept at 19:11. Where God gives instruction we can take it as granted that a revelatory process is at work, but the operative value is that of passing information containing an imperative either to action or to instinct (see 16:68 and 41:12 which treat of bees and created heavens). In English, instruct and instruction cover the majority of required nuances. I use both reveal and instruct depending on context. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

3:44[2] Lit.: staffs, reeds or pens.

3:44[3] See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.

3:45[1] The use of idh here references 3:34 which emphasises God's knowledge of events. Cf. God was hearing and knowing[...].

3:45[2] See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.

3:45[3] Lit.: anointed one. Arabic: masīḥ — from the verb root m-s-ḥ; messiah. Christianity has distorted this word beyond all recognition from its original sense. The root meaning is common to Hebrew and Arabic. It simply means one anointed (usually for a particular task or office). The term occurs thirty-nine times in the Hebrew Scriptures, and once even references a non-Israelite king. (Saul — 12 times: I Sam. 12:3, 5; 24:6 (twice), 10; 26:9, 11, 16, 23; II Sam. 1:14, 16, 21; Messiah to come — 9 times: I Sam. 2:10, 35; Ps. 2:2; 89:51; 132:10, 17; Dan. 9:25, 26; Hab. 3:13; David — 6 times: II Sam. 19:21; 22:51; 23:1; Ps. 18:50; 20:6; 28:8; priest — 4 times: Lev. 4:3, 5, 16; 6:22; reigning king — 3 times: Lam. 4:20; Ps. 84:9; 89:38; patriarchs — twice: Ps. 105:15; I Chron. 16:22; Solomon — once: II Chron. 6:42; prospective king — once: I Sam. 16:6; Cyrus — once: Isa. 45:1.) Thus, the Christian claims for this word are exaggerated and assume an ideology nowhere found in the Hebrew scriptures. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

3:50[2] See note to injīl at 5:46. It is my understanding that the injīl confirmed the Torah and relaxed some of its requirements. The concept of gospel as a man-god death cult was a later invention decreed into canon by Constantine, a sun-worshipping pagan. How such statements may be integrated with the theses summarised in Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII is a subject requiring further study.

3:52[1] See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.

3:52[2] Arabic: al ḥawāriyyūn. Muhammad Asad comments here: Al-hawariyyun (sing. hawari) is the designation applied in the Qur'an to the disciples of Jesus. [...]and the evidence provided by the recently discovered Dead Sea Scrolls strongly supports this view - that the term hawari was popularly used to denote a member of the Essene Brotherhood, a Jewish religious group which existed in Palestine at the time of Jesus, and to which, possibly, he himself belonged. The Essenes were distinguished by their strong insistence on moral purity and unselfish conduct, and always wore white garments as the outward mark of their convictions; and this would satisfactorily explain the name given to them. Asad holds to the dominant Egypt-Palestine thesis and the Christian extension thereof. The competing theses summarised in Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII would, perhaps, see the Essenes as a sect which carried the teachings of the original ʿĪsā, a man who predated the Yeshua — or Jesus — figure by centuries and who was active in Arabia. Certainly, the names ʿĪsā and Essene bear an easy comparison.

3:61[1] Or it. However, the subject is clearly ʿĪsā.

3:62[1] I.e. each group is to claim its narrative regarding the Messiah to be true. Some Christians make exaggerated claims for the man they say they follow on the basis of writings which are corrupted, not available in the original tongue, and which contradict themselves. My view is that while such people may not be culpable for what they do not know, if they persist in pushing their assumptions upon those who have the Qur'an — a preserved scripture — this (i.e. what is outlined at 3:61-62) is the recommended course. Some translators do not regard 3:62 as I do, as a continuation of the challenge outlined at 3:61, but see it as an aside. To my mind, the narrative flow is clear, and I have rendered accordingly.

3:64[5] For this to be true, a body of believers must reject the authority of any priesthood both in deed as well as in word. The Traditionalist claims not to have a priesthood. This claim is true in word but not in deed. If it were true in deed there would exist no person considered qualified to pronounce another man apostate and pass judgment on him on that basis; nor would the opinions of men a thousand years dead be considered inviolable and beyond intelligent review.

The Traditionalist frequently capitalises on this ambiguity to include 'this prophet' as someone those closest to Ibrāhīm (also) follow. However, there is no ambiguity in the Arabic, and Muhammad Asad adheres to the facts in his rendering of this point: Behold, the people who have the best claim to Abraham are surely those who follow him - as does this Prophet[...].

3:73[2] This answer addresses objections raised by those holding previous scriptures who reject the Qur'an on the basis of divergences between it and their own texts. A number of readings of this tricky segment are presented by translators. Saheeh International has: And do not trust except those who follow your religion." Say, "Indeed, the [true] guidance is the guidance of Allāh. [Do you fear] lest someone be given [knowledge] like you were given or that they would [thereby] argue with you before your Lord?" Meanwhile, Hilali & Khan have: And believe no one except the one who follows your religion. Say (O Muhammad SAW): "Verily! Right guidance is the Guidance of Allah" and do not believe that anyone can receive like that which you have received (of Revelation) except when he follows your religion, otherwise they would engage you in argument before your Lord. A. J. Arberry has: and believe not any but him who follows your religion.' Say: 'The true guidance is God's guidance -- that anyone should be given the like of what you have been given, or dispute with you before your Lord.' Muhammad Asad renders the passage: Say: "Behold, all [true] guidance is God's guidance, consisting in one's being granted [revelation] such as you have been granted." I agree with Asad's reasoning, though I render closer to Arberry, providing the logical bridge tersely (by means of a comma introducing a subordinate clause).

3:85[2] Arabic: al islām. This is an abstract noun and means peace or submission (to God). Cf. 3:18-19 and notes thereto. Monotonous repetition of the first part of this verse is the go-to reflex of much of the Traditionalist's less impressive support base. They repeat it in the mistaken belief that it describes the religion which they call by this name, and think is found somewhere in the Qur'an, but cannot say where exactly. The effect of this mantra is to keep the indoctrinated onside, the ignorant in line, and the genuinely curious at bay; and the tragic irony of their conviction is lost on no one with a functioning intellect who has read the context surrounding this verse in the Qur'an and understood it.

3:93[1] I.e. in order to verify that the children of Israel lived without any law regarding food until such time as God gave Mūsā the dietary laws. 3:96[2] Arabic: bakka, from Hebrew: בָּכָא — weeping, deep sorrow. Petra was a burial site from ancient times — and thus a place of mourning. See Notepad XVI.
3:96[3] I see 3:97 as a flashback, which I have intimated by means of parenthesis and a colon connecting 3:96 and 3:97. However, in the translation I concede my reservations about grammatical tense (I would argue for the past tense) to the Traditionalist since the broader point is entirely moot. The location I find convincing is at Petra (see Notepad XVI) though it no longer matters where it was located since the original site is now closed (see note to 9:28 and my book The God Protocol, both of which by different routes show that the site of al masjid al ḥarām must be closed). Lastly, objectively the narrative here references a time in the distant past. Thus, the point is not the house; the point is a historical instance of God's expectation of men in response to what he had given them. That very point is the focus of what follows: the doctors of the Law have the commandments of God in their scriptures, why do they not follow those? These points are lost on those whose primary focus is to repeat procedures they found their fathers engaged in, but can find nowhere in the Qur'an.

Since it doesn't much matter now and I cannot definitively prove my case, I allow the Traditionalist the point in my translation. As noted above, I regard verses 3:96-97 in the past tense. The place of pilgrimage is closed to believers (see note to 9:28 and my book The God Protocol). The scenario here is a history with a moral purpose which serves to set up the exhortations in the following verses.

3:104[2] Qur'anic usage: munkar. Arabic: munkar — denied; not recognised, unacknowledged, disavowed, disclaimed. In the context of revelation-based faith, the reference can only be to that which is alien to that revelation. One also sees that munkar functions often in contradistinction to what is fitting (Arabic: ma'rūf). What is contrary to what is right and good and fitting may be rendered as perverse — which means that which is contrary to what is good and right. I render as perversity where there is a definite article and as what is perverse where there is none. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

3:123[1] Or with a full moon. The Traditionalist has some stories which he connects with this word, and claims them in support of his broader narrative. To claim a specific location invites suspicion given the sparsity of place names in the Qur'an in general and the Traditionalist's record, but God knows best. Of interest is the fact that badr means full moon (Hans Wehr p. 57; Lane, p. 165). Additionally, the particle bi has a range of meanings, including with, through, by means of (designating instrumentality or agency).

3:136[1] Lit.: the doers (of it).
3:137[1] Arabic: sunnah (here: plural — sunan), i.e. established way (of doing things). In Arabic sunnah means method or mode of treatment or way of doing or living and is a word one hears ad nauseam among those who have inherited or fallen for the Traditionalist's bait-and-switch manoeuvre (i.e. the supplanting of the Qur'an by an entirely different literature). By this word such people mean a fluid, arbitrary subset of the broader literature which they prefer to follow over the Qur'an which takes as its focus actions ascribed to Muḥammad, many of which contradict both the spirit and letter of the Qur'an. The word sunnah occurs in the Qur'an sixteen times (3:137, 4:26, 8:38, 15:13, 17:77, 17:77, 18:55, 33:38, 33:62, 33:62, 35:43, 35:43, 35:43, 40:85, 48:23, 48:23). In none of the instances in which the Qur'an uses this word does it signify actions performed by any prophet. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
3:138[1] Traditionalist translators tend to insinuate that the Qur'an is meant here, but the context is such that the plainest subject is the preceding verse. Muhammad Asad, though broadly a Traditionalist, is above this type of facile tinkering; he connects this line with what precedes, and renders here: this [should be] a clear lesson unto all men, and a guidance and an admonition unto the God-conscious. We are meant to learn from the remaining traces of those who preceded us in this world, and apply the lessons they hold for us to our lives.
3:138[2] Arabic: bayān — clearness, plainness, patency, obviousness; statement, information; declaration, announcement; manifestation; demonstration; eloquence. This word occurs three times (3:138, 55:4, 75:19). Context requires some variation of renderings. The remaining instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
3:138[3] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2. We are meant to investigate the end of those who came before us. Their end is (or should be) instructive to us.

3:140[1] I.e. nothing you can experience has not been experienced before.
3:140[2] I.e. days of this kind; or those in which we live.
3:140[3] Lit.: and.
3:140[4] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.
3:140[5] This word (sg. shāhid, pl. shuhadā') has been repurposed by the Traditionalist to mean martyr (which, in practice, is a somewhat generous way of describing people killed in military action). A witness may, in fact, be called upon to become a martyr. However, the fact of dying in a non-Qur'anic struggle to set up a temporal empire with a non-Qur'anic religion at its core means nothing in this context. A witness in the Qur'anic sense is someone who stands up and warns a society to turn to God alone (not to a religion of human contrivance). The purpose in fighting is to protect the community so that it might continue to engage in the primary obligation of the type just mentioned.

3:146[1] Lit.: with.
3:146[2] Qur'anic definition: ribbiyyūn. This is the only occurrence of this word and lexicons generally have little of objective use to contribute. However, we can say the following: ribbiyyūn is from the r-b-b root (as is rabb meaning lord, sustainer, master, owner); ribbiyyūn is said to be of Hebrew or Syriac origin and to mean godly men or devout men. Happily, we can corroborate this value by means of what follows in the verse, and I use this at the basis for the definition. Meanwhile, Saheeh International uses religious scholars, Hilali & Khan use religious learned men, and Muhammad Asad uses God-devoted men, all of which are in the same general area of meaning.

3:152[1] Arabic: qad. I have rendered the perfective mood here using emphasis.
3:152[2] I.e. the promise made at 3:151.
3:152[3] I take idh here to reference 3:121 which emphasises God's knowledge of events. Cf. God was hearing and knowing[...]. Other translators — who do not follow the idh chain in this chapter — join this with what follows; for example, Saheeh International has here: And Allāh had certainly fulfilled His promise to you when you were killing them [i.e., the enemy] by His permission. This rendering assumes a value for ḥassa which I discuss below.
3:152[4] Arabic: ḥassa — to perceive, be aware; to slay. I am wary of the Traditionalist's handling of this word. He renders it killing, slaying and synonyms. The reader should know that this is the only instance of the form I of ḥassa in the text. It is true that ḥassa is said, when marked ḥissa, to mean to slay in some lexicons, but I cannot tell whether that is a genuine instance of Qur'anic Arabic or a later development which grew out of a culture infested with 'prophetic' traditions. What I can say is that the form III verb occurs three times and means to perceive in all cases (3:52, 19:98, 21:12). The form V verb occurs just once and means to enquire (12:87). The noun occurs once at 21:102 and indicates sound (i.e. a sound which can just be perceived). On this backdrop, the claim for a single instance of the form I verb as to slay, to kill should be treated with scepticism, especially in a context where to be aware makes sense and to slay makes almost none. One may lose heart when one becomes aware of an enemy, but when speaking of losing heart to slay ill fits the context. The passage and what follows treat of cowardice and failure in battle, not of a lack of motivation to slaughter remaining enemies.
3:152[5] Arabic: ḥattā idhā. This collocation is rendered generally by translators as until when — and this is its function today in Arabic. However, a detailed review of all instances of ḥattā idhā in the Qur'an reveals another nuance. Here, the sense is consistently: when + the perfective mood (e.g. And when he had reached the sea) and I have rendered accordingly throughout. The full set is found at 3:152, 4:6, 4:18, 6:25, 6:31, 6:44, 6:61, 7:37, 7:38, 7:57, 9:118, 10:22, 10:24, 10:90, 11:40, 12:110, 18:71, 18:74, 18:77, 18:86, 18:90, 18:93, 18:96, 18:96, 19:75, 21:96, 23:64, 23:77, 23:99, 24:39, 27:18, 27:84, 34:23, 39:71, 39:73, 40:34, 41:20, 43:38, 46:15, 47:4, 47:16, 72:24. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
3:152[6] Said by the Traditionalist to indicate spoil. The context does not treat so much of spoil in my view, as of the chance to escape with one's life.
3:152[7] Sc. His promise ceased to be binding upon Him.
3:152[8] See note to (al) mu'minūn at 8:2.
3:153[1] The use of idh here references 3:121 which emphasises God's knowledge of events. Cf. God was hearing and knowing[...].
3:153[2] Lit.: in your rear.
3:153[3] Understood by some to indicate spoil; this makes sense since the ability to fall back in a disciplined manner without giving way to an inclination to plunder is a key component of military success. However, it may possibly indicate an honourable death in the cause of God followed by the Garden.
3:154[1] Arabic: ahammathum anfusuhum. This form IV verb occurs only once in the text. The collocation here is bent into various shapes by translators. For example, Saheeh International has here: another faction worried about themselves; while Hilali & Khan have: while another party was thinking about themselves (as how to save their own selves, ignoring the others and the Prophet SAW). Standard dictionaries such as Wehr (p. 1210) list meanings as: to grieve, distress, concern; to be on one's mind; to worry, to trouble — all of which take a direct object, as here. Here, anfusuhum (their souls; their selves) is the subject. Thus the sense which holds most weight on that basis, is a reflexive value based in grieved or distressed, which is how Arabist A. J. Arberry renders the segment: and a party themselves had grieved; and I follow his logic, though not his exact wording.

3:159[1] This is the Qur'anic model for executive decision-making: 1. Consult with those affected. 2. Make a decision. 3. Trust in God.
3:159[2] Arabic: mutawakkilūn — those who place their trust. Clearly, every man places his trust in something whether he understands or admits that fact to himself or not — so something more than those who place their trust must be meant. After consideration of all instances (3:159, 12:67, 14:12, 39:38) it is clear that what is meant is those who would place their trust aright (i.e. they intend to place it where it is justified). The following verse argues in favour of such a course. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
3:160[1] I.e. when he has forsaken you.
3:160[2] See note to (al) mu'minūn at 8:2.
3:161[1] Arabic: ghalla — to shackle, to fetter (Wehr, p. 795). The broader context treats of forcing followers; I therefore render in this context as coerce. Certainly, this verb is rendered by the Traditionalist in the same vain as Wehr lists in most of its remaining contexts (5:64, 69:30; see also nouns at 7:43, 7:157, 13:5, 15:47, 34:33, 36:8, 40:71, 59:10, 76:4, and the passive participle at 5:64, 17:29). However, typically, the Traditionalist is committed here to his theme of war booty, and renders accordingly. Arabist A. J. Arberry, however, focuses here on fraudulent, and Muhammad Asad uses deceive (which meanings are found in addition to those supplied by Wehr, in Lane, p. 2332), and Asad supplies the following comment: I.e., by attributing his own opinions to God, and then appealing to the believers to place their trust in Him alone. However contrary to reason such deceit may be, it is a common view among non-believers that the Prophet himself "composed" the Qur'an and thereupon falsely attributed it to divine revelation.
3:162[1] The Qur'an asks the reader a series of comparative questions; some are fully formed, some have implicit conclusions. They all open following the same convention: Is then he who[...]? The full set is found at 3:162, 9:109, 10:35, 11:17, 13:19, 13:33, 16:17, 28:61, 32:18, 35:8, 39:19, 39:22, 39:24, 41:40, 47:14, 67:22. 3:175[3] The grammar is plain, and is followed without deviation by A. J. Arberry who, like me, treats awliyā' (allies) as the direct object: That is Satan frightening his friends. Other translators modify the words on the page to achieve alternative outcomes; e.g. Saheeh International: That is only Satan who frightens [you] of his supporters, and Hilali & Khan: It is only Shaitan (Satan) that suggests to you the fear of his Auliya' [supporters and friends (polytheists, disbelievers in the Oneness of Allah and in His Messenger, Muhammad SAW)]. Cf. 39:16.

3:179[2] I.e. in that state or condition. Muhammad Asad supplies an alternative meaning. While I do not embrace his acceptance of Islamic history uncritically, I provide his comment here in full: Some commentators (e.g., Razi) assume that the expression ma antum 'alayhi (lit.. "that upon which you are") denotes here "the condition in which you are" - i.e., the state of weakness and confusion in which the Muslim community found itself after the battle of Uhud - and that, therefore, this passage is addressed to the believers. This interpretation, however, is not plausible. Apart from the fact that the believers are here referred to in the third person, while ma antum 'alayhi is in the second person plural, the latter expression denotes almost invariably, both in the Qur'an and in the Traditions, people's mode of life and beliefs. Moreover, we have reliable reports to the effect that Ibn 'Abbas, Qatadah, Ad-Dahhak, Muqatil and Al-Kalbi unhesitatingly declared that the people addressed here are "those who deny the truth" to whom the preceding passages refer (see Tabari's and Baghawi's commentaries on this verse). Read in this sense, the above passage implies that the believers would, in time, differ from the unbelievers not only in their convictions but also in their social aims and their manner of living.

3:183[1] The effect of the parenthesis I provide above is expressed also by A. J. Arberry, Hilali & Khan, and Saheeh International.
3:183[2] See grammar note to 2:91.
3:184[1] Arabic: zubur (sg. zabūr). The underlying etymology is of writing or book. Translated by some as Psalms in some contexts, this value does not hold across the set (3:184, 16:44, 23:53, 26:196, 35:25, 54:43, 54:52). However, the Psalms are found within that portion of the Hebrew scriptures called כְּתוּבִים (ketuvim) or writings, which appears to be the underlying sense. We render here according to context. All instances reference this verse.

3:186[6] Some renderings emphasise constancy, e.g. A. J.

Arberry has here: surely that is true constancy; while Saheeh International sees the clause in a different light: indeed, that is of the matters [worthy] of resolve. My understanding is that what precedes, when adhered to, is a deciding factor in affairs, and I render accordingly. This collocation is found also at 31:17 and 42:43, and I render likewise there also. This understanding finds support, for example, in the collocation at the close of 3:200.

3:200[2] The form III of this verb occurs only once in the text. Most translators emphasise the next degree of patience in the sequence, employing values of constancy or steadfastness, as have I. However, some emphasise the military connotation which the verb certainly encompasses.

4:1[4] Lit.: the wombs.
4:2[1] Arabic: yatāmā (pl.) yatīm (sg.) — orphan, fatherless. I render as fatherless throughout since the context treats in many places of those who have been either abandoned by fathers, are of unknown parentage, or whose fathers have been killed in battle. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.
4:2[2] I.e. your bad things for their good things.
4:2[3] The Qur'an mentions major infractions of moral law in a number of places, however this is the only instance where the formulation ḥūban kabīran is found — and the only instance of ḥūban in the text.
4:3[1] I.e. have reason to fear. See note to 2:182.

4:3[7] In modern society slavery is no longer recognised, though widely practiced in more subtle forms.
4:3[8] I.e. from the right course. Arabic: 'āla — to deviate from the right course; to oppress, distress (someone), weigh heavily (upon) (Wehr, p. 770). This is the only instance of this root in the text.
4:4[1] Arabic: niḥlah. This word occurs only once. While I set no store by non-Qur'anic sources, I include Muhammad Asad's comment here for interest: The expression nihlah signifies the giving of something willingly, of one's own accord, without expecting a return for it (Zamakhshari). It is to be noted that the amount of the marriage-portion, or dower which the bridegroom has to give to the bride has not been circumscribed by the Law: it depends entirely on the agreement of the two parties, and may consist of anything, even a mere token. According to several authentic Traditions recorded in most of the compilations, the Prophet made it clear that "even an iron ring" may be enough if the bride is willing to accept it, or, short of that, even "the imparting to thy bride of a verse of the Qur'an".
4:5[1] I.e. incompetent.
4:5[2] Some insist on reading the possessive here their instead of your. While the question of whether their is what the text means can be debated, the simple fact is that it is not what it says.
4:5[3] Arabic: ma'rūf. See note to 2:178.
4:5[4] Arabic: qawl — speech; teaching, doctrine; saying, word.
4:6[1] I.e. to see if they are ready for the responsibilities of manhood.

¶4.3 4:15[1] Arabic: fāḥishat, faḥshā'. See Notepad XI.iii.
4:15[2] I.e. four faithful witnesses who personally witnessed illicit sexual intercourse (coitus) take place.
4:15[3] My understanding of this is that they are to be chaperoned outside the house by competent family members. The concept and importance of sexual purity and reliance thereon will not be obvious to degenerate moderns. However, the Qur'anic position is that — along with faith — sexual purity is the basis of marriage, family, society, and civilisation, and a key ingredient in spiritual and moral progress. See 33:33, 33:55. See also Article SZC.
4:15[4] Lit.: a.
4:15[5] Cf. 24:1-34.
4:16[1] Grammar: dual relative pronoun.
4:16[2] I.e. sexual immorality.
4:16[3] Arabic root: '-dh-y. The Traditionalist applies meanings here to the verb from which he shies away in other contexts so that he might achieve his predetermined goal: namely, the right to dole out the brutality and violence he justifies on the basis of the literature he prefers to the Qur'an. By doing proper research, one sees that the values he prefers here (such as punish) are unsustainable on any pan-textual basis. (There exists a Qur'anically-based punishment for those found guilty of the act under discussion here, but no such punishment is mentioned or called for at this particular juncture.) Part of the Traditionalist's abiding problem is that he is unable — at least on the basis of observable data — to understand the point of this legislation; he is, as one typically pictures him, straining for any opportunity to stage a lynching; to inflict unspeakable terror upon some poor, usually powerless individual (generally female), which spectacle helps deflect attention from his own towering incompetence and conspicuous lack of achievement. The purpose of the directive which has eluded him is, nevertheless, instantly clear to someone capable of rational thought, and it is this: it exists to set a society on a course which inclines towards virtue rather than away from it. We don't have to go far for an example since such a society existed in most Western countries until WWII. In a society of such a type, if a man and a woman are determined to have illicit sexual relations, nothing and no one can stop them given sufficient resources and opportunity. However, the society at large is not calibrated to facilitate such activity and does not condone such behaviour by providing social acceptance, hotel rooms, or collusion, etc. To look at this entire question of legislation objectively, one is struck by the fact that in order to be found guilty a couple would have to be so breathtakingly indiscreet that any subsequent punishment might be said to be justified on the basis of stupidity — were it not on the basis of immorality — given the lengths one would have to go to in order to be caught. None of this interests the Traditionalist, of course. He does not follow the Qur'anic directives; where murdering people is concerned he is nothing if not inventive — and he claims that the Qur'an is abrogated by the 'sunnah' of the Prophet (the expression sunnah of the Prophet being shorthand for an endless list of things — an unspecified number of which are horrific, stupid, and extremely unfair — which he, the Traditionalist wants to do, and which are not in the Qur'an). The false claimers of guidance are described at length in the Qur'an. They do not end well; the best advice one can offer is to be sure not to be one of them. All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse. See Notepad X.

4:19[2] Lit.: forcibly. The Traditionalist generally, somewhat predictably — and incorrectly — reads this to mean that one may not inherit the woman herself. The plain purport of the verse in a context (prior to a related aside which then feeds back into the main subject) of right financial dealings with women is: you may not compel a wife to leave you her substance when she dies by retaining her purely to inherit from her on her death or by disallowing her right to make bequests. In Qur'anic usage waratha + direct object (as here) means to inherit from (see an example at 4:11) and not to inherit (e.g. something). Though I was unaware of Muhammad Asad's thought on this subject at the time of my analysis, I include part of this comment here for broader context: According to one of the interpretations advanced by Zamakhshari, this refers to a man's forcibly keeping an unloved wife - and thus preventing her from marrying another man - in the hope of inheriting her property under the provisions specified in the first sentence of verse 12 above.

4:24[4] I.e. of those categories of females lawful to you.
4:24[5] Marriage in the Qur'an is based in reality, not in fleeting, elusive, and changing emotions such as the nonsense promoted by media currently about 'romance', and pumped into the minds of both sexes via electronic delivery systems. Outside of such indoctrination, naturally, women wish to invest their youth and charms in men who are stronger, richer, and cleverer than are they; and, naturally, men wish to invest their resources and energies in women who are attractive, virtuous, obedient, and appreciative (cf. 4:34). By founding the marriage contract in an agreement of a material nature, the couple (in concert with their families) can establish the relationship upon reality, and thus increase the chances of creating a successful union and secure environment for their children. Western countries baulk at the notion of setting a price for the man to cross the threshold to marriage, claiming that feelings are what matters. Thus, men are hoodwinked into entering into a formal, binding, legal contract in which women have no formal, binding, legal obligations, and upon which women are encouraged to renege at will; the society thinks nothing of supporting the woman in destroying the man financially, and depriving children of a father, once the 'feelings' of the woman change — which they frequently do given the typical modern woman's indoctrination inputs (entertainment, education, etc.). Viewed objectively, the current Western model is both barbaric and evil, and constitutes a systematic transfer of wealth from the hands of those with a higher potential to generate independence through wealth (men), into the hands of those with a lower ability to do so (women). Under this form of soft tyranny, men's wealth-creating power is taken from them by the state, and substantially frittered away by women on consumption items of no lasting value; thus, the society as a whole is made dysfunctional and dependent upon the state, and is more easily manipulated by the elites than would otherwise be the case.

4:24[6] Arabic: junāḥ. See Notepad XI.ii.

4:24[7] Once the obligation has been given and accepted, there is no Qur'anic impediment to the couple deciding their affairs as they wish.

4:25[1] Arabic: muḥṣināt — chaste (women). The apposition is between chaste (i.e. someone known to have had sexual relations only within marriage) and someone about whom that is not known; muḥṣināt are women protected — from within the culture or tribe — not those brought in as captives (by war or purchase) whose past is not known. The word muḥṣināt is often translated as free in such contexts (which I have done here) which is correct in principle but requires additional information to be understood.

4:25[7] Arabic: muḥṣināt — chaste (women). See note to the beginning of 4:25.

4:25[8] The Qur'an advises men restraint in such a case, indicating that the most desirable course of action is to marry free, believing women from within one's own community. Questions of tribe and race are not ignored by the Qur'an. Tribal and racial consciousness and related concerns are normal in all healthy societies which wish to survive.

¶4.6

4:34[1] I.e. their honour, rights, and true nature; their modesty, and the private life at home.

4:34[2] I.e. have reason to fear. See note to 2:182.

4:34[3] Arabic: ḍaraba. Various imaginative interpretations of this instance of this word exist, particularly among more 'modernised' and 'modernising' Muslims. Their efforts notwithstanding, the verb ḍaraba still does mean to beat or spank or strike and in the context here there is little else that it could mean. Naturally, this single clause can be wrest from its context and made much of by people who feel that they benefit from so doing. I leave such people to enjoy whatever it is they think they gain from their activities; we all go to God. My position is this: the judicious spanking of a recalcitrant wife has been practiced by husbands who wished to achieve and maintain domestic harmony since time immemorial. It is recommended in the medieval Russian Orthodox handbook Домострой (Domostroi), for example, and was practiced commonly in both ancient and later Western culture prior to the moral degradation which began in earnest following WWI and then with accelerated force following WWII. However, wife-spanking is still practiced today quite widely within certain Christian circles, and information attesting to its efficacy and value within both religious and non-religious households is not difficult to find. Contemporary liberals will be outraged by these facts, just as they are outraged by most facts. The high divorce rates, confusion of roles, demonstrable dysfunction, moral relativity, and celebration of blatant perversion which are standard fare among the victims of Cultural Marxism serve as an indication of the extent to which one should be guided by such people. Some women prefer a man who is forceful — they simply do. If a woman has grown up with a father who is strict, it will be difficult for her to respect a man who lets her manipulate or belittle him. In addition, many married couples attest to the fact that when the man takes full charge of his wife, it both saves the marriage and infuses it with vital energy and commitment. In the Qur'anic context, one must not forget that this verse is directed to those who heed warning (see 4:29). Both parties accept the Qur'an and have access to it. The woman will know that if she pushes the man far enough he must — in keeping with the Qur'an — respond eventually as outlined at 4:34. She can, of course, initiate separation proceedings at any time. If she has not done so, and has pushed her husband beyond admonishment and separate sleeping arrangements, it is reasonable to assume that she is in tacit agreement with what is to follow. As intelligent, reasonable people of good will we can take it for granted that actual crimes against the person are to be responsibly prosecuted; if we are not intelligent, reasonable people of good will, our primary problems reside there and not in the quality of the guidance we are given. See also 38:44 and note thereto.

¶4.7

4:43[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

4:43[2] Arabic: ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. Generically, ṣalāt denotes duty. In its primary sense it is the duty both to serve and seek help from God alone as per the covenant at 1:1-7 of which the statement at 1:5 forms our part — commitment to which also satisfies the pre-existing obligation every man has to acknowledge God's authority (see 7:172). In the present context, the preceding segment (at least from 4:36 to this point and, more fully, from the beginning of the chapter) makes a strong argument in favour of the core Qur'anic doctrine; it summarises what one is signing up for. The verse at 4:43 then addresses those who have heeded what precedes. I understand the approach to the duty here as a point at which one may choose to make a serious undertaking to accept the doctrine of God and make a public statement to that effect. The actual contract between the Lord and his servant is found at 1:1-7, aptly placed at the very beginning of the Qur'an. It is my opinion that the prayer system of the Traditionalist retains in vestigial form the original acceptance statement of Qur'anic principles by dint of its inclusion of al fātiḥah in every unit of its prayer system — despite the fact that few, if any, of those called Muslims today guess at its primary significance or purpose.

4:43[3] The instance here of the form VIII of the verb ghasala is the only one in the text. This fact makes it vulnerable to the Traditionalist's practice of ascribing highly specialised values to rare or unique terms — values which have no explicit Qur'anic basis — and this opportunity has not been overlooked. The objective facts are these: the gh-s-l root occurs a total of four times (4:43, 5:6, 38:42, 69:36). Certainly, the gh-s-l root means to wash; and in Arabic today the form VIII verb has a reflexive sense both of to wash and to wash completely. The Traditionalist, for his part, generally claims two types of 'religious' washing: ghusl and wudhu. By ghusl he means a full-body wash (which is what he claims at this verse). By wudhu he means the washing method (with some embellishments of his own) outlined at 5:6. He has criteria for when either ghusl or wudhu should be done. These criteria do not correlate with the scenarios given at either 4:43 or 5:6 (for example, he claims that what he calls ghusl is needed after contact with women but not that it is needed after defecation). The terms ghusl and wudhu are nowhere found in the Qur'an. These are verifiable facts. My understanding based on the methodology here is this: what is meant by unclean is made clear in the sentence following the expression then find not water (namely: after illness, a journey, defecation or sexual intercourse). This is a concession — what to do when one does not find water. What, then, is to be done in the case where water is to be found? That instruction is given at 5:6. The correlating verse at 5:6 does not use the form VIII of the verb ghasala to describe the washing process; it bears no relation to the non-Qur'anic word ghusl. It uses another expression: purify yourself (based on the ṭ-h-r root). What purify yourself means in the context is, likewise, understood by inference from the concessive allowance at that verse, one which is identical to that at 4:43. On this basis, my conclusions are these: the words for washing at 4:43 and 5:6 mean the same thing; the washing requirement for both cases (given access to water) is outlined at 5:6; the terms ghusl and wudhu have no Qur'anic basis (there being no case in which ghusl as understood by the Traditionalist is a Qur'anic requirement, and his requirement for what he calls wudhu exceeds that mentioned in the Qur'an). I am not arguing against washing fully after sexual contact; I am arguing against ascribing to the revealed word of God values it does not contain. Human washing practices and requirements over and above what is specified in the text are a matter of personal taste and judgment, and not of revealed imperative.

4:44[1] Arabic: alam tara. See note to 2:243.

4:44[2] Arabic: al kitāb. See Notepad IX.ii. I take those given a portion of the Writ to denote those who have access to some part, or even all, of an authentic revelation, yet who — either by force of social conditioning, informational distractions, supplanting doctrines and sources, or for some other reason — manage only an imperfect or warped understanding of the revelation. This convention occurs at 3:23, 4:44, 4:51. Cf. 7:37.

4:46[1] Arabic: alladhīna hādū. Understood here as those thought of today as Jews by faith, but not necessarily of Israelite descent. See Notepad XIII.i.

4:46[2] I.e. they take words out of context.

4:46[3] Or Hear thou and be thou not heard. The underlying sense is: don't believe your own ears but listen instead to what we tell you. This is an instance of the type of chutzpah associated historically with Jews, and practiced on an industrial scale today on all major fronts affecting temporal power — the distortion and perversion of both reality and history by media and the promotion of obvious fraud taught as science being among the most visible manifestations of this characteristic.

4:46[4] Cf. 2:104.

4:46[5] I.e. speaking disingenuously.

4:46[6] Arabic: dīn. See Notepad V.

4:46[7] The Qur'an is clear: God cursed those who follow — or followed — Judaism for their denial; that is, he cursed those among them who denied. Those among them — the Qur'an states that it is a few — who hold to Judaism and who believe (i.e. have not denied by diluting or perverting faith in God into some purely materialistic, deterministic or racial religion) and who do good works have their reward on the Day of Judgment as does any other believer. This is a recurring theme in the chapter; see particularly 4:155-162. As a side note, I have observed in life that one of the mechanisms by which God curses a man is to give him plenty of resources — by the misuse of which he frequently condemns himself.

4:46[8] Arabic: lā yu'minūn. Qur'anic usage implies: (are those) lost in darkness. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.ii.

4:47[2] Arabic: al kitāb. See Notepad IX.ii.

4:47[3] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

4:47[4] Or bring them to an end. Muhammad Asad comments here: [...]It is to be noted that the term dubur (of which adbar is the plural) does not always signify the "back" of a thing - as most of the translators assume - but often stands for its "last part" or "end" (cf. Lane III, 846).

4:48[1] Much is made of this by the Traditionalist, as though it were an unpardonable sin, something akin to the Christian's fear of blaspheming against the Holy Spirit (although truly convincing arguments for what that phrase means are hard to find). The statement here can only mean that God does not forgive shirk in one who dies committing it, otherwise what would be the point of reasoning with idol worshippers, atheists or — as is more common today — those who worship themselves and their solipsistic, foolish appetites (all of which ideologies are fundamentally shirk) if God will not forgive them if they repent?

4:48[2] See note to Arabic root: sh-r-k at 6:78 and Notepad VI.

4:49[1] Arabic: alam tara. See note to 2:243.

4:49[2] Lit.: those who increase themselves in purity. Arabic: zakkā. See note to 2:129; i.e. those who vaunt their own purity (something man does in religious pride); it is God who purifies.

4:49[3] Arabic: bal. See note to 2:88.

4:49[4] Arabic: zakkā. See note to 2:129.

¶4.8 4:51[1] Arabic: alam tara. See note to 2:243.

4:51[2] Arabic: al kitāb. See Notepad IX.ii. I take those given a portion of the Writ to denote those who have access to some part — or even all — of an authentic revelation, yet who — either by force of social conditioning, informational distractions, supplanting doctrines and sources, or for some other reason — manage only an imperfect or warped understanding of the revelation. This convention occurs at 3:23, 4:44, 4:51. Cf. 7:37.

4:51[3] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

4:51[4] Arabic: jibt. This word occurs only once and is not of Arabic origin. There is a number of words in the Qur'anic text which are of Syriac and other origin. The existence of words of foreign origin is advanced as an argument against the purity of the Qur'an, an argument which reveals its inherent weakness once we apply such a standard to any other language (for example, English). I have been guided to some extent by Muhammad Asad here who comments: The word al-jibt - rendered by me as "baseless mysteries" - is probably, as the Lisan al-'Arab points out, of non-Arabic origin. It denotes, according to some authorities, "something which is worthless in itself" or "something in which there is no good" (Qamus, Baydawi); according to others, it signifies "enchantment" (Umar ibn al-Khattab, Mujahid and Sha'bi as quoted by Tabari; also Qamus); others, again, interpret it as "anything that is worshipped instead of God" (Zamakhshari), and consequently apply it also to idols and idol-worship (Qamus, Lisan al-'Arab)[...]. Taking all these interpretations into account, al-jibt may be defined as "a combination of confusing ideas (dijl), fanciful surmises (awham) and fictitious stories (khurafat)" (Manar V, 157) - in other words, abstruse mysteries without any foundation in fact. The modern embodiment of such a concept is Hollywood: lies built upon dreams upon a mirage which then suck the illusion-addict into false stories with embedded, weaponised, impoverished morals designed to make him depraved. I would add to this category fraudulent science — which today has all but merged with Hollywood — predicated on its chief stars Newton, Darwin, Einstein, and NASA, and mainstream media which is run by the same people and provides nothing more than a parody of journalism.

4:56[1] Arabic: āyāt. See Notepad VIII.

4:57[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

4:57[2] Lit.: most shading shade or dense shade. As Muhammad Asad notes (referencing Lane, p. 1915), the expression contains connotations of ease and protection.

4:58[1] Lit.: people.

4:59[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

4:59[2] I.e. what God sent through his messenger.

4:59[3] Lit.: command. This is predicated on those people themselves obeying God and the Messenger (namely the Qur'an); if they do not and we obey them, we have made them lords in place of God.

4:59[4] I.e. to what God sent through his messenger; and in any event, the Messenger is now dead. This verse has been used to hamstring Muslims intellectually and politically as much as Romans 13:1-7 have been used to neutralise Christians. By reading the broader context it is clear that the believer's responsibility is to what comes from God in the Qur'an. Blind obedience to human authority leads to tyranny. We are responsible alone for our actions on the Day of Judgment.

4:59[5] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

4:59[6] This is not a concession; it is a command. We are meant to check what we are told by those who claim to lead us against what God and his messenger brought us: the Qur'an.

4:59[7] Generally, ta'wīl is rendered here interpretation. But this collocation (aḥsanu ta'wīlan) has the sense best in respect of result (see Lane, p. 127). This collocation occurs here and at 17:35.

¶4.9 4:60[1] Arabic: alam tara. See note to 2:243.

4:60[2] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.

4:60[3] Arabic: ṭāghūt. See note to 2:256.

4:60[4] This continues the thought of the previous verses. Faith in any authority not predicated on what God himself has given is itself a form of idol-worship.

4:60[5] Or adversary (against the command of God). See Article SJC.

4:61[1] This, too, is a continuation of the preceding argument against accepting as authority other than that which God has given.

4:61[2] Arabic: munāfiqūn. See note to 4:138.

4:61[3] Arabic: ṣadda + 'an. See note to 8:47.

4:62[1] Lit.: Then how[...]?

4:62[2] The fulfilment of this warning may be witnessed today in the pitiful condition of Muslim countries. The countries ruled by the Traditionalist are either so awful no one (including, increasingly, the Traditionalist himself) wants to live there, or they are puppet states — or both. While the Traditionalist has a list of people he blames, the actual burden of blame lies with himself; he has abandoned the Qur'an. His condition is not the result of freak or unfair laws; it is the direct consequence of his choices.

4:62[3] Or conciliation. Arabic: tawfīq. This word occurs just twice in the text: here and at 11:88. It is said by some to mean conciliation here and there to mean success. I note the discrepancy, and render consistently using success, but do not find the point worth contesting aggressively on a pan-textual basis.

4:63[1] Lit.: far-reaching.

4:63[2] Arabic: qawl — speech; teaching, doctrine; saying, word.

4:64[1] This verse clearly treats of a time when Muḥammad was alive. There are many such verses, most of which are (correctly) treated by the Traditionalist as of historical interest only. However, this verse is among a subset of the larger set just mentioned, which is used ad nauseam by those who dispute the Qur'an's claim to be complete, in support of a literature which the Messenger never saw, never endorsed, and which was written by Persians some 200 years after the time of Muḥammad. Quite how usurping the Qur'an on the basis of this later literature equates with making Muḥammad 'a judge in what arises between them' is something the Traditionalist does not examine — and cannot allow to be examined. Rather, he relies upon a conflation in the mind of the gullible and uncritical believer between the writings of later Persians and verses such as this, and then attacks and accuses of impiety any who begin to wander off the reservation of those assumed conclusions.

4:65[1] Arabic: lā yu'minūn. Qur'anic usage implies: (are those) lost in darkness. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.ii.

4:65[2] I.e. judging on the basis of what he received from God: the Qur'an.

4:65[3] Lit.: submit in submission.

4:66[1] I have rendered literally. Arguments are made in favour of: Kill some among you; cf. 2:54, 2:85, 4:29, 4:66.

4:66[2] Cf. 2:265.

4:75[1] Arabic: ẓālimūn. See note to 2:229.

4:75[2] This verse sets up the segment of this chapter (rejoined in earnest at 4:101) which treats of the obligation upon believers to attempt to gain freedom for other believers held under oppressive regimes.

4:76[6] This is true on many levels, the ultimate of which is the fact that there is no escaping death and what follows. Cf. 52:42, 52:46.

¶4.11 4:77[1] Arabic: alam tara. See note to 2:243.

4:77[2] I.e. do not fight us. Given the context and the subsequent actions of such people, it is clear that these are people who seem to come over to the side of the believers quickly. But they are those who turn with every tide; they have no deep conviction, but are — as they see it — pragmatists.

4:77[4] Arabic: ātū al zakāt. See note to 2:43 and Article SZC.

4:77[5] Arabic: lawlā. See Notepad XIV.

4:77[6] Opinions vary as to where the direct speech ends; some translators close the speech marks at the end of the present verse, others at the end of the first sentence in the verse following. My own sense is that direct speech in comparable scenarios tends to be short with what follows serving as exposition.

4:77[7] See note to al muttaqūn at 2:2.

4:78[1] From this point through to the end of 4:80 comprises a section which makes a distinction between collective and individual responsibility; it does so by means of shifts between the third-person plural and second-person singular pronouns (them and thee). The argument is that the fate of the collective is in the hand of God directly, whereas an individual's fate is a function — at least in an immediate sense — of his own decisions.

4:78[2] Arabic: sayyi'a. See Notepad XI.ix.

4:78[3] Arabic: ḥadīth — story; account; narrative, statement.

4:79[1] Arabic: sayyi'a. See Notepad XI.ix.

4:79[2] The Traditionalist contests this assertion, both in his doctrine and in his actions. He asserts that he — the Traditionalist — must himself be a witness to the prophethood of Muḥammad (entry into his religion is made on such a basis, and he bawls a confirmation of the same from the rooftops multiple times a day). Such Qur'anic notions as God either guiding or not guiding, or the sufficiency of God as a witness to the prophethood of Muḥammad are missing from both his understanding and his presentation. With him, worship of a religion is the principal thing; and these two Qur'anic principles are repugnant to that religion.

4:80[1] I.e. what God sent through his messenger.

4:80[2] The Traditionalist abuses this verse endlessly to shoehorn an entirely separate and specious literature into the mind. Cf. 3:7 and 4:64 and notes thereto. A messenger brings a message; the Qur'an is the message brought by Muḥammad. In any case, the Traditionalist does not quote the entire verse, since the end of it does not suit his requirements.

4:81[1] Lit.: they say.

4:81[2] One notes that the Qur'an is a compendium of those things which its recipient is commanded to say; (cf. Arabic: qul).

4:82[1] Arabic: afalā. See Notepad XIV.

4:82[2] Arabic: qur'ān — reading, recital, recitation, something which is read out.

4:83[1] The construction here echoes some part of that at 4:59. Since unlike 4:59 no reference is made here to God, the implication is that the case is temporal in nature and no recourse to revelation is required: believers should tell those in authority so the appropriate people may be informed.

4:83[2] Lit.: command.

4:85[2] Arabic: sayyi'a. See Notepad XI.ix.
4:85[3] Arabic: muqīt. This word is formed from the q-w-t root in which senses of feeding and nourishing dominate. Wehr (p. 930) gives the meaning of al muqīt as the Feeder, the Nourisher. The only remaining instance in the text formed from this root is the noun at 41:10; that is rendered here nourishment, and likewise or similarly by translators generally. At 4:85, however, translations vary markedly, with some emphasising values of power or control (A. J. Arberry and N. J. Dawood), others of watching or witness (Muhammad Asad and Hilali & Khan), and others of keeping (Saheeh International). The question of the origins of these divergent interpretations is beyond the remit of the present work. I have defaulted here to the sole commonly agreed sense for the root found within the broader text.
4:87[1] Cf. 2:255, 3:2, 3:6, 3:18, 3:18, 4:87, 6:102, 6:106, 7:158, 9:129, 13:30, 20:8, 20:98, 23:116, 27:26, 28:70, 28:88, 35:3, 39:6, 40:3, 40:62, 40:65, 44:8, 59:22, 59:23, 64:13, 73:9.

¶4.15 4:101[1] Arabic: junāḥ. See Notepad XI.ii.
4:101[2] Arabic: al ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. Generically, al ṣalāt denotes duty. To understand what follows this point one should read from 4:75 since the ṣalāt here, surely, is the duty summarised at 4:75; namely, a campaign recommended for the believers to aid believing men, women and children who have no protectors to escape the clutches of their oppressors. See also notes to the rest of this verse.
4:101[3] I.e. have reason to fear. See note to 2:182.

4:101[5] See note to fitnah at 2:102; i.e. if you think that you are unevenly matched and there is a risk of being destroyed, there is no blame in pulling back.
4:101[6] Arabic: al kāfirūn. See note to 2:19 and Notepad II.iii.
4:101[7] I.e. those who claim to be guided but refuse to obey the instructions given by God — such as the directive here to cut short a journey if there is real danger — are an open enemy to the believers.
4:102[1] The Traditionalist thinks this passage treats of the Messenger leading the faithful in prayer in the field, but an attentive reading shows this not to be the case. Admittedly, one needs to concentrate (4:82 implies strongly that this will be a requirement), to understand that this segment begins at 4:75, and to realise that each point it treats of develops the narrative. But when one is not welded to a preconceived value for ṣalāt and no longer needs to fight the text to achieve predetermined religious outcomes, a clear picture comes into view. This narrative treats of a rescue mission, one focused upon freeing those held under oppression with no means to free themselves. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC.
4:102[2] I.e. of those who ignore warning.
4:102[3] Arabic: al ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. By taking an object via la this collocation is made something one does for someone else — which is how the Traditionalist treats the text here also, but with very different results. For him, the Messenger is being told to lead believers in a shortened prayer in the field. It has to mean that because he is locked into his value for al ṣalāt. But the scenario is clear if we cease being guided by the Traditionalist's preconceived values, and derive our values from the Qur'an's own usage while remembering the context. In this latter case, the Messenger upholds the ṣalāt (i.e. initiates into monotheistic submission to God) each of those who wishes to emigrate (cf. 2:2 and notes thereto; also 1:1-7). Thus, the order of events in view here is as follows: the army of the believers arrives, and demands the release of the oppressed (but only if it can do so without undue fear, as per 4:101); the oppressed are brought in batches by those who ignore warning; whatever payment or other arrangements are transacted by the leader of the army of the believers with his opposite number; those who ignore warning then withdraw. The oppressors take their precautions and the believers take theirs; no one is killed and no one is harmed.
4:102[4] Namely, the men, women and children who are to be handed over by the oppressors (see note above and also 4:75).
4:102[5] I.e. of those who ignore warning.
4:102[6] Those being released by their oppressors.
4:102[7] Arabic: sajada. See Notepad IV. Here: submitted to God through his covenant (cf. 2:2 and notes thereto; also 1:1-7).
4:102[8] Those being released by their oppressors.

4:103[1] I.e. when the tour of duty is over. Cf. 62:10.
4:103[2] Arabic: al ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. Generically, al ṣalāt denotes duty. Here it is that duty mentioned at 4:75. And — given a successful outcome — the oppressed are now free.
4:103[3] I.e. in any condition.

4:103[7] Arabic: mawqūt — appointed, fixed, set (time); temporary; limited in time, scheduled for a given time. This word occurs only once, which fact has left it vulnerable to specious claims on the part of the Traditionalist. For him, the present phrase implies the punctual performance of a prayer regime found nowhere explicitly stated in the Qur'an. Such a conclusion is possible only if one imports one's values into the Qur'anic text from elsewhere then reads the result in a way which is contingent upon a pre-existing set of conclusions while choosing to disregard the fact that those values do not fit the text into which they are imported in a number of cases. The plain reading of the text without such an overlay imposed upon it is that our duty to God is not open-ended; it has a beginning and an end. This could reasonably reference a specific duty (such as the one which is the subject of the segment). The life of a believer as a whole, likewise, has an ordained beginning and end.

In the broader context, this can be understood either — as I incline to — as a continuation of that directive which began at 4:75 to find and rescue our brethren in faith who have no one to help them or, as per the Traditionalist's typical reading, as a directive to persist against an enemy.

Hence, according to some philologists, the plural form inath signifies "inanimate things" (cf. 4:127[3] They already have an answer (4:3-6). This section illustrates the archetypal, incorrect attitude towards Muḥammad — that of asking him for rulings. The Messenger cannot give rulings; the ruling is from God. This section (4:127-

134) has a chiding tone: restating patiently points which have been made, repeatedly stating that all that is in the heavens and the earth belongs to God, and closing with the observation that God can replace the recipients of the message at any time with another people.

4:135[3] Renderings of this collocation vary here markedly. For example, A. J Arberry renders: stands closer to; Hilali & Khan have: is a Better Protector to; N. J. Dawood has: knows better about; and Saheeh International has: is more worthy of. I have aligned my reading with that of A. J. Arberry since it both agrees with the Arabic and includes within it some of the emphasis favoured by other translators.
4:135[4] Muhammad Asad identifies the core point in his comment: I.e., "do not allow the fact that a man is rich to prejudice you in his favour or against him, and do not, out of misplaced compassion, favour the poor man at the expense of the truth".

Usually translated as hypocrites, the Qur'anic definition found at 4:137 supplies an additional nuance: munāfiqūn are those characterised by a lack of firmness of purpose; persons easily tossed about on the waves of circumstance. While this value is related to hypocrisy, it is also distinct from it. Strictly speaking, hypocrisy is pretending to believe something that one does not. The persons described here, however, vacillate rather than merely dissimulate. In short, they are waverers, and this and related words are rendered accordingly. All instances reference this verse.

4:157[3] See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.
4:157[4] Or put to death by stake. Arabic: ṣalaba. By convention the Traditionalist has understood ṣalaba as to crucify. That understanding is, perhaps, at odds with what Qur'anic usage indicates. In the Qur'an, Fir'awn is called the Lord of Stakes (38:12, 89:10) — which collocation is typically rendered thus by the Traditionalist himself. This fact certainly suggests that the form of capital punishment meted out by Fir'awn featured a stake. The options available for killing a man on a stake are limited. In close proximity to the verb commonly rendered crucify (ṣalaba) Fir'awn threatens that punishment will be inflicted 'on the trunks of date-palms' (20:71) — thus lending credence to the notion that the trunks of date-palms were trimmed and sharpened to facilitate impalement. In addition, Fir'awn threatens to cut off hands and feet from alternate sides before executing the punishment in question (7:124, 20:71, 26:49). Attempting to crucify one thus disfigured would be both impractical and run the risk of creating morbid farce — which itself would defeat the point of most of what benefits a tyrant from the public torture of his enemies: the creation of fear. Finally, a date-palm does not possess a crossbar, nor can one readily be made from a second date-palm — a requisite item if we are discussing crucifixion in an intellectually honest manner. However, I render ṣalaba and ṣallaba throughout as to crucify, as per the norm, and confine my dissent to the notes.
4:157[5] Arabic: shubbiha — to be made similar, to be made uncertain or doubtful. The core fact here is plain: they did not kill him. The implications are immediate and obvious for both Christians and Jews, as well as for relations between the two groups. Under the Islamic extension of the Christian extension of the dominant Jewish Egypt-Palestine thesis, it is supposed that the likeness of ʿĪsā fell upon another man who was killed in his stead. Under the ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis, ʿĪsā is an entirely separate individual to that killed at Jerusalem in the 1st century CE, one who lived centuries beforehand and was conflated by Paul with that Yeshua who was killed at Jerusalem and other figures to form the Christian mythos, and the Jews simply killed — or had killed by the agency of the Romans — the wrong man, believing him to be the Messiah. See Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.
4:158[1] Arabic: bal. See note to 2:88.
4:158[2] I.e. the agreement taken at 4:154.
4:158[3] This verse has been the subject of interesting but unconvincing interpretations regarding the death and subsequent status of ʿĪsā. The Traditionalist presentation is frequently confused and confusing, and the Hilali & Khan translation is typical in this regard: And there is none of the people of the Scripture (Jews and Christians), but must believe in him ['Iesa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), as only a Messenger of Allah and a human being], before his ['Iesa (Jesus) or a Jew's or a Christian's] death (at the time of the appearance of the angel of death). And on the Day of Resurrection, he ['Iesa (Jesus)] will be a witness against them. Underpinning this presentation is the view that ʿĪsā has never died. However, this assertion is impossible to sustain across the broader text since a distinct formula which treats of Yaḥya (whom no one claims never to have died) is employed also with regard to ʿĪsā (compare 19:15 and 19:33; see also 5:75, 3:55). The syntax requires attention to unpack, but there is a single, cogent argument which runs across the broader segment. The argument is this:

- 4:153 The doctors of the Law ask thee (Muḥammad) to bring down upon them a Writ
- 4:154 Rehearses the scenario when a Writ was in fact brought down, one brought down for their agreement. The mount was raised above them in confirmation of this agreement. Note: the verb here is rafaʿa (to raise). The agreement is then confirmed.
- There then follows a list of grievances against the doctors of the Law:
  - 4:155 Violation of their agreement; their denial of proofs; their killing of prophets
  - 4:156 Their denial, and calumny against Maryam
  - 4:157 Their saying that they killed the Messiah ʿĪsā, son of Maryam
- 4:158 On the basis of 4:155-4:157 comes the conclusion: God brought it (i.e. the agreement) before him or before himself. The verb rafaʿa + 'ilā means to bring before, bring forward as before a judge or king (Lane, p. 1128). That meaning is confirmed by the words immediately following And God is exalted in might and wise (the word wise in Arabic implies sage judgment).
- 4:159 There is no doctor of the Law (i.e. true doctor of the Law) save will believe therein (i.e. in the agreement mentioned at 4:153) before his death; and on the Day of Resurrection it (the agreement) will be witness against them.
- Verses 4:160-161 continue with grievances against those who hold to Judaism in general on a different basis

4:159[1] The force of the construction is that coming to faith therein before death is the sine qua non of what it is to be a doctor of the Law; cf. there is no marathon runner but will complete a race of 26.23 miles.

4:162[3] See note to 58:4 for Qur'anic usage of to believe in.
4:162[4] The on-the-nose rendering here is: But those firm in knowledge among them and the believers believe in what is sent down[...]. I have used a different word order in the English and some may take issue with that, so I will address what I anticipate to be their concerns. I have strong pan-textual grounds and contextual support for the rendering I have used. To begin with, a second subject often comes in Qur'anic Arabic at the end of the clause, almost as an afterthought (see the following examples 7:155, 7:156, 18:26, 22:37, 24:5, 24:10, 24:20, 24:50, 26:73, 27:18, 27:49, 28:82, 28:83, 34:10, 34:36, 40:71, 43:71, 48:29, 53:62, 57:10, 58:12, 59:8, 93:3). The entire preceding section treats of the Jews, their failings and misdeeds, and both this verse and the verse following indicate and connect with a summary of (mainly Hebrew) patriarchs and key figures. With these facts in view, the phrase in the opening of 4:162 — among them — seems implicitly present within each of three categories which follow: [...]the upholders of the duty (among them), and the renderers of purity (among them), and the believers in God and the Last Day (among them). (It is difficult for the Traditionalist to access this point because he is mesmerised by the words ṣalāt and zakāt to which he is trained from birth to attach alien, non-Qur'anic values.) My second point is that the concept of mu'min (believer) does not pertain exclusively to those who embrace the Qur'an, or those who are — or who call themselves — Muslims, despite the fact that the word has been used historically as though that were the case. There is no direct correlation with belief and any temporal or political grouping. (Rightly understood, a mu'min is one whose condition of soul is imbued with a sampling of Grace by which he inclines towards and appreciates the things of God.) The Qur'anic text objectively regards certain individuals among Christians, Jews and others (as well as those who predate both Jews and Christians) as mu'mins (see 5:43 for example). My position is that the entire passage at 4:153-162 forms one argument and has one focus: the doctors of the Law among the Jews, most of whom are reproved and some of whom are exonerated. There then follows a broader appeal comprising a correlation between what previous messengers received and the present revelation (4:162-170) before the section ends with a final appeal to the doctors of the Law at 4:171.

4:162[5] Firstly, because it is materially the same thing and, secondly, because such people accept the law given to Mūsā as binding upon those who follow Judaism, and a modified form of the same as binding upon those who claim Jesus.

4:175[2] The responsibility for guiding a man to and along the right path lies with God, not with any religion.

4:176[1] The chapter closes with a repeat of the point introduced at 4:127; namely, that no more rulings are to be sought of the Messenger: God has decreed.

4:176[2] Arabic: al kalāla — without an immediate heir. See 4:12 and note thereto.

4:176[3] Arabic: bayyana. See note to 2:69.

5 5:0[1] Arabic: raḥmān. Typically rendered most merciful. See 36:23 and note thereto, note to 1:1, and Notepad I.

5:0[2] The fifth chapter of the Qur'an is by convention called al mā'idah or The Table Spread.

5:1[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

5:1[2] Arabic: ḥurum. This word in this form occurs only here and at 5:95 and 5:96. The Traditionalist claims for ḥurum a specialised, religious connotation (namely, the state of increased sanctity a man is said to be in when on pilgrimage). Naturally, the Traditionalist controls all definitions and details pursuant to this condition, and his formulations are nowhere found in the Qur'an. The point at which the Traditionalist makes the correlation with pilgrimage is found not in the current exhortation, but in the one following at 5:2 and the connection claimed by the Traditionalist is weak since 5:2 simply prohibits preventing those who wish to visit the inviolable place of worship from so doing (as one prohibition among several). The singular form of the word in question occurs at 16:116 (and means unlawful in the sense of forbidden) in a context which does not admit of any other interpretation. On this basis, I understand the same value here (and at 5:95 and 5:96, the only other instances) for the plural ḥurum. It may well be that hunting was forbidden during the time of ḥajj — the forbidding of hunting by outsiders on land otherwise occupied by other people would certainly be an equitable law — however, there is no statement here indicating a direct correlation between ḥajj and the prohibition on hunting. Read cold, without a pre-existing anticipation of any extraneous requirement, the segment here deals simply with times when hunting is forbidden as a restriction with a general application. (I am indebted here to Aidid Safar, whose original insights on this point I have developed and systematised.) See also note to ḥalal at 5:2. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). All instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

5:2[1] Arabic: alladhīna āmanū. See note to 2:257 and Notepad II.iv.

5:2[2] The verb here is the form IV of the ḥ-l-l root. In all other instances it means to make lawful or be made lawful depending on the mood and by extension can mean to lead or to bring or to settle (see 2:187, 2:275, 3:50, 4:24, 4:160, 5:1, 5:4, 5:4, 5:5, 5:87, 5:96, 7:157, 9:37, 9:37, 14:28, 22:30, 33:50, 35:35, 66:1). The instance here at 5:2 is in the negative (unlike all other cases) and treats of something which is already instituted. Such being the case, I concur with most other translators and have rendered accordingly.

5:2[3] Arabic: sha'ā'ir allah — the tokens of God. See note to 2:158.

5:2[4] Arabic: al shahr al ḥarām. See note to 2:194.

5:2[5] Arabic: hadya. See note to 2:196.

5:2[6] Arabic: qalā'ida. This word occurs twice only (5:2 and 5:97) and both instances treat of a single context. This leaves little room to assess its meaning from usage. The Traditionalist asserts a highly specialised value here (and presents himself as the authority, naturally, on the right interpretation and application of his specialised value). For him qalā'ida signifies garlands or necklaces (to be put around the necks of animals selected for slaughter). I reject the value of sacrificial animal for hadya as spurious on the basis of provable Arabic values (see note to 2:196). With regard to qalā'ida I prefer to look to the Arabic language, context, and logic for answers than rely on the Traditionalist and his claims. The facts are these: qalā'ida is a plural noun formed from the q-l-d root. The meanings of the q-l-d root focus on the investment of office, awarding authority, or placing in power. It is true that it can mean to adorn with a necklace, but this meaning is clearly secondary and subsequent to the primary meaning, and grew out of the use of the necklace — or chain — as a badge of authority or office. Since the context, both here and at 5:97, treats of hunting being forbidden the question arises: by whom? On the basis of these considerations I contend that qalā'ida denotes necklaces in the sense of chains of office and not, as the Traditionalist claims, in the sense of necklaces for sacrificial animals — a value which one assumes to have been imposed through a syncretic process originating in Hinduism. (Objective, methodical analysis notes the Hinduistic nature of many of the Traditionalist's rites and practices but finds justification for such practices nowhere in the Qur'an.) In this edition, I give the point to the Traditionalist in my translation, and confine my dissent to the notes. The broader question is entirely moot since al masjid al ḥarām was closed to believers within the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, and my book The God Protocol). Both instances appear in the notes and reference this verse.

5:2[7] Arabic: ḥalal — allowed, permitted; untied, unfastened. The Traditionalist affixes a specialised, purely religious connotation to this word in this case, one which defies corroboration on the basis of the Qur'an. Thus, for the Traditionalist, this instance of this word provides the reverse of what he claims for ḥurum (see 5:1 and note thereto) namely, that condition which exists outside the specialised ritual condition he claims as the meaning of ḥurum. If he is right, he cannot prove it on the basis of the Qur'an; I suspect it is a later fiction, but I cannot definitively prove my suspicion. However, I hold to my standard argument and methodology: firstly, whatever pilgrimage existed, the rites pursuant to it are long gone because the pilgrimage — no matter where the original site was found — was abandoned at the time of the revelation (see note to 9:28, Notepad XVI, and my book The God Protocol); secondly, I insist that consistent application of proven, demonstrable Qur'anic values prevail in all instances of a particular term — including in those cases where the Traditionalist claims highly specialised and arbitrary meanings for particular instances. On this basis, I render ḥalal here according to its proven, accepted, and general meaning.

5:2[8] Arabic: ṣadda + 'an. See note to 8:47.

5:2[9] Arabic: al masjid al ḥarām. See Notepad VII.ii.

5:2[10] The Traditionalist has a cover story taken from later writings which he applies here; however, one of the central points uncovered by the present work is the fact that the believers were told by God to forsake — that is, abandon — al masjid al ḥarām due to its occupation by the idolaters, and it is this event, in my view, which is referenced here. See note to 9:28 and my book The God Protocol.

5:3[1] Muhammad Asad comments here: Lit., "to aim at divining [the future] by means of arrows". This is a reference to the divining-arrows without a point and without feathers used by the pre-Islamic Arabs to find out what the future might hold in store for them. (A comprehensive description of this practice may be found in Lane III, 1247.) As is usual with such historical allusions in the Qur'an, this one, too, is used metonymically: it implies a prohibition of all manner of attempts at divining or foretelling the future.

5:3[3] Arabic: alladhīna kafarū. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.i.

5:3[4] The reason, I suggest, for their despair is that there is no 'religion' to be found within the doctrine — nothing which a priestly class can leverage to insinuate itself between a man and God. The Qur'anic principles are clear and simple and do not require or imply a complex religion which must be interpreted by a priestly class. The religion called today Islam came later.

5:4[1] Arabic: mukallibīn — trainers. This word is from the root k-l-b from which comes kalb (dog). Understood here is the use of hunting animals such as dogs and falcons. The Traditionalist's treatment of dogs as unclean is found nowhere in the Qur'an (cf. 18:18, 18:22).

5:6[2] Arabic: al ṣalāt; i.e. such duty as is incumbent. See note to 2:3 and Article SZC. Generically, al ṣalāt denotes duty. For another case of the same usage see 4:43. Cf. 4:142, 5:58. If we read from the beginning of this chapter, we discern at this point a provision by which those outside the community of the people of the Qur'an may join that community; permission for marital connections with women from other monotheistic communities having just been stated along with a summary of dietary specifics — all information that one from an existing monotheistic faith might want who wishes to join with those who hold to the Qur'an is to hand. In summary, I regard the verses which treat of specific cleanliness (4:43 and 5:6) as relating to a person's entrance into submission to God through that contract with God which is stated at 1:1-7. The Traditionalist's prayer formula today strikes me as a vestigial mechanism: a (typically) unthinking daily re-enactment of the once-meaningful process whereby men entered into genuine contract with God.

5:19[3] Or within the span of. The Traditionalist typically renders the sense here as after a period [of suspension] of the messengers. I follow A. J. Arberry in my translation, and confine my reservations to the notes. I suggest the rendering above for the following reasons: the verb bayyana (announce, make clear) nowhere operates with the preposition 'alā, and the preposition seems to be hanging (the preposition 'alā can have many meanings, to choose one at random given no association with a verb is simply to guess — and if the Traditionalist can guess then so can we all). Secondly, nowhere does the word after appear in the sentence — despite what translations typically presume, imply or insert. Nor does it say between anywhere in the sentence (some translators have it that there is an interval between the appearance of the messengers; but to read min as between in this single instance is a highly original treatment); the primary ways to render min al rusul are: of the messengers or among the messengers or from the messengers. Thirdly, the operative noun fatrah does — as the Traditionalist translators say — mean a period of time or interval or span of time. However, the text simply does not say between messengers, it says of or among messengers. Lastly, I return to the aforementioned hanging 'alā; by constructing the entire verse minus this one item I was able to choose of the many values available to that preposition with some degree of confidence in presenting my alternative reading above (see the beginning of 2:102 for an instance of comparable usage). In summary, I believe what is in view here is that Muḥammad's ministry fell within that total span of time during which messengers came to men, not that it came after a lull in the appearance of messengers.

¶5.4 5:20[1] The Traditionalist, who has typically accepted uncritically the dominant Egypt-Palestine thesis and the Christian extension thereof, has historically experienced a twinge of awkwardness at this juncture, something which may be sampled by acquaintance with Muhammad Asad's attempt to ease those concerns: According to most of the commentators (e.g., Tabari, Zamakhshari, Razi), the "kingship" of the Israelites is a metaphorical allusion to their freedom and independence after their Egyptian bondage, the term "king" being equivalent here to "a free man who is master of his own affairs" (Manor VI, 323 f.) and can, therefore, adopt any way of life he chooses. The Traditionalist's problem — given prior acceptance of the dominant thesis listed above — is that, under that thesis, the children of Israel of the Hebrew scriptures had no kings under Moses; and the statement here at 5:20 brushes against the fur of the prevailing narratives found in the Hebrew scriptures. There exist alternative theses, however. Under the Arabia Felix thesis, for example, Fir'awn is simply a tribal king; moreover, the statements at 7:128-129 and then at 7:137 appear to serve the Arabia Felix thesis against the Egypt-Palestine thesis since the Qur'an suggests — or appears to suggest — that the children of Israel inherited the land held by Fir'awn — a position which the Egypt-Palestine thesis cannot support. Given such a reading, as inheritors to Fir'awn, the children of Israel would indeed have been made kings in the lifetime of Mūsā. There are, of course, other theses which interpret later prophecy in the Hebrew scriptures in terms of ethnic groups entirely distinct from the racial franchise we today call Jews (Black Hebrew Israelites, British Israelism, Christian Identity, etc.) but these are beyond the purview of this work. See Notepad XVI.

5:21[1] Under the Egypt-Palestine thesis this references Palestine. Both the Arabia Felix thesis and ʿAsīr-Ḥejāz thesis field alternative locations within their respective parts of the Arabian Peninsula. See Notepad XVI.

5:32[5] As concerns those today called Jews, it is an inescapable fact that Jews are vastly disproportionately represented among those who may be termed 'committers of excess in the earth'. Jews provided the intellectual justification, funding, and leadership for the Bolshevik revolution, for example; a killing operation which resulted, according to Solzhenitsyn, in sixty-six million deaths in the Soviet Union. One must add to that genocide those killed in World Wars I and II — horrors either largely created or, at the least, exacerbated by Jewish influence and interests — and the ongoing cultural war against both the German and all white peoples in particular, although against most other races and cultures as well, as well as against decency and morality in general. Robotic repetition of the assertion that one who understands such subjects is an anti-Semite (whatever that means) combined with endless outrage and threats of loss of career, position, and reputation have been an effective means of precluding any attempts at self-defence among those who have suffered — and continue to suffer — at the hands of representatives of this group. Personally, I see such actors on the stage of Life as a necessary component for the drama to unfold with the requisite breadth and contrast to make the choices each makes therein both authentic and valid. And the Qur'anic position is clear: we are all going to God; the Judgment will stand; justice will be both righteous and eternal. And in that context, those Jews who have faith in God and the Hereafter and do good deeds have as much to look forward to in eternity as anyone else.
5:33[1] The 'reward' — or recompense — mentioned here points back, surely, to the statement which precedes the parenthesis: that 'it will be as if he killed mankind altogether' (and will, accordingly, be punished both in the World and in the Hereafter — a point made at the end of 5:33). The motif 'corruption in the land' occurs in varying contexts at both 5:32 and 5:33, tying these parts together as a single unit. The Traditionalist reads the passage which proceeds from the current point as a list of punishments to be meted out by him against those who withstand his militarised efforts to impose upon them a religion found nowhere in the Qur'an. A more careful reading of the Qur'an would have revealed to him the fact that the punishments listed here are associated exclusively in the text he claims as his foundational scripture with men in rebellion against God ('kill [without right]': 2:61, 3:21, 17:33; 'they be crucified': cf. 4:157, 7:124, 12:41, 26:49; 'their hands and feet be cut off on alternate sides': cf. 7:124, 26:49; 'they be banished from the land': cf. 2:84-85, 7:82, 27:56). By imposing such punishments upon those who withstand his attempts to improve them, the Traditionalist aligns himself with those who form the subjects of the verses cited. See note to the present verse below.
5:33[2] Grammar: the four phrases which follow are not plain imperatives despite their treatment by translators. They are statements of fact in the passive and subjunctive mood. The segment lists acts committed by those who war against God and his messenger and strive to spread corruption in the land, not acts to be perpetrated by believers themselves as the Traditionalist claims. See note to the present verse above for corroborating evidence.
5:33[3] I.e. the inhabitants thereof, or the believers themselves.

5:33[5] Arabic: dhālika — that. Sc. is the cause for which We prescribed thus for the children of Israel. See the opening clause of 5:32 which, likewise, employs dhālika. For instances where dhālika clearly implies ellipsis see 22:30, 22:32, 22:60. That the two clauses following the dhālika statement are separate from it is confirmed by the reappearance of an equivalent statement comprising the same components but without dhālika below at 5:41 — which fact also serves to tie the broader narrative together.
5:33[6] I.e. those who commit such acts.
5:34[1] I.e. among those who commit such acts.
5:34[2] My understanding is that believers are required to root out tyranny if they have the power to do so.
5:34[3] I take this statement in two ways. Firstly, that should tyrants repent, we should be willing to accept that at face value — or, at least, on the basis of the evidence. Secondly, that we should know that those poor souls afflicted and killed by tyrants who commit the kind of evil acts just listed will find God 'merciful and forgiving'.

5:35[3] One assumes this, given what precedes, to be an exhortation to root out tyranny.
5:36[1] Arabic: alladhīna kafarū. See note to 2:6 and Notepad II.i. In the context, one must assume this to reference those tyrants whose evil acts are listed above at 5:33.

5:38[1] Famously, certain countries which call themselves Islamic lop off people's hands for instances of theft. Arguments are advanced by some in favour of to cut rather than to cut off in this context, with branding as the punishment, but I do not find the textual support required for it since it is the form I of the verb here (rather than form II such as we find at 12:31 and 12:50.) While I am temperamentally inclined to resist the Traditionalist's fascination with inflicting harm on others, having revisited this question I must concede that he is factually correct in this case: the bare, literal meaning is the operative one — but only within very clear parameters. The Traditionalist, again, makes here one of his commonest mistakes: he has entirely excluded the context. Beginning at 5:33, the context treats of war, of believers under military attack. And those who in such a context steal are either engaged in pillage or plunder or are the very worse kind of opportunists, people whose actions are not only reprehensible in themselves, but also place any military campaign in greater danger than already exists, and create further obstacles to achieving any future state of peace. In such conditions of extremis, wartime thieves are to be instantly punished in the firm and visible manner stated here, both as a punishment and as a deterrent. The context also ensures that those engaged only in the relatively lesser crime of theft in war — without having taken up arms against the believers — are not to be treated as enemy combatants (i.e. killed). According to this reading, chopping off people's hands in any other context is a crime for which the perpetrators will have to answer to God. Cf. 3:7, 12:75.

5:46[3] The collocation which I render throughout 'in (their) footsteps' is identified by Wehr as on (its) track, at (his) heels, after (him); immediately afterwards, presently, thereupon. Thus, one could argue in favour of something which happens directly. Cf. 19:28, note to 3:36 and Notepad XVI and Notepad XVIII.

5:46[4] Lit.: between his hands. I understand this to mean here: what was within his grasp; i.e. what remained to him. See note to 2:66.

5:46[5] Arabic: injīl — generally translated as Gospel based on the assertion that injīl is a corruption or abbreviation of εὐαγγέλιον, euangélion or good news. I have followed this convention, but we need purchase on what is meant by the term. In the earliest account of the four versions Christians accept as canonical, Mark, Jesus preaches 'the gospel of the kingdom of God' (Mark 1:14). There is no further elucidation on the term gospel than that found in Mark. The word gospel occurs a total of eight times in Mark. In the next canonical account to be written, Matthew, Jesus is again preaching 'the gospel of the kingdom' (Matt. 4:23, 9:35). At 24:14 he is most emphatic: 'And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.' The word gospel occurs five times in Matthew. In the next canonical account to be written, Luke, Jesus adds no definition to his use of the word gospel; the term is used as though its sense is understood. The word gospel occurs four times in Luke. In the last canonical account to be written, John, the word gospel occurs nowhere. Thus, in those books claimed as canonical histories of Jesus by the Christians nowhere do we find any elucidation on the word gospel beyond the fact that it pertains to the kingdom of God. We note that the kingdom of God is something Jesus told his followers to pray for, since it forms a key part of the Lord's Prayer, and that the preaching of the kingdom of God is either a prerequisite for — or a signal of — the end of all things (Matt. 24:14). Of course, 'the kingdom of God' is not substantially what Christians mean by gospel, their core conception of gospel being singularly resistant to genuine identification with the words of Jesus. They have adopted Paul's gospel, and expend huge efforts and millions of dollars annually to preach that, and are surprised that the End does not come. (They are not alone in falling for such sleight of hand; Muslims are equally proof against considering their Book on its own terms, having long ago abandoned that endeavour in favour of later compositions and dogmas built thereupon.) What Christians in fact mean by gospel is, of course, a moving target. What, then, does the Qur'an mean by injīl? We find a good example here at 5:46 which yields the facts that the injīl contains 'guidance and light' (which together) confirm what 'Īsā had access to of the Torah, and that it is 'guidance and admonition for those of prudent fear'. A broader review of all contexts reveals the following: the injīl is mentioned at 3:3, 3:48, 3:65, 5:66, 5:68, 5:110 in one breath with the Torah — from which we deduce a high correlation between the two; at 7:157 we find something written (both in the Torah and the injīl) — from which we infer the injīl to be something written (either extant, or lost in whole or in part); at 9:111 God promises the believers the Garden in return for their lives and their wealth (as a promise binding upon God in the Torah and the injīl and the Qur'an) — thus, like both the Torah and the Qur'an, the injīl contains at its heart a commitment on the part of the believer to put the Hereafter before the present life; and at 48:29 the injīl is mentioned in relation to that parable which has survived to us as the parable of the mustard seed (which itself references the Kingdom of Heaven as an inner realm within a man which begins as something insignificant but grows to dominance within the soul
